MODEL INCUBATORS and BROODERS

The Model Incubator is Substantial, Reliable and Automatic

It is designed to Incubate eggs and it does it successfully.

That it stands pre-eminent as a successful hatcher is evidenced by the market poultrymen adopting it exclusively—the men who are in the business for a livelihood.

A valuable new feature for 1905 is a New Thermostat, the actuating principle of the heat regulator, which gives off an unusually large amount of movement, and is as sensitive and accurate as a thermometer.

William H. Truslow, of Stroudsburg, Pa., one of the country's largest duck breeders, writes of it:—"The new thermostat is a wonder."

The New Thermostat. Patent applied for.

The Model Brooders are the most successful chicken rearers.

Other brooders rear chicks successfully sometimes, but the Model Brooders rear all the chicks every time.

D. Lincoln Orr, President of The American Poultry Association, writes of it:—"I think you have the right idea in a brooder It does the work to my entire satisfaction." Send for descriptive catalogue and testimonials.

To say that the Walden Show was a success is putting it mildly for it certainly came up to a high standard in the quality of its exhibits and considering that the hall was not large enough and that the association did not have coops enough, but had to fix up a lot of them as best they could it can easily be classed as one of the best shows of the year. If this show had been cooped like some of the big shows are it would have been as pretty a show as one could wish to see. Although Walden is not a large town the attendance seemed to be good and considerable interest seemed to be taken in the show by the people of the town.

The visiting fanciers were well and liberally treated by the officers of the Association and the people of the town. Altogether we were well pleased with our visit to Walden and the Poultry Show held there.

HENRY R. INGALLS.

WHICH IS THE BEST BREED?

One of the most common questions I am called upon to answer in the course of my work is, "Which breed of fowls is the best?" or "Which particular breed do you recommend me to keep?" Like many other questions, it is impossible to answer it directly, since it would only be misleading to name any breed. In order to reply satisfactorily to such a question, it is necessary to know what the conditions are under which the birds will have to live, and also what branch of the industry is to be selected—whether that for the production of eggs, table birds, sittings, or stock birds. Even when these particulare are known, it is not always safe to mention any one breed, as there are several other matters that must be taken into consideration. I shall therefore briefly discuss a few points relative to a bird's value, and thereby perhaps assist some who are keeping wrong breeds, or who are not succeeding as they deserve.

In determining a bird's economic value, almost as much importance must be attached to the strain as to the breed itself. This is a matter seldom considered; yet on the strain a great deal depends. I can perhaps make my meaning clearer by an illustration. About eight years ago two breeders living in close proximity each purchased a cock and eight hens of the black Minorca breed. Both pens came from the same man, and thus their qualities were practically identical. One breeder set himself to improve the breed's already excellent laying powers, and during the eight years has carefully bred and selected with that object. He only bred from his best layers and those producing large eggs, and, moreover, by breeding he has made them into tolerably good winter layers. The other breeder, on the contrary, decided to improve their poor meat qualities, and he, too, carefully bred and selected with that end in view. He was quite indifferent to the egg-producing powers of his flock, as long as their breasts were well developed and they lent themselves readily to fattening. The result is that today he possesses a flock of Black Minorcas which are by no means good layers, but are very good indeed on the table. Both breeders possess black Minorcas, but they differ as much in economic qualities as though they were entirely separate varieties.

From this illustration the importance of strain will be gathered, and thus it is necessary, when purchasing stock birds for any definite purpose, to procure them only from really reliable breeders who have made a specialty of one or more qualities. It would be possible in the course of one season with unsuitable mating to spoil the work of many years. Unless in-breeding is adopted—a system by no means recommended—it is necessary to procure from time to time fresh male birds, and it behooves everyone to buy only from reliable breeders.

A point very rarely considered in selecting a breed is the amount of food the birds consume. It is, however, a matter of more importance than one might suppose. A series of interesting experiments were conducted some years ago by a Frenchman, Mons. Lemoine, regarding the amount of food consumed by the chief English and French breeds. Without going fully into the results of this experiment, attention to one or two or the breeds will repay. Taking the two extremes first, it was found that the Cochin on the one hand, a large heavily boned and feathered bird, ate as much as 17 oz. of food a day, whereas the Leghorn, on the contrary, required under 5 oz. to keep it in health and vigor. The birds were all kept under the same set of conditions,no one variety being able to obtain more natural food than another. Say, for example, it costs, according to the above calculation, four shillings a year for a Leghorn, it would cost a very much larger amount to feed a Cochin, which would correspondingly reduce the profit. And it must be remembered that the Leghorn, although a poorer bird for table purposes, produces a very much greater number of eggs. The silver-grey Dorking and the Houdan consumed nearly 7 oz., the black red Game and the Hamburghs a little over 4 oz., and the Langshan slightly more than 7 oz.

What I have said regarding the amount of food consumed by the different breeds in the preceding paragraph must not have too much importance attached to it, because it is perhaps somewhat of a minor consideration. If a bird is especially suitable to a certain locality, although it may be a larger eater, it would pay better to keep it than devote one's attention to another breed, one that did not thrive as well in the same circumstances. Albeit every practical poultry-keeper knows well how great a bane the corn dealer's account is, and if this can be reduced, retaining the same production of eggs or an equal rapidity of development, the balance on the right side at the end of the year will be increased. It is important, however, not to starve the birds, as such is false economy.

The climate and soil are too important factors in considering which breed pays best. If the locality in which one is living is damp, or if the soil is composed of clay, the white-legged varieties would probably prove unsuitable, and it would be folly attempting to rear such a breed as the Dorking. Moreover, turkeys would not thrive in such a place, as damp is fatal to success as far as this branch of the industry is concerned. Turkeys require dryness, and a soil the opposite to heavy, and to attempt keeping them elsewhere would be courting disaster. Speaking generally, the yellow-legged rares of fowls thrive better on clay soil, and are more able to withstand the effects of damp. Geese do well on heavy land, and in a less degree so do ducks.

The best soil for poultry is undoubtedly a medium loam, with a gravel subsoil, and upon such all breeds answer well. The worst soil of all is sand, as practically no insect life abounds therein, and following this comes clay. If the fowls are to live in a very exposed position, then a hardy breed must be selected, among which class white Leghorns, Redcaps, Scots Greys and buff Orpingtons occupy first place. I have visited some very cold, bleak, exposed situations up and down the country, but I have never yet come across any place where at any rate the first three mentioned breeds would not thrive well. If the situation is sheltered, and spring and summer eggs are required, black Minorcas would probably answer best; or if chickens for the table are to be produced, dark or silver grey Dorkings would be the best breed to select. When the conditions are unfavorable to poultry-keeping, a first cross would in all likelihood pay the best, as the act of crossing makes the chickens hardier and better able to withstand the climate and local conditions.

When eggs for hatching or stock birds are being produced with a view to disposal in the autumn, a popular variety must be chosen. As in other branches of life, there are fashions in poultry, and birds that a few seasons ago were in great demand are now practically never asked for. During the past few years, for instance, the craze has been for buff Orpingtons,and the demand in many cases has far exceeded the supply. The rush is now, however, largely over, and as far as I am able to judge there will be a great sale this autumn for white Wyandottes. This is mainly owing to the fact that this variety has been successful during the past two years in procuring the prize in the Laying Competition. It certainly is a splendid breed. If, therefore, one is going in for selling hatching eggs or stock birds, it is necessary to watch the demand, and breed accordingly. However good a strain one may possess of, say, Brahmas, there would be little use in breeding a very large number, or in producing large quantities of eggs, because the demand is so limited. Take the climatic conditions well into consideration, and then choose a breed for which there is a good and steady sale.

PARTRIDGE WYANDOTTE CLUB MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Partridge Wyandotte club was held at Brockton, Mass., Dec. 1st, 1904. There was only a moderate attendance. The books show the club in a good financial condition. The following officers were elected: President, J. B. Hadaway, Brockton, Mass.; 1st vice pres., E. G. Wyckoff, Ithaca, N. Y.; 2nd vice pres., C. F.Early, E. Palatine, Ohio; 3rd vice pres., C. H. Brundage, Danbury, Conn.; sec. and treas., W. Jackman, Gloucester, Mass.; club judges, H. J. Manley, Maplewood, Mass.; G. V. Fletcher, Belmont, Mass.; F. W. Rogers, Brockton, Mass.; Eugene Sites, Elyria, Ohio.; C. F. Early, E. Palatine, Ohio; W. A. Doolittle, Sabetha, Kansas; F. A. Kellar, Tionesta, Pa. During the meeting a telegram was received from the secretary of the Boston Poultry Association, saying they would offer $100 championship challenge cup for best Partridge Wyandotte male. The members then voted to give a cup for best female,and shape and color medals and ribbons, members only to compete. Membership fee, $1.00, to secretary, W. Jackman, Gloucester, Mass.

BRONZE TURKEYS AT HERALD SQUARE.

Editor American Fancier:

1st prize Bronze pullet a fairly good bird, not so large in size as 3rd prize pullet; poor in lacing on breast and back, short in body. 3rd prize pullet a good one, easy winner of first. Only defect a little edging on primaries feathers, otherwise a grand good bird all round. 5th prize pullet should have been placed second and an easy winner. 1st prize young B. Tom a very large bird, poor in wing and long tail coverts, poor in shape; later will develop into a better shaped bird. 2nd prize young tom a better tom than first, fully as large; not developed same as first. 3rd prize young B.Tom not quite so large as first and second, but has plenty of size and bone is an easy winner of first prive; a very brilliant bird in plumage, a grand wing not equalled in show room, and tail and tail coverts as near perfection as ever was produced. This young Tom is one of the best shaped birds I ever saw at this time of year, and when fully matured will be as near perfection as ever was produced.

OLEAN POULTRY ASSOCIATION.

The Olean Poultry Association will hold a show at Olean, N. Y., on Jan. 18-21, 1905, J. Y. Bicknell, judge. Many new members have been added to the association, and the prospects of a good show were never brighter.

BOSTON PREMIUM LIST MAILED.

The largest edition of a premium list ever issued by the Boston Poultry Association was mailed the last of this week. So great was the demand for the premium lists this year that there was not enough to supply the names on the mailing list so that some of the regular exhibitors of this show will have to wait a few days until a second edition of the premium list can be printed. All persons who write for premium lists after this date would confer a favor if they would mention the classes in which they wish to make entries and the class numbers with entry blanks will then be mailed immediately and the premium lists later. The entries close Dec. 31 and all entries should be forwarded as much earlier as possible. For all information address the secretary, S. H. Roberts, Box 800, Pawtucket, R. I.

CORRECTION.

Editor American Fancier:—In report of Herald Square Show I notice you have me credited with winning 3rd pen R .C. White Orpingtons. This should be S. C. White Orpingtons. I do not breed the rose comb variety. By publishing the correction you will greatly oblige IRVING CROCKER.

Dec. 12 1904.

BRIDGETON, N. J.

The first show was held Nov. 23-24. A success from both show and financial view. While not large in total entries, quite all varieties and sub-varieties were exhibited.

The American classes were in the lead, White Wyandottes leading with 65 in classes and a display of cock and 8 hens, not competing, by A. L.Sparks of Swainton, N. J. W. P. Rocks next in number close up.

The character of exhibits was good in general and in many cases most excellent, a surprise and revelation, considering that with all these good birds about Bridgeton, few exhibitors from this section exhibit at other shows. A case of the "light under the bushel." Judging was done by W. J. Stanton of New York. White Rocks were judged by M. F. Delano, who also judged some other classes. White Wyandottes by A. L. Sparks, Swainton, N. J. These two gentlemen gave their services along the good cause. There was a large attendance from the adjoining counties, the visitors expressing their surprise and pleasure at the completeness of arrangements, efficiency of the management and excellence of exhibits. The awards:

PLYMOUTH ROCK.

"During one of my visits through the country districts," said the professor, "I happened to reach a small village where they were to have a flag raising at the school house. After the banner had been 'flung to the breeze,' there was an exhibition of drawings which the pupils had made and of the work they had done during the year.

"The teacher recited to them the landing of the Pilgrims, and after she had finished she requested each pupil to try and draw from his or her imagination a picture of Plymouth Rock.

"Most of them went to work at once, but one little fellow hesitated, and at length raised his hand.

"'Well, Willie, what is it?' asked the teacher.

"'Please, ma'am, do you want us to draw a hen or a rooster?' "—Philadelphia Press.

BILL OF SALE.

This is to certify that I have sold to Mr. Nate K. Cornwall of Thamesville, Ontario, Canada, my good will and entire stock of Buff Leghorns.

Among the birds sold are all my 1904 New York winners and their sire and dam,also my entire stock of young and old birds.

I believe these birds added to Mr. Cornwall's stock, which are purely my strain. gives him the finest collection of Buff Leghorns in the world to-day and I gladly recommend all my old patrons to send their future orders to him. HARRY M. LAMON, Watertown, N. Y., Nov. 18, 1904.

B. B. R. GAME BANTAMS LOST.

Editor American Fancier: I sent 3 B. B. Red Game Bantams securely boxed to the late Herald Square Show, but have been informed that the cockerel was not cooped and that there was a stray cock around there. Now what has become of my bird? Has any exhibitor in the same class got him by mistake? If so I should be glad to hear from him. This bird was no slouch and would have given a good account of himself. I therefore not only lose my bird but the credit of whatever he was entitled to in the matter of ribbons.

GETTING ACQUAINTED.

Through the poultry literature we become familiar with the names of many fanciers whom we have no personal acquaintance with. Hence I suggest that every visiting fancier at our prominent shows wear a badge with his name and the variety he or she breeds printed in large type, thus making it easy to recognize each other. What think you, brother fanciers? Will you do so at Madison Square?

WEED AT HERALD SQUARE.

Buff Wyandottes have already been passed upon, but will say they were a good even lot of birds.

Houdans.—The finest display of this variety I ever saw in a show room. It seems strange that so many can not see past the beard and crest of a Houdan, forgetting that it is their body and breast development that is the chief cause of their popularity.

Hamburgs.—Small classes, with no world beaters among them.

$300,000,000 IN POULTRY

Do you know that the government census of 1900 gives the value of the poultry produced in that year at very nearly $300,000,000? POULTRY SUCCESS, the 20th Century Poultry Magazine, is absolutely indispensable to every one interested in chickens, whether they be begnners, experienced poultry raisers or only keep a few hens. It is, without any question, the foremost poultry monthly in this country and readers of its articles on pure bred chicks and their better care and keeping have come to realize it is a plain truth. "There's money n a hen."

Regular subscription price 50 cents. 36 to 80 pages; beautifully illustrated, handsomely printed on fine book paper.

Special Introduction Offers: If you keep chickens or are in any way interested in them, we will send Poultry Success one year for only 25 cents and include a large illustrated practical poultry book free; or three months trial for three two cent stamps. Sample copy free. Address to-day.

999 QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

By FRANK HECK

The Latest and Best Book on Success with Fowls

Questions on winning in the show room, giving methods employed by professional and expert exhibitors. These are sure to help you win. Questions about mating the breeding birds that will help you raise winners. Questions about incubators and natural incubation, diseases, feeding, houses and fixtures. It contains more than a thousand important questions with answers, covering all branches of the business. It contains more general information about poultry, both for exhibition and market, than any other two books ever written and this knowledge and instruction is placed before the reader in just the shape he desires it and in a form most helpful to both amateur and expert. The reader is not compelled to go over a lot of unnecessary comment to get one point as is usually the case. Every line in the book is interesting, because it means something and says it in plain language and in the fewest words. With this book in your possession, you have answers to the questions arising in your mind just at the time you want them, and what is of more importance, it will present vital questions to you, many of which you will otherwise learn by expensive experience.

It contains 150 pages, is handsomely bound, printed on good paper with fine large type, easy to read. In order to thoroughly introduce it, the price for a limited time will be 50 cents per copy, the regular price being $1.00. A fair idea of its great value to those interested in poultry cannot be formed without a careful perusal of its pages. It is sold with the distinct understanding and positive guarantee that if not as represented, or if purchaser thinks it is not worth the price, the amount paid for it will be promptly refunded upon immediate return of the book in good condition. We will send the book promptly upon receipt of 50 cents.

GEYER'S SCURVY CURE FOR POULTRY was the first article introduced to the public for this purpose, which has been thoroughly tested in the last ten years by many of our brother fanciers who are willing to say with us that there is no other article on the market like this that can be relied on to do its work properly. It is something that the poultry fancier, who appreciates his fine birds, needs very much. What looks more disgraceful than a fine flock of chickens, many, or all of them, having their legs coated with a thick, hard, scabby crust which is called scurvy? It spoils the appearance of the birds and is very annoying to them. It is also contagious. Here we have a sure cure for this ugly disease. By following the directions we guarantee that it will take off that ugly, hard coat and leave the legs clean and smooth and give them their natural color. It also has no equal for healing sores and frosted combs and wattels. It makes them very bright and red. It is just what the exhibitor wants to prepare his birds for the exhibition room. Some of our customers tell us that they have tried it with good results for weak legs. We only ask you to give it a trial. It is put up in tin boxes. Money must accompany all orders. Price, 25 cents. Address, G. A. Geyer, Florin, Pa. 56tf

VOL. XXIII. NO. 590. JOHNSTOWN, NEW YORK, DECEMBER 24, 1904. PRICE FIVE CENTS

Stamford, Conn.

Connecticut's Big Show a Success.

Light Brahmas.—1st cock and 1st hen grand types, in color and shape, and up to the ideal. Rest of the classes fair.

Buff Cochins—Only two birds shown, a good pair.

Partridge Cochins.—Fair classes.

Barred Plymouth Rocks.—43 Singles and 3 pens with good quality all through. 1st cock a clear cut bird with good straight barring; 2nd very close, a trifle dark. 1st hen very large, well shaped, wide barring; 2nd, great color, but not so well finished as 1st. 1st cockerel a stunner; uniform barring in every section and a hard one to beat; 2nd, good barring, but too light in color. 1st pullet, ahead of the whole class in every respect, in general make-up and color a gem. Rest of class very good. 1st pen a fine one, well mated and sound color; 2nd pen contained 2 pullets very close to 1st pullet in open class.

White Plymouth Rocks.—1st cock a corker, winner of special for whitest bird in show. 1st hen grand in body shape, lacks in head and tail. Cockerels a very strong class. 1st pullet another grand bird, especially fine in head points and superfine in shape of tail; generally good in every other point. 1st pen nice white birds.

Buff Rocks.—1st cock, too dark in surface color, but very even throughout, both under and surface color, no white in any section, good shape, except in breast. The rest of class showed white and uneven coloring throughout. 1st hen very fair; the rest of the class ordinary. 1st cockerel a very smooth, well developed individual, nice comb and head points in wings, primaries and secondaries, A No. 1 in color, somewhat off in back and shoulder color, having a tendency to lighten up; fair in tail, in shape somewhat too short up in back and a bit low on legs. 2nd ckl very even in color and almost a true golden buff; fails in comb and poor in general shape; is yet undeveloped. 3rd ckl fine little bird, has a winning chance at later shows; the rest of the class out-classed. A crackerjack class of pullets, 14 in number. 1st pullet winning on uniformity of color of surface and undercolor and nice shape and grand head points, but a shade darker throughout than standard color. The rest of class grand birds in surface color, but very light in undercolor, and in shape somewhat undeveloped, an unplaced bird winning surface color special being very even from tip to tail, of the desirable shade of buff. 1st pen a grand, well mated pen as to general color, the 4 females as 4 twins; other pens ordinary.

Partridge Rocks.—Small class, good birds.

S. C. R. I. Reds.—1st cock a typical bird of the breed, both in shape and surface color and under color; tendency to white in neck and wings; 2nd cock a good bird. 1st hen nice,bright colored bird, but too chunky in shape; 2nd hen out of condition. 1st cockerel fair color, immature bird, other fair. 1st pullet good. 1st pen great females and very even in color, well mated.

R. C. R. I. Reds.—1st cockerel very nice, well developed, good colored bird, tendency to Wyandotte shape; in fact, the class had that tendency. Pullets fair.

Silver Wyandottes.—1st cock a clear silver, well laced and of good shape. 1st hen very well laced and good shape. 1st ckl very well laced, a trifle brassy, but a good Wyandotte in shape, rest of the class poor in lacing and shape. 1st pullet well developed, good lacing; 2nd pullet better laced, but loses in shape and very immature. 1st pen fair.

Golden Wyandottes.—Great, grand classes,the winners in every class having no easy win. Winning females especially fine in shape and very clear in lacing; many splendid unplaced birds in every class.

Columbian Wyandottes.—Very nice representatives of the breed in every class.

Partridge Wyandottes.—Cocks all of sound surface color, winners good Wyandotte types. 1st hen nice color and heavy Wyandotty in shape,perhaps too much so; rest of class fair. Other class moderate in quality.

Silver Pen. Wyandottes.—Good colored classes.

White Wyandottes.—1st cock an old war-horse and an easy winner;a grand type. 1st hen splendid. 1st ckl winning on shape throughout. 1st pullet, an easy winner. 1st pen, very white, but immature;other pens very creamy, fair shape, and condition not of the best.

Buff Wyandottes—Nice even classes, but too dark in surface generally.

Black Javas.—1st pen, having legs full of stubs and almost solid white ear lobes; disqualified of course.

Mottled Javas.—The best colored birds shown anywhere in years, being white where white should be and black the same, with black slightly predominating.

S. C. Buff Orpingtons.—As a class throughout, a Cook showing as to quality. A fair cock for 1st and very nice hen winning first. Ckls fair, 1st and 2nd pullet nice birds; 1st pen good. All classes showing virility and stamina above the ordinary as generally shown.

R. C. Brown Leghorns.—Good quality, better than single combs. 1st pullet fine in back, although a bit too dark.

S. C. Brown Legorns.—Not much to say, except why don't S. C. Brown Leghorn breeders get together and try to raise birds that are up to the other classes shown? A word to the wise is sufficient. Get a hustle on.

S. C. White Leghorns.—One grand class throughout. 1st pen a dandy. 1st and 2nd ckls, peaches without the cream. 1st pullet away ahead of class. 1st hen very nice, but a bit too long.

R. C. White Leghorns.—This class needs tending to. Red lobes and poor combs.

S. C. Buff Leghorns.—A good class throughout.

R. C. Buff Leghorns.—The same.

Lakenvelders—A coming breed without a doubt, shown here by enthusiasts, and the quality here shown proves that enthusiasm is the mainspring to success.

S. C. Black Minorcas.—Fair class throughout.

R. C. Black Minorcas.—1 pair of splendid birds.

W. C. Black Polish.—A splendid lot, but evidently the exhibitor was not on to his job by the looks of the awards and the lack of awards.

Golden Polish.—A good lot.

Hamburgs.—Nearly all varieties represented by fair birds.

Houdans.—A great class in color,but lacking size and shape. W. H. C.

STAMFORD SIFTINGS.

Stamford, Conn., always puts up a good article in the show line. This year was no exception to the rule,and while the entries were not quite as large as in former years, owing, no doubt, to the short time the management had to prepare for it, the quality was A1 and in some of the classes was on a par with the big shows. Next year Stamford promises to outdo all former efforts, and the members of the association are abundantly qualified to make good their promise. The cooping was in charge of Clayton & Freeman of the Nutmeg Cooping Co. and their clean and attractive cages added much to the fine appearance of the show.

It was surprising to see the quality displayed in the White and Barred Rocks. While Brundage Bros. showed a fine line of male birds in Barred Rocks,Sound Beach Poultry Yds. came with a corking string of females, each winning silver cups galore.

C. S. Purdy captured the $25.00 Silver cup for most numbers of first premiums won. As a breeder of Buff, White and Black Cochin Bantams, he is a proposition hard to meet.

Buff Orpingtons held their own with good classes. Purley C. Butterfield on 4 entries made a fine showing, winning 2 ckl, 1-2 pullet and 1 pen. His pullets were certainly beautiful birds.

That the Lakenfelders are gaining in popularity is very evident by the interest manifested by the breeders and the general public. The Newfield Farms are direct importers of the hustling birds and the fine showing made by them in Herald Square and Stamford marks them as one of the foremost breeders of this particular breed.

The fine exhibit of White Rocks made by H. W. Strong is a credit to any show. His winning cockerels were simply grand and his first pullet a gem and as fine a shaped bird as we have seen this year.

GAMES AND GAME BANTAMS AT BIRMINGHAM ENGLAND.

The great Game and Game Bantam show is held annually at Birmingham, England. To win a place at this function is the highest possible honor a Game fancier covets. Many of our readers are deeply interested in the awards at this exhibition and we take pleasure in reprinting from our esteemed English contemporary, Poultry, the following:

MODERN GAME. Judges, Mr. H. Ainscough, black reds and duckwings; R. Corless, other varieties. Birmingham is the show par excellence for Modern Game, and one rarely sees or expects to see anything but classical stuff at the fixture. Some of the old hands present could talk about days and shows when birds were penned that could run away with anything shown to-day, but one must allow something for these old warriors' tales. We have seen a few Birmingham shows, and have handled one or two of the old cracks, but, looking at the birds penned here, we came to the conclusion that, taking them all round, they were a lot that have seldom been surpassed, even at Birmingham. Black Red cock (21): sp, 1, 2, vhc, Garne, three "stormers," all fit, reachy, and stylish clean limbs, good snakey,looking heads, 1st shortest in body, 2nd best whipped up behind; 3, Webster, bright top, good legs and feet, loses condition; 4, Bothway, not such good color, good style,longer body; r, Mills; vhc, Fowler; hc, Widdas, Bell, Fowler; c Tompins R. G. Heaton. Hen (17): 1 hc, Mills, very fit, good hard short feather, clean thighs, level color, good shoulders, reachy; 2, 3, Widdas, 2nd grand color and shape, not as tight as the winner, 3rd very smart, but looked narrow in front; 4, Garne, big tall hen, best of shoulders and shape, trifle soft in feather; r, Webster; vhc, c, Major Terry; hc, Mille, Bell; c, Fowler. Cockerel (39): sp, 1, 2, hc (2), Fowler, all "clinkers," 1st very smart, good straight bone, clean thighs, very fit, good in black, might be better or brighter on top, 2nd very reachy, and good shape, color hardly up yet; 3, 6, Shepherd, 3rd good reach, well built, should improve; 6th good quality, but not as strong on his pins; 4, r, hc, c, Mills, good stamp, promising, not ready; 5, Garne, good bone, stylish color, not up yet; 7, Stuart Heaton; vhc, Tompins, Widdas, Garne; hc, Widdas, Garne; c, Tompins, Widdas, Bothway. Pullet (50): sp, Ainscough £31 10c. challenge cup, 2, vhc (2), hc (2), Widdas, all fit and as good as they are bred, 1st and 2nd being very much alike in type and color, good short feather, stylish, plenty of reach, good shaped legs and feet; 3, 6, r, vhc, hc (2), Mills, the two former as good as any in shape, style,and reach,and clean whipped up, but beaten by color, r bird as good as most; 4, Wishart, short feather, good clean limbs, very taking; 5, McKinnon, good reach and smart looking, trifle long back; c, Fowler. Brown Red cock (6): 1, 2, r, hc, F. W. Smith, four beauties, 1st very bright color, grand breast, 2nd not so clean on thighs, but well worth his place; 3, 4, Firth, good ones, well beaten by color, 4th too long backed. Hen (8): sp, 1, Golledge, grand body color, nice clear lacing on breast, good bright hackle; 2, 3, 4, vhc, F. W. Smith, 2nd good hackle, not quite sound on back, 3rd better color, but not so good shape, 4th not quite fit at present; r, vhc, Firth. Cockerel (15): sp, £20 challenge cup, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, hc, F. W. Smith, almost a clean sweep, all well placed, 1st extra smart, grand color, clean whipped, as fine as they are bred, 2nd grand breast, not quite ready on top, 3rd hardly ready, 4th darker hackle, 5th clean limbed, good color all over, 6th not quite ready; 7, hc, Thornton, good color shade, long body, good reach, head and eye; r, vhc, Firth. Pullet (11): £20 challenge cup, 1, 2, 3, 6, vhc, hc, F. W. Smith, 1st A1 color and shape, tail and smart looking, 2nd good shape and style,beaten on breast, 3rd very tall and shapely, beaten by color, 6th a beauty when ready; 4, 5, vhc, Firth, 4th good shape, style, and face, not such clear color on top as some, 5th some day will make a good one, not ready yet; r, Thornton, vhc, Wilkinson. Duckwing cock (10): 1, Taylor, tallest, very smart looking, clean whipped up, good head, sound eye, bright clean color; 2, Coe, Staveley, very fit, good color and shape;3, c, Stuart Heaton, plenty of reach, good bone, beaten by color; 3, H. G. Heaton; c, Keen. Hen (7): 1, hc, c, Stuart Heaton, 1st grand stamp, good shoulders, well staged, A1 color; 2, r, Mills, not so tall, good shape and style, might have better color; 3, Taylor, full of quality, smart behind; hc Goodwin. Cockerel (19): sp, £15 challenge cup, 2, 4, 5, 6, Stuart Heaton, a good team, very fit, stylish, and lots of reach, clean whipped up, 2nd close up, 4th beaten by color, 6th good col-

WHICH IS THE BEST BREED?

The greatest developments during the next few years will undoubtedly be in the production of winter eggs, than which there is no more lucrative branch of poultry-keeping. If we are to get the best results from our fowls, it is necessary that they shall produce a goodly proportion of their eggs during the winter months, when they are scarce and consequently dear. As far as profit is concerned, it is better to keep a breed that lays one hundred eggs during the winter months than one that lays, say, a hundred and fifty during the warmer and more plentiful season of the year. The heavy breeds, those belonging to the general purpose class, are the best for this purpose, while the lighter and smaller varieties, those of the laying or non-sitting class, are the poorest. White Wyandottes and Buff Orpingtons are both first-class winter layers, while black Orpingtons and Langshans rank second. All the winter layers produce eggs tinted in color, unfortunately of a somewhat small size. In this direction they might be vastly improved by careful breeding and selection.

Incidentally I may remark that, although winter eggs depend largely upon the breed, upon the conditions under which they are kept, and upon the strain, most important of all is the time of the year when the chickens are hatched. The birds, as far as possible, should commence to lay during the first half of November, and if this can be attained the problem is almost solved. If the pullets commence much before this date they will probably leave off immediately the cold weather comes on, while if they do not commence by this time, the great likelihood is that they will not begin till well into the following year. It is impossible to lay down any hard and fast rule, as regards this, but generally speaking the birds belonging to the general purpose class should be brought out during February and March in order to come into lay the following autumn.

There is always a ready sale for chickens for fattening, and excellent prices are procurable from the fatteners in Surrey and Sussex for well developed and suitable birds. If a good price is to be obtained it is absolutely necessary for one or two points to be borne in mind. First of all, the chickens must possess white legs, as only a poor price can be procured for yellow specimens. The color of the flesh is determined by the color of the legs, and as there is a strong prejudice in this country against yellow flesh for table purposes, the poulterers will not buy such if they can avoid doing so. If, through scarcity, they do purchase them it is at greatly reduced prices. Another thing to bear in mind is that the breastbones shall be perfectly straight, long and deep, in order that a large amount of flesh may be carried thereupon. The flesh requires also to be of a good flavor, and soft and tender in texture. As I have already suggested, if the climatic conditions are favorable the Dorking—either the dark or the silver-grey—is the best and most suitable breed to keep. Should the conditions be unfavorable, however, as frequently is the case, it were folly attempting this variety, because failure would be bound to ensue. Failing the Dorking, I think the Faverolles would prove of most service, unless one of the foreign breeds were preferred. The plan I have adopted, however, is to use first crosses for table purposes. The location in which I live is not favorable to the Dorking, and I have found that crosses answer my purpose best. I have had the greatest success with the Indian Game-Buff Orpington, Indian Game-Faverolles, and Faverolles-Buff Orpingtons, and for practical purposes I do not think they can be surpassed.

As a general rule, I think the heavy varieties, those belonging to the general purpose class, are the most profitable for farmers and poultry-keepers to maintain. These breeds combine the two qualities of laying and table, but do not particularly excel in either. They are better layers than the table breeds, but are not as suitable for marketing; they are better upon the table than the laying breeds, but do not produce as many eggs. Between the breeds belonging to this class there is not much to choose, as they are all valuable from an economic standpoint. In all there are four varieties—the Orpington, Wyandotte, Langshan, and Plymouth Rock, and if I may make a distinction in favor of any I should name the buff Orpington and white Wyandotte.

Lastly, there is the point of suitability for confinement. There is a unanimity of opinion that when possible it is advisable to allow the birds almost entire freedom, but, comparatively speaking, only a few are able to do this. Many successful poultry-keepers have only a small amount of land at their disposal, and are unable to allow their birds much freedom. Some breeds can stand confinement well, while others cannot, being of a wilder disposition. Some fowls are great foragers, and are able to obtain almost sufficient food for themselves if allowed the opportunity, and of these Campines and Leghorns are the most noted, but all the laying or non-sitting varieties excel more or less in this direction. As a rule, I have found that the general purpose varieties stand confinement best.—T. Brown, in Poultry, England.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1904.

The report of the Augusta show, which appeared in our last issue, was written by G. O. Brown, associate editor of The American Fancier. Mr. Brown was also judge at this famous southern show, but his natural modesty prevented the announcement by his pen. We are glad to supply the above facts in order to set our handsome confrere right before the public.

We also call attention to Baron Arthur O. Schilling's new design for Mr. Brown's column. It is a fine piece of work, and while it makes the editor and George Howell rather jealous of Brown's good looks, both of us can extend to Artist Schilling the right hand of good fellowship and compliment him on his work.

The New York Sun of December 19, states that the entries at the Madison Square Garden show, New York, are record breakers. Furthermore, the same paper states that one of the attractions will be a "cock-fight." But not in the sense of the term accepte by cockers. It is proposed to hav some game cocks battle for supremac; the same as men box in athletic club viz.: with gloves. The gloves in thi case will be rather misnomers. It i: proposed to put "muffs" on the spur: and "nipples" on the beaks, so tha the birds cannot injure each other "i the pit." We suggest that "Old Hat' Hetfield, the champion cocker of New Jersey, act as referee.

We are in receipt of the Boston show premium list. It is a very instructive and valuable piece of work. It bears the ear-marks of progress and indicates a greater and larger show at Boston than was ever held in the "City of Notions." But "the men are behind the guns" in the Hub, so look out for a record breaker. Entries close December 31. Those who have not received lists can get copies by addressing Samuel H. Roberts, Sec., Pawtucket, R. I.

The "Big Rochester Show" follows New York and will be run on the same lines as in the past. The Flower City Poultry and Pet Stock Association has extablished a reputation in conducting high class shows that will endure as long as the present managemet exists.

The following will prove of interest to pure food advocates:

Washington, Dec. 15.—The Secretary of Agriculture to-day issued the following statement:

"This department has made examinations of invoices of liquid egg (yolk of egg, white of egg or the two together) offered for import into the United States. These food products have been uniformly preserved with boric acid or borax, a substance which the investigations of this department have shown to be injurious to health. Notice is hereby given to importers that the Secretary of the Treasury has been requested to refuse admission of food products consulated subsequent to Dec. 15, 1904."

Good. Now, if it is in order, what can the government do regarding the sale of explosive eggs, i. e., hen fruit of ancient, albeit honorable, parentage, that has become a storage battery in the hands of the "honest farmer" and "guileless groceryman?" We believe "old boric acid" is a lovely caramel compared with the bi-sulphite of carbon scent emitted from a broken storage nest egg.

We are indebted to Dr. Little of Glens Falls, N. Y., for a very handsome sterling silver souvenir spoon, commemorating the 46th anniversary of his professional career as a physician. It has been sent to his patients and friends, with hearty Christmas wishes and greetings for the new year. It is a work of art. The design was made by Dr. A. H. Phelps, a staunch friend of Dr. Little's, and it illustrates beautifully the character and life-work of one of the finest students of nature. Dr. Little has been a "globe trotter;" he has seen about every accessible country, and is passionately and earnestly devoted to everything rare and beautiful, be it flowers, animals or birds. It is to such broad-minded, well-educated lovers of nature that all admirers of old Dame Nature's products look for inspiration. The ork of such men is far-reaching, alcit seldom noticed in the everyday isy life. The American Fancier, rough the writer of these notes, exnds to Dr. Little its sincere appreiation of the gift and, above all, the indly cheer that accompanies it, and rusts that he may enjoy the good and nselfish work he has done in the past, or many years to come.

The Walden show proved such a big uccess that at a meeting held by the Vallkill Valley and Hudson River Poultry Association at Walden, N. Y., December 8, it was decided to hold anther show December 5 to 8, 1905, at he same place.

Our associate Gotham editor, Mr. Howell, made a pretty good point on Wyandotte type when referring to the Partridge Wyandotte male that sold for over 800 dollars in England. If some modern Wyandotte breeders will go back to real Wyandotte type of the famous Silvers twenty years ago, they will find that beef and coarseness are foreign to the real beautiful and finely rounded Wyandotte. As one old-timer remarked to us some three years ago, when looking over White Wyandottes at a big show: "Hm, guess they want white turkeys now as long as the plumage is white!"

When the new standard is in force, Wyandotte fanciers and breeders will realize the importance of that great point in a Wyandotte, viz.: the curves. Furthermore, the compactness of body will strike their fancy. A Wyandotte is not a heavy, beefy fowl; it is a meaty, well-balanced piece of fowldom, as compact as a Cayuga duck and just as meaty, when compared with coarser framed and larger varieties.

The attempt to get birds over standard weight, to brag about it and call attention to the size has not helped the Wyandotte a particle. An ideal bird is one of standard weight. Get above that and the finer lines begin to disappear and a coarser type takes the place, without any corresponding increase in the fine meaty qualities. Quality must be bred in a flock; beef can be purchased at any market for so much per pound.

GREENFIELD SCORE CARD SHOW.

On December 6th and 7th I attended the Greenfield score card show. The latter is perhaps different from any other show in America: no one can exhibit unless a member. There is really no entry fee, but the cost of the show is charged pro rata to the number of birds shown. The officers are a grand lot of gentlemen and everybody is used right.

The show this year was a success in the best class I have ever seen, some great birds, fit for any show; in the Leghorn classes some very fine birds.

Although the show was not what would be called a large one, it would have paid any fancier to have spent the day at this show. There are very few sections in America where I might say locally such a fine exhibit of birds could be brought together.

WEBB'S WHISPERINGS.

That the Rose Comb Black Minorcas are becoming very popular was shown by the large entry, 22 in the single class. Clarence J. Denton of Round Lake came forward with a fine string of Rose Combs that kept him busy answering questions about their laying qualities, what particular strain they were, etc.

Edgewood Farm, North Grafton, Mass., breeds a very fine quality of Rose Comb Brown Leghorns, Silver Grey and Colored Dorkings. Judging from the excellent exhibit they put up at Springfield, their Leghorns are of the proper type, with grand saddle and hackle in the males and that beautiful shade of seal in the females, quite free from the objectionable shafting. Three Silver Grey Dorking hens scored 93 each, the ribbons were hung up 1-2-3. Mr. Geo. B. Inches, the proprietor, was in a brown study to find out why he had not received three first prizes, as his birds were all cut alike. This is one of the mysteries of the score card.

Friend Blackman was in charge of the Cornell Incubator exhibit, and a great hatch was made during the show. Wemple says Blackman is a scientist and all that is necessry for him to do is to pray for a good hatch.

The Prairie State, Chas. Cyphers Model B and the Cyphers Co. had machines in operation and attracted a great deal of attention during the show.

Buff Rocks, Toulouse and Wild Canada Geese and Pekin Ducks is a combination bred by M. J. Corey of Springfield, Mass. His exhibit in these classes was one of the best in the show and if appearances count for anything, square dealing was stamped in every feature of his face.

1st S.C. Brown Leghorn cock and 1-2-3 pen, shown by Garfield Shaw, were strictly high grade birds. He has a great cockerel lines and knows a thing or two about females. This is his second scoop at Springfield. Look out for No. 3.

G. W. WEBB.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

It is hardly possible to say other than good things about this association, which has just passed its second anniversary so successfully and so satisfactorily. In the first place it is most pleasing to an exhibitor to put his birds in a show where he knows they are wanted, and where he feels himself so welcome and where he receives so many courtesies, both large and small. The management apparently realizes that to get and hold friends and exhibitors, both thoughtfulness and cordiality are two very important factors and in these lines. They are not lacking. It is not a show where an exhibitor knows only himself and his birds, but he is made to feel that he knows everybody and everybody wants to know him. This is due to the ever presence among the alleys of the officers and members of the association. No formal introductions are necessary, simply drop a word of hen talk to the party at your elbow and the spark of acquaintance is immediately struck. This also holds true with a very great majority of the visitors who are mostly people from Springfield and vicinity. They do not come only to see the birds, but are there to help along and further the interests of their association. They are enthusiastic over the show and are interested in the exhibits and help in other ways than financial to the success of the event.

Springfield is a "blue ribbon" for looking after the needs and comfort of the birds and for the care and neatness of the hall. The birds were fed and watered early and late and were kept well suplied the rest of the time. No care or time was spared to keep the crops clear and the sweeprs became almost a nuisance, clearing the floor of the alleys of the sawdust and shavings that had been scratched out of the cages. Mr. Adams, the superintendent is certainly to be congratulated on his unceasing efforts to have things as they should be—right up to top notch. Even in the hustle and bustle of boxing the birds at the close of the show, there was a precision and a system not always prominent on such occasions, and the element of confusion was entirely lacking.

The last point of interest, but by no means the last, is the judging. The list of judges is a strong one, and it would be hard to pick out ten better men than those who officiated in their respective varieties at Springfield. In spite of this, however, there was some pretty strong vernacular used in certain quarters. The general complaint in many classes was that the number of ribbons was exhausted before all the birds had been supplied. This, without doubt, was due to the superexcellent eyesight of the judges. Many good birds stooped to conquer, but fell by the wayside. It was harsh and cruel, but strictly to law; so what is the use to cluck? In general, this "downy pill" was swallowed, but it scraped some long throats to the point of convulsions.

We cannot close without making strong mention of the work of Mr. Smith, the president. and of Sec. Graves. The secretary's work is ordinarily difficult and tiresome, but in a scorecard show it is greatly increased. The untiring efforts of Mr. Graves brought out the cards and ribbons in good season, much to the satisfaction of all concerned. There is but one criticism that can justly be made of the Springfield show, and that is an unavoidable misfortune. The light in the City Hall, the only large hall in the place, is poor both in the daytime and in the evening. This bad feature can not be easily overcome, but we feel sure that should an opportunity ever present itself to hold the show in a better hall the management will not be slow to grasp it.

PHILIP CASWELL.

Mr. Webb, the American Fancier representative at Springfield, sends us the following report: When we emphasized the fact a year ago that Springfield would rank among the big ones in the list of poultry shows we stated the true fact. Last year's show was a big one; this year it was bigger and grander. We have never seen a show run on more business-like principles than this one. Never to our knowledge has a show been fed and watered and the aisles kept as clean as at this one, and too much cannot be said in praise of the able manner in which Walter Adams handled the show. Last year the light was very bad; this year the stained glass windows were removed and temporary clear glass windows were substituted. The Empire Cooping Company caged the show and friend Wemple received many complimentary remarks on the beautiful display, and between the excellent coops and good light, the judging was made more of a pleasure than a task.

The score card system was used again in judging and was not as satisfactory as anticipated. Instead of being enlightening to the breeder, it was more perplexing than ever and the impression we get from the expression of the majority of breeders present was that if Springfield wishes to hold the place she has gained in the ranks of poultry shows, the score card will have to be discarded and a first class comparison show given, where the ribbons are up the first day and exhibitors have a little chance to do some business.

Nearly all varieties were on exhibition. Last year Buff Laced Polish Bantams and Buff Laced Indian Games were brought out by Edwin L. Smith and W. H. Card respectively; this year they showed wonderful improvement and much credit is due the originators of these really beautiful birds. In Asiatics the Light Brahmas took the lead with fine quality and well filled classes. Buff Orpingtons very strong in number and quality. Dorkings quite a treat to look at, the quality being gilt-edged.

In American classes, White Wyandottes took the lead, with Barred Rocks next, first pullet being a star in the laater, but plenty of quality in other winners. Buff Rocks contained 65 singles and 9 pens. After all the ribbins were up, there was enough quality left to make a sensation at most any show. White Rocks, 50 singles and 13 pens, a fine bunch all through. Winners in sigles and second pen all top-notchers. In Silver Wyandottes, first and second cockerel, first and second pullet led the rest of class. Goldens showed full classes, also Silver Pencilled first cock, hen, cockerel and pen of latter all beauties. In Buff Wyandottes, first pullet had it easy, leading all others in class. White Wyandottes, 155 singles and 11 pens,a grand display. Many good and deserving birds left out that would win at a comparison show.

Rhode Island Reds showed 62 Single Combs and 45 Rose Combs— taken as a whole, a fine lot. In the Mediterraneans, the S. C. Brown Leghorns led in number and fully equalled the Whites in quality, one cock being a star in shape, striping and head points rest of class A 1. In whites, the minorcas were up to the standard seen at large shows. Rose Comb Brown Leghorns as a rule are quite shy about coming out, but Springfield must nave quite an attraction for them, proving by the numbers and quality displayed among the winners. Only two S. C. Black Minorcas were exhibited, but twenty-two Rose Comb Black Minorcas of excellent quality were penned. Below is the official list of awards:

OLDEN BARNEVELD POULTRY YARDS, - Barneveld, Oneida Co., N. Y

DANBURY, CONN.

Although the annual exhibition of the Western Connecticut Poultry Association was held the same week as the Herald Square show, the entries were as large as ever, the American classes excelling in numbers to a remarkabe degree. There is no denying the fact that Danbury is the hotbed of Rocks and Wyandottes. The Rhode Island Red fever has thus far not made much headway there. The show was, as usual, splendidly managed. The birds were ready for the judges at 9 a. m. the first day, and by four o'clock in the afternoon all awards were made and ribbons up. After that the public and exhibitors were allowed to fill the aisles. The judges, Hon. D. A. Nichols and J. H. Drevenstedt, extend to the management their thanks and appreciation of the favorable conditions provided to judge the birds.

Barred Rocks, as usual, a very warm class. First cock a beauty in class, fine barring and color. If this bird could be induced to "show off" and moult early, he would be a "screamer" in the warmest company. He acts like a rogue, but has the quality all over. The other winning cock birds were first class specimens. Hensa fine lot, first being a typical bird in shape, good in color, strong in barring; second larger and close to winner; third another fine one, lacking a trifle in clearness of color only. Fourth a large hen finely barred, but off in head, comb being too large and having decided male characteristics. In cockerels first was a large, finely moulded bird in shape, clean in color, even in barring, god head points; second another fine one in shape, comb and barring, but a trifle too dark in color; third a small but very handsome bird in color and barring, will bear watching; fourth another good bird in color and barring, not quite finished or even enough in sections. Pullets strong, first being a wonder in color and strong parallel barring, one of the best we have handled in a very long time; second strongly barred, fine color and good in type; third bright color, free from metallic, good shape; fourth not quite ripe but very promising. Several other unplaced ones will make a stronger show with more finish. Winning pens a really fine lot.

Buff Rocks, grand classes. First cock very even in color both in surface and under, good in type, a hard one to beat; second another fine one in color with third and fourth close up. Hens brought out a very strong lot but were not the best of feather, first and second showing to best advantage. First and second cockerels very clean buff birds of superior quality, third not quite as even in surface color; fourth a little gem, needs age to bring him up to the blue ribbon stage. Pullet class very good, first being in fine trim, even in color, nice in shape; second and third close up. Pens brought out a clinker n first for evenness of color, with seconr, third and fourth high up in quality.

White Rocks are unusually large and fine lot. First cock a model in color and shape; second close up. Others A 1. First hen a grand one in type and color, with second, third and fourth fully up and high standards. First cockerel a beauty in color and style:; second another fine one; third close to first in type; fourth but a trifle lacking in color. It was a warm class

Pullets, first and second very similar in type, clean in plumage and most excellent specimens; third and fourth both high grade. The pen shown was a fine one. A few very good Partridge Plymouth Rocks were shown.

White Wyandottes, the best classes in quality we have seen at Danbury in a number of years. Cock birds brought out a grand one in first, with others showing fine quality but not in the best of condition. First hen was a beauty in color and type; second and third very close to her. It was a pretty lot to judge. In cockerels, first was a star, a beautiful bird in type, fine in color, good legs and beak, and but for a trifle heavy comb would come near being the best we have handled this season; second, third and fourth were all strictly high grade birds that could get a place at any show. Pullets a remarkable lot. First a finished Wyandotte in shape, strong in color; second and third white and fine in shape; fourth but a trifle off in color. Some unplaced ones, when fully developed, will show winning qualities in any company. Pens first class.

Buff Wyandottes not so strong in numbers as usual but the quality was there all the same. In the old birds several old winners came to the front. In youngsters some new stock appeared, notably first cockerel and pullet.

The Golden Wyandotte display was remarkably fine, the quality being the best we have seen at any show this season. The winning pullets were about as good in color in color and lacing as can be found.

Silver Wyandottes small but very good classes.

Partridge Wyandottes teemed with quality, the winning males being especially fine.

A nice display of Rhode Island Reds finnshed up the American classes. Asiatics were not strong in numbers, but the quality of Light Brahmas and Partridge Cochins exhibited was first class.

Leghorns brought out some good rose comb browns, only two single comb browns, a pair of rose comb whites and some good Single Comb Whites and Buff Leghorns. A few more specirls on Leghorns should bring them up close to the Americans. A few good Polish, Hamburgs and Indian Games rounded out the larger fowl. Bantams came out quite strong, notably Light Brahmas, te quality on all classes being very good. Ducks and Geese well represented. Lakenvelders were exhibited by Dr. A. H. Phelps, and scored four blue ribbons.

The awards follow:

... Suggestions for Poultry Profits ...

Eggs and Poultry are both commanding a higher price to-day than ever before, and for this reason, if for no other, you should supply your fowls with the best obtainable foods for a satisfactory output of eggs. In feeding poultry it is wise to bear in mind that the cheapest food is not that which COSTS THE LEAST, but rather that which gives the BEST RESULTS. Your poultry should not only be supplied with good and sufficient food, but also the kind of food that is Adapted to the Purpose for which the fowls are kept. Start your chicks with

CYPHER PROGRESS

1905 Patterns--Valuable Improvements---Absolute Guarantee ---Reduced Prices.

These are some of the advantages offered in the new STANDARD CYPHERS INCUBATORS.
Never before have such perfect machines been offered.
They are the kind that are guaranteed to surpass all others WHEN YOU operate them.
The new and exclusive features that have been added to the Cyphers Standard Incubators and Brooders and the great improvements that have been made on all old patterns put this line in a class by itself.
And yet the Prices Are Lower than ever before.

"Competition is the life of trade" and for the year 1905 we challenge competition, both as to QUALITY and PRICES. We have reduced the cost of production to more than offset all the great improvements and ARE GIVING OUR CUSTOMERS THE BENEFIT.
This means a saving of from 12 1-2 per cent. on the smallest size to 20 per cent. on the largest size. Read all about it in our fine 1905 catalogue.
GOLD MEDAL AND HIGHEST AWARDS were won at Louisana Purchase Exposition.

CYPHERS POULTRY SPECIALTIES

When Writing Advertisers Please Mention The American Fancier.

Don't get freckles on your reputation by becoming careless in your poultry work.

One day's personal supervision is worth a week's time of the hired man.

If you don't know how to look after your flock yourself, don't expect stunning success to follow the efforts of hired help.

Winter care of the flock means work where there are snows. Paths to shovel out, spaces around the houses to clean so the hens can come out. Fresh leaves or litter in the sheds. Warm water for the hens two or three times a day. Don't you like to hear the hens' contented song on a cold day, when they are scratching among the litter, protected from the cold winds?

Make your mistakes object lessons. A wise man never makes the same mistake twice. Fools and lazy ones often do.

I have one fine Barred Rock hen that lost one eye. Noticed her a day or so after it happened. Examined her crop that night and found she had secured very little supper. By lantern light I fed her out of my own hand. Since that time when I feed she comes and stands by me, to be taken up and fed, and doesn't bother to try and get her meals with the rest of the flock. And still some people say hens haven't any sense.

Figures won't lie, but you can lie with figures. Theory and figures are twin brothers. The man who figures on paper how much can be made on poultry, will like the theorist never see anything but mind results. Results that come from practical experience are what makes success in any occupation.

It is a good sign when the farmers become interested in poultry papers. The writer gave a man a copy of the American Fancier at the Augusta show. He asked to look at. When told he could have it he said: "Im a cotton raiser near Aiken, and am right-smart interested in the poultry show here, and I reckon I'll invest about a bale of cotton in some breed, and shall take a poultry paper." Inquiry brought to light that he was a big cotton planter, and I suppose he made a purchase of some poultry.

If your fowls get colds in their heads, and there is a running at the nostrils, try the following: Equal parts of turpentine, coal oil, and sweet oil. Put in a sewing machine oil can. To use, shake thoroughly, then press on bottom and squirt in nostrils and slit of mouth. If you suspect or see indications of canker, squirt once down the throat. Many chickens in late fall and early winter are apt to show such distemper colds, and this remedy will be found very efficient. G. O. B.

CORFU, N. Y.

The second annual exhibit of the Corfu Fanciers' Club was a decided success, both in number and quality of exhibits. The new coops built and owned by the Club showed off the well groomed specimens to the best possible advantage. The exhibit which, perhaps, attracted the most attention was that of S. C. W. Leghorns, 95 birds. There were 75 White Wyandottes, among which were some birds of exceptional quality. The club found that they had built only one-half coops enough, as they had two place two and three birds in a coop. The Pembroke Incubator Mfg. Co. brought off a large hatch of chicks during the show. They were exhibited in their new brooder and attracted a great deal of attention. F. E. Banks of Crittenden, N. Y., had a large and attractive booth, displaying poultry literature and supplies. There was a fine display of Homing Pigeons by Nehrboss, also an exhibit of Belgian Hares and Rabbits. The ten dollar silver cup offered by the Club for the best display was won by the Ebalheim Poultry Yds. of Corfu. The ten dollar silver cup offered by the National Light Brahma Club, was won by Erie Poultry Farm, Crittenden, N. Y. Mrs. C. W. Black of Syracuse, N. Y., won the National White Wyandotte Club ribbons on cock, cockerel, pullet Ebalheim; Poultry Yds., Corfu on hen. The entries were exceedingly good, and considering that this is only the second show held by the club, the members are to be congratulated on getting together such a grand display. More interest is being taken each year by local fanciers, and the membership has doubled since last year. The awards are as follows:

Mr. Howell, associate editor of The American Fancier, will furnish weekly reports on the egg and poultry market, and answer all questions submitted to him relating to commercial and practical poultry keeping. When replies are requested to be sent by letter, stamps must be enclosed and letters addressed to George E. Howell, 70 Christopher St., New York City.

Eggs.—Receipts for week, 38,862 cases. As Christmas time approaches the egg eating public seems disposed to economize in the quantity of the luxury which at present prices eggs have become.

They are looking upon henfruit with seeming indifference, if not of contempt.

The result has been a slight slackening in the tone of market, but no change in price. We quote:

Nearby fancy selected, 38 to 40c. per dozen; choice grades, not equal to first quotations, 34 to 37c.; fancy mixed, 32 to 34c.

Western, close graded fancy, 30c.; average shipments, 27 to 29c.; Kentucky, 22 to 29c.; Tennessee and other southern, 20 to 28c.; refrigerator, 21 to 22½c.; dirty eggs, 18 to 20c.; cracked, 15 to 18c.; limed, 20 to 21½c.

Fowls, nearby and western, 12c. per lb.; southern, 11c.; chickens, nearby and western, 11c.; southern, 10c.; turkeys, 12 to 13c.; ducks, western, per pair, 80 to 90c.; southern, 60 to 75c.; geese, western, per pair, $1.62 to $1.75; southern, $1.25 to $1.35. Live pigeons, 20c. per pair.

Dressed poultry.—Receipts 16,849 pkgs., dry packed. Turkeys, Jersey, Maryland and Delaware, fancy, per lb., 21c.; fair to good, 18@20c.; State and Pennsylvania, fancy, 19@20c; fair to good, 17@18c.; western, dry-picked, young toms, fancy, 19c.; scalded, 18@19c.; western, young hens, fancy, 18@19c.; mixed weights, 18@19c.; fair to good, 15@17c.; old hens and toms, 16@17c.; chickens, Philadelphia, 8@9 lbs. to pair, per lb., 19@20c.; mixed sizes, 14@15c.; other Pennsylvania, 7@8 lbs. to pair, fancy, per lb., 14@15c.; State and Pennsylvania, mixed sizes, 12½@13c.; western broilers, dry-picked, fancy, 14@15c.; dry-picked, 8 lbs. and over to pair, 12c.; dry-picked, average best, 10@11c.; Ohio and Michigan, scalded, fancy, 12c.; average run, 10@11c.; other western, 8 lbs. and over to pair, scalded, fancy, 12c.; scalded, average best, 10@11c.; inferior, 8@9c.; fowls, Western, dry-picked, 5 lbs. and over, each, per lbz., 11½c.; dry-picked, average best, 10@10½c; Ohio and Michigan, scalded, average best, 11c.; other western, scalded, 5 lbs. and over, each, 11c.; scalded, average best, 10@10½c.; poor to fair, 8@9c.; old cocks, per lbs., 8@8½c.; spring ducks, Maryland, fancy, 14@15c.; Ohio and Michigan, choice, 13@14c.; other western choice, 12½@13c.; fair to good, 10@12c.; spring geese, Maryland, per lb., 13@14c.; Western, choice, 12@12½c.; fair to good, 9@11c.; squabs, prime, large, white, per dozen, $2.75; mixed, $2.25@$2.37; dark, $1.75@$2.

I notice several poultrymen are advocating a morning feed of grain and a warm mash at night. It is just possible some of us fellows have fallen asleep at the signal station and allowed the train of progress to leave us behind, but for winter feeding it will take some pretty stiff argument against the whole grain at night idea, to convince me I am wrong.

Take for example, a fire destined to burn the night through! the fuel is replenished and every effort made to retard and check it.

With the hen, the whole grain offers the most resistance-digestive, and carries her through the long winter nights, and when daylight appears she goes to work in search of any kernels that may have escaped her observation the previous evening, or which the attendant has bethought himself to bury in the litter, with the object of completing just such an illusion in the old hen's mind.

By the time this has been thoroughly stirred up the warm mash will arrive. This method, it seems to me, is the ideal for winter, but I am free to admit it might be reversed with profit in the summer, although I never thought of it before. The animal heat in a house on a hot summer's night, admittedly would be lower if the hens were fed a mash in lieu of the whole grain at evening time.

I saw in some journal where a fellow, in speaking of the aptitudes of some fowls he owned, expressed himself thus: "Late in the summer I became possessed of 12 Light Brahma chicks two-thirds grown; they were beauties, as well marked as any I ever saw, and the admiration of all my neighbors. They grew to weigh seven to nine pounds when I put them in one-half of a long poultry house, in the other half of which were 30 Black Leghorns. I would take a pan of feed and throw two-thirds of it to the dozen Brahmas, the other third to the 30 Leghorns. The latter would give me 20 eggs a day, while the Brahmas diddn't lay an egg."

Great Smothering Hemlocks! What a chance for the egg-food men!

Now you could not pay this man to keep Brahmas. The Leghorns would be prescribed on his banner every time, yet a feeder who understands Brahmas would consider them to be a pretty reliable winter layer.

They need an incentive to activity, make them work for every ounce of food they get, provide them with regular courses of exercise. They also need more coarse food than the little concentrated Leghorn.

The winning Partridge Wyandotte cock at the recent Dairy Show in England, was sold for a sum approaching 800 dollars in money. The profile of this bird, as outlined by the artist in a sketch, is grand, and calls to mind the shape of our finished Silvers and Goldens, in the days before fashion and open centers compelled the breeders to sacrifice a fine contour to their demands.

This excellence in outline applies as well to our Partridge and Silver Pencilled Wyandottes. Some day our breeders will regain sanity, and the fanciers' ideal will reassert itself.

GEYER'S SCURVY CURE FOR POULTRY was the first article introduced to the public for this purpose, which has been thoroughly tested in the last ten years by many of our brother fanciers who are willing to say with us that there is no other article on the market like this that can be relied on to do its work properly. It is something that the poultry fancier, who appreciates his fine birds, needs very much. What looks more disgraceful than a fine flock of chickens, many, or all of them, having their legs coated with a thick, hard, scabby crust which is called scurvy? It spoils the appearance of the birds and is very annoying to them. It is also contagious. Here we have a sure cure for this ugly disease. By following the directions we guarantee that it will take off that ugly, hard coat and leave the legs clean and smooth and give them their natural color. It also has no equal for healing sores and frosted combs and wattels. It makes them very bright and red. It is just what the exhibitor wants to prepare his birds for the exhibition room. Some of our customers tell us that they have tried it with good results for weak legs. We only ask you to give it a trial. It is put up in tin boxes. Money must accompany all orders. Price, 25 cents. Address, G. A. Geyer, Florin, Pa. 560tf

$300,000,000 IN POULTRY

Do you know that the government census of 1900 gives the value of the poultry produced in that year at very nearly $300,000,000? POULTRY SUCCESS, the 20th Century Poultry Magazine, is absolutely indispensable to every one interested in chickens, whether they be begnners, experienced poultry raisers or only keep a few hens. It is, without any question, the foremost poultry monthly in this country and readers of its articles on pure bred chicks and their better care and keeping have come to realize it is a plain truth. "There's money n a hen."

Regular subscription price 50 cents. 36 to 80 pages; beautifully illustrated, handsomely printed on fine book paper.

Special Introduction Offers: If you keep chickens or are in any way interested in them, we will send Poultry Success one year for only 25 cents and include a large illustrated practical poultry book free; or three months trial for three two cent stamps. Sample copy free. Address to-day.

WHERE IS THE REMEDY?

Every year, when the show season is in full swing, we hear complaints from all sides about birds being lost or being placed in wrong coops. A remedy for this evil must be found, otherwise the true fanciers will become more and more reluctant to send their valuable birds and to lose the support of this class of men, would be the severest blow the fancy could sustain.

No amount of money can reimburse a true fancier for the loss of his bird. It is like manuscript of which no duplicate exists, like a valuable heirloom, like many things that are near and dear to us, that no cash offering can ever replace. The managers of a show cannot, in reason, protect exhibitors against loss by fire or other accident, but they must protect them against dishonesty and carelessness. If the facilities are lacking for promptly cooping and re-shipping 3,000 birds, then limit your entries to 2,000. 1,500 birds well cared for will bring you more ultimate glory than having the largest exhibit, if the latter cannot be handled as it should be. Quality goes ahead of quantity everywhere, where things are taken at their true value. No person, not connected with the management, or employed and held responsible for his work by them, should be allowed in a show room when the birds are being received or when they are being re-shipped. Every fair minded exhibitor will be satisfied to entrust his birds to the care of the officers of the show and their employees if he knows that all exhibitors will be treated alike. We earnestly believe that many fanciers would forego the big cash specials, silver cups, prize ribbons and the many other inducements offered to secure big entries if some of this money was used to procure additional care and safety for their birds. It is time for the fanciers to wake up. Give us your ideas. Suggest some good,practical, feasible remedy. Blame the show managers as much as you want to, but do not forget that as long as money prizes are the main attraction to exhibitors, they are compelling the show managers to cut expenses in other and more necessary directions.

NEWFIELD FARMS.

While attending the Stamford Show it was our privilege to visit this modern, up-to-date New England farm. It is beautifully situated about 3 miles to the north of Stamford on high ground, about 100 feet above the sea level, and commands a view for miles around of the surrounding country and the beautiful beach and waters of Long Island Sound. This farm is the home of thoroughbreds. It makes no difference if it be horses, cattle or poultry, the management believes, as does the writer, that it costs no more to feed a thoroughbred than a mongrel; besides they are a thing of beauty. The owner, Mr. Raymond, has in his manager, Mr. C. F. Comstock, we believe, a man of the soundest judgment in regard to the management,etc. of so large an estate. He is a man who is second to none in the training of horseflesh, judging from the manner in which the 20 or more horses regarded him as we entered the stable, and the stunts he put a few of them through for our entertainment, but the main thing we wish to impress on the reader and the one which will interest him the most, is the quality of the poultry bred at Newfield Farms. These farms are a little more than a mile square and are divided into smaller ones of about 50 acres each. The poultry houses are modern and well planned for the comfort of the fowls and the convenience of feeding, etc. There is now in course of construction a new brooder house 65 feet long and 66 wide, which will be supplied with numerous individual brooders, the management thinking this method superior to the pipe system. Mr. Comstock has caught the idea of a successful poultry plant—one breed, one variety, the Lakenfelders. This has a special meaning to those who are interested in this particular breed. It means that the management has devoted all its energy, and has spared no expense in bringing to this country the finest specimens of this breed that were obtainable in Germany, the home of the true Lakenfelder. At the Herald Square show they made an enviable record, winning the silver cup for best female. Those who visit Madison Square show can see for themselves the quality of the exhibit of Newfield Farms. After the New York show these birds will all be mated and a limited number of eggs will be sold at $10.00 per setting from the choicest pens. H. E. Wilson, the noted breeder of Golden Wyandottes and a poultryman from way back, is Mr. Comstock's right hand man,and this is enough to warrant us in saying that the poultry end of Newfield Farms will be run on strictly up to date principles, and any stock or eggs sold will be guaranteed as represented.

MORE ABOUT BRONZE TURKEYS AT HERALD SQUARE.

Editor American Fancier:—In the Dec. 11th issue of The American Fancier I notice what Mr. A. E. Bookman says about the 1st prize young Bronze Turkey tom and pullet at the recent Herald Square exhibition.

It is not my desire to say anything injurious to Mr. Bookman or his birds. But I consider it my right and duty to defend my birds and the laurels they deservedly won at above show.

The 1st prize pullet that Mr. Bookman refers to is way over weight of Standard requirements and her form and shape is faultless in all sections.

Her breast plumage is very brilliant and rich in bronze and every feather perfectly edged with gray. Her plumage from back of head to center of back is as brilliant as a tom. Just what Mr. Bookman means by poor lacing on back is a thing I can not understand. As this is the first time I ever knew a Bronze turkey should have lacing on back. Possibly Mr. Bookman was gazing at some handsomely dressed New York lady when lacing came in his mind.

This pullet is absolutely Standard in wing color and her main tail feathers are perfect in pencilling clear to roots of feathers, and the edging is clear white and a prominent bronze band between the penciling and white edging. This is a thing we do not often find in Bronze females. Her lesser coverts were perfectly penciled. Edging pure white and a wide gold band between the two colors. Her main tail coverts were her greatest fault.

The 3rd prize pullet that Mr. Bookman speaks of as being an easy winner for first was very faulty in plumage on back of head, the color being a light brown. Her secondary wing feathers were badly edged with a clay color; no bronze at all on lesser coverts and a long ways in quality from the winner.

My 1st young tom's only fault was absence of black band on the two center feathers of main tail coverts. He is a rich golden bronze in all sections that should show such color. His wing barring and tail penciling as near perfect as we can hope to get and a tall rangy fellow of immense size, frame and bone.

Mr. Bookman's young tom is a nice bird. But too much bottle green in place of rich golden bronze and not enough size to justify his going higher in such a grand class of young toms as was found at Herald Square.

I find many exhibitors who will point out trifling faults in other people's birds but overlook serious defects in their own goods. If Mr. Bookman will consult the Standard instead of his own personal fancy, he will admit that he got all he was entitled to at Herald Square. However, if he is the least bit in doubt and will place $500 with the American Fancier, I am ready to cover it, he to pick a judge, I to pick a judge, and these two judges to pick a third judge and they to decide it and winner to take all. I want no prizes that do not rightfully belong to me and if Mr. Bookman wins he is also entitled to the prizes that he thinks were wrongfully awarded my birds at New York. I am ready to do business at once and my winning birds are in my flock ready to go before the judges selected.

Now, Mr. Bookman, it is up to you to do or not to do, as your conscience may direct you, and I feel that this is a perfectly fair way for you to win back the prizes that you may think rightfully belonged to you.

ORPINGTON ENTRIES AT NEW YORK.

Editor American Fancier:—The Orpington S. C. class at Madison Square Garden is third in size, passing ahead of all the old established breeds except the White Wyandottes and Barred P. Rocks. The quality also will far surpass any previous exhibit, the contest for first place among breeders being quite exciting, and to add to the excitement, a "dark horse" will appear at the show, who has never exhibited before, who, unless we are much mistaken, will take the old campaigners by surprise and carry off the honors they are expecting to capture. This gentleman has been to the shows in England and his exhibit will consist of the first prize birds of those shows, secured at what seems fabulous prices compared to any we are accustomed to before. The Orpington exhibit, as usual the last few years, will prove the feature of the show, and more than ever so this year. The gentleman is a new member of the club from Massachusetts and will be at our annual meeting Jan. 5, 1905, at 3 o'clock p. m.

NAPERVILLE, ILL.

The dates of January 19th to 24th have been selected for the poultry show by the Naperville Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock Association, with one of the leading judges of the United States, Charles McClave of New London, Ohio, to place the awards. A score card by Mr. McClave will be well worth the effort of sending your birds. The Association has held four successful shows. At the last one there were 665 specimens on exhibition, and the next one will be one of the strongest held in northern Illinois. The management can successfully run the show, and the many fanciers in this vicinity will make it. The largest building in Naperville has been secured for the exhibition. Your address on a postal card to Oscar H. Givler, cor. sec., Naperville, Ill., will bring you a catalog.

Here is a benighted worker in the faith whose question explains itself:

Question—I have two pullets that lay soft shelled eggs every night after they go to roost, and the yolks of the eggs are very pale; looks very much like the white of the egg. I feed them whole corn and oats, aiso give them cabbage, crushed clam shells and coal cinders. Will you kindly inform me what will prevent it? Miss Isabelle Benton, Marcy, N. Y.

Answer—First let us consider the conditions under which we find these two pullets.

They are fed corn and oats, not a complete ration but combined with cabbage. No hen should feel compelled to lay soft shelled eggs after eating it, unless, as I explained to the questioner, the oats were light in weight and the hens drew their sustenance entirely from the corn, which, in conjunction with the green cabbage, should give a rich, high colored yolk, just the opposite from what we learn from her letter, where we are told the yolk resembles the white.

2nd—Whether these two pullets are worth more than the price of market poultry, hinges entirely on the condition of the remainder of the flock, and the eggs they lay. Should the other fowls be in fair flesh and lay normally, then off with the heads of this pair, as their egg organs are diseased, rendering them incapable of producing a perfect egg, and unfit for breeding purposes.

3d—Let us see how we can better this ration. Were corn and oats the only available grains we should advise that they be ground together in the proportion of one part corn and two parts oats for a morning mash, and add a little powdered charcoal; at noon feed the cabbage and scatter a little cracked corn in the scratching pen, and at night feed whole corn sparingly, that is, not all they would eat. If the morning mash was mixed with skim milk a hen could exist comfortably on it and have no reasonable excuse for laying imperfect eggs.

Wheat, unless home grown, is too high in price to feed to hens, except as an appetizer at intervals, but the by-products of wheat, the middlings and bran, are a valuable poultry food, the bran especially should form a part of every ration, so great is the feeding value of these by-products. Experts have advised that all wheat grown in this country be ground here, and only the flour be exported, in order to give the stock growers and feeders the full benefit. Even now there is a great political and economic question before the law makers of this country. Boiled down, it is this: Our crop of hard wheat is not equal to the demand of our home and foreign market, and prices on all grades nave risen accordingly. The millers of the great northwest have asked that they be allowed to import Canadian wheat, grind it, sell the bran and middlings in this country to our stock and poultry keepers over the whole country, and benefiting us all. The flour will be exported, and the miller receives a drawback from the duty of twenty-five cents a bushel he paid on the wheat in proportion to the amount of flour he is able to produce from a bushel.

While this arrangement would be a benefit as shown and keep the price of flour within the reach of the poor, the wheat growers of this country are objecting to any reduction in the market price of their products, just as every egg producer in this country would kick were the present tariff of five cents a dozen taken off eggs at the present time, while they are so scarce and high, and not one in five hundred has an egg to sell; but to return to the feeding subject. A little bran and middlings with ground corn and oats and powdered charcoal, with some starvation and plenty of exercise on the side, will cure any case of soft shelled egg laying brought about by imperfect feeding.

4th—The coal cinders are of no benefit to the fowls beyond the few picked up for grinding material, the sifted coal ashes can be added to the dust bath.

The illustration on our title-page this week gives a good idea of the winning White Wyandotte hen and pullet at the Herald Square show, New York. Edgar Briggs, who is superintendent of poultry at the Abigail Adams farm, Irvington, N. Y., is an old breeder of White Wyandottes, and his success at the Herald Square and Walden shows indicates that he has lost none of his ability in producing winners.

Our western editorial brother, Miller Purvis, in the December issue of his handsome magazine, "Poultry," classes A. F. Peirce with the younger judges. As Senator Peirce exhibited and judged Games and Game Bantams long before some of the modern judges broke into the show-room, the cigars are on Editor Purvis.

A handsome booklet, containing the constitution and by-laws, list of officers and members, as well as a fine picture of the president of the Costly Fishing Club, has just been issued by Secretary D. A. Nichols. The annual dinner of the club will take place at the Ashland House, New York, Thursday evening, January 5. All the fish are instructed to gather promptly at eight o'clock and bring their fines along.

Mr. George "Pan" Burgott, the mayor, treasurer, chief of police, station agent and general manager of the freight department of the Erie railroad at Lawton's, N. Y., has sent out his new Brown Leghorn catalog and kindly enclosed a cabinet photo of himself in the package addressed to us. George Burgott is a brown study, i. e., he is Brown Leghorns all over; even his side-whiskers show striping when he lets them grow at home. But he is careful to shave them off when bent on judging or exhibiting at shows, the undercolor being white. Mr. Burgott has made an enviable record as a breeder of Brown Leghorns and as a judge of them, and The American Fancier is glad to say so.

To the readers and advertisers of The American Fancier, as well as to all other chicken brethren, we extend the sincere wish that one and all may enjoy a most prosperous and Happy New Year.

The old year has passed and it has been a very important one in the fancy, and especially so in the history of the American Poultry Association. The new standard has caused many heart-burnings and much good ink has been used to relieve the overburdened minds of some. The bitterness displayed by the warring factions at times was almost serio-comic, never tragical or dangerous. Wiser counsel usually prevailed at critical periods, and we are of the opinion that in the coming year the good sense of the earnest members of the old society will prevail and harmony be restored all along the line. The signs of the times indicate this. The business of the A. P. A. and the poultry fancy is too important and serious to allow personal and selfish motives to stand in the way of progress and beneficial legislation.

There are, of course, those outside the breastworks that desire nothing better than a lack of harmony among the A. P. A. members. To disrupt the old society is the cherished dream of a class of reformers that is never happy unless busy finding fault with the work of others. At the same time, these dreamers, honest as they may believe themselves to be in their visionary ideas, offer nothing of practical value to replace what they deem useless, obnoxious and out of date.

Over twenty challenge cups, valued at one hundred dollars each, are offered at the Boston show; besides many cash specials, medals, etc.

The Keene, (N. H.) show promises to be a big success. Mr. W. R. Graves has been added to the list of judges and will handle the White Wyandotte classes.

The "A B C of Bee Culture" is the title of the most comprehensive work on the handling of bees published in this country. The A. I. Root Co., Medina, Ohio, are the publishers.

The premium list of the ninth annual exhibition of the Fanciers' Poultry Association of New Jersey has been issued. The dates of the show are January 30 to February 4, 1905, and practically wind up the show season in the east. The exhibition will be held at Bamberger's Auditorium, Newark, N. J., and a new feature will be the absence of an admission fee to visit the show. The same excellent management of the past few years will be in charge. Spratts will do the cooping and feeding, with the "only Tom" Rackham in charge. Secretary R. G. Bailey, East Orange, N. J., will be glad to send premium lists to all who send their address on a postal card. This being strictly a fanciers' show and the only one held in the great poultry state of New Jersey, should draw big entries and a large attendance of fanciers.

The Madison Square Garden at New York next week will be the battleground where many of the finest birds in America will fight for the coveted blue ribbons. A great number of fanciers from many sections will spend the week there, not only in sociable intercourse, but in profitable interchange of ideas. The American Fancier will publish a complete report of the great show in its January 14 issue. Advertisements for this special number must be sent in before January 10 to insure insertion. Copy for advertisements can be left with our agents at The American Fancier booth at the Madison Square Garden up till Saturday, 10 p. m., January 7.

The following editorial in the current issue of Poultry, England, will be read with regret by many, and especially by German fanciers in this country who were well acquainted with the work of Mr. Kramer:

German poultrydom has just sustained a great—in fact irreparable—loss through the death of one of its most active leaders—Mr. Rudolph Kramer, editor of the Gefluegel Zeitung, Leipzig. The deceased gentleman returned severely indisposed from the poultry show at Erlangen, where he had been judging, and died, after three weeks' illness, on the 24th ult., at the age of sixty. Besides being one of the best poultry judges in Germany, he was author of "Kramer's Illustrated Book of Poultry," a most practical and well illustrated work.

Candidates for secretary of the American Poultry Association are becoming quite numerous, if the reports in a number of western poultry papers are correct. What's the matter with the present secretary? Why make a change at a time when the present incumbent's services are most valuable and necessary?

Among the dates claimed for the winter of 1905 are Walden, N. Y., Dec. 5-8, and Providence, R. I., Dec. 6-9.

TWO BIG SHOWS IN ONE.

The Ohio State Poultry Association has decided to join the exhibition of The Dayton Fanciers' Club in the Armory, at Dayton, Ohio, on January 25 to 31, 1905. This combination means that this will be one of the greatest exhibitions of poultry ever held in the Middle West; over $150.00 in cash has been put up in special prizes, besides numerous other specials. With entry fees at only 50 cents, which includes cooping and feeding, this show ought to bring out a good string of birds. As the space is limited to 1,600 birds, entries must be made early. Theodore Hewes, the well known judge, and other prominent judges, are scheduled to place the awards.

As the Dayton Fanciers' Club is noted for its square dealing, and the fulfilling of its promises, exhibitors will get all that is coming to them. The secretary, Mr. Lenz, is an old fancier, and will give his undivided time to the show. This means that birds will have his personal attention and the best of care. Entries are already in from eighteen different states, and every variety in the Standard will be represented. Specials from ten different clubs will be up, several of them having this as their state meet. Make your arrangements to put this show on your list. The secretary will mail you premium list and entry blanks on application. Address Carl W. Lenz, Reibold Building, Dayton, Ohio.

SHOW AT HOLYOKE MASS.

The poultry breeders of Holyoke, South Hadley Falls, Fairview, Granby and Chicopee, met at the K. of P. hall December 10, and formed an association to be known as the Holyoke Poultry and Pet Stock association. The meeting was largely attended and much interest was shown, and organized with the following officers: President, Robert P. Cunnigham, of Holyoke; first vice-president, Fred Childs, of Holyoke; second vice-president, H. S. Williams, of Chicopee; secretary and treasurer, George Barnett, Jr., of Holyoke; directors, S. A. Anderson, of Holyoke; George A. Lamb, of Holyoke; James Beattie, of South Hadley Falls; George F. Eastman, of Granby; A. C. Chapin, of Chicopee. The various committees were appointed to find suitable hall, by-laws, etc. The club starts off with a membership of about 60, with the indications that it will reach 100 by the next meeting.

DUNKIRK, N. Y., SHOW.

The premium list for the Dunkirk-Fredonia Fanciers' Association annual show is now ready for mailing, and a copy of the same can be had by addressing W. C. Baumgartner, secretary, Dunkirk, N. Y.

The show will be held in Dunkirk, N. Y., February 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 1905, and entries close January 25, 1905. Mr. Wick Hathaway, of Madison, Ohio, will judge the poultry which will be scored, and Mr. Charles E. Lang, of Buffalo, N. Y., will judge the pigeons. From present indications this will be one of the largest shows held in Western New York this season.

POULTRY ASSOCIATION CHANGES NAME.

A number of the members of the Fitchburg Poultry Association met recently at Leominster and voted to transfer the Association from Fitchburg to Leominster on account of inconvenience of hall in Fitchburg, also to name it the Leominster Poultry Association. The show will be held at Music Hall, Leominster, February 8 to 10. The officers elected are: President, A. A. Tisdale; vice-president, M. H. Bosworth; auditor, I. C. Greene; superintendent of hall, F. D. Burdette, all of Leominster; secretary, Henry A. Benedict; vice-president, J. A. Ashline; treasurer, J. Lee Frost, Fitchburg; vice-president and assistant secretary, L. H. Brown, Lunenburg.

QUINCY, MICH.

The third annual exhibition of the Quincy Poultry and Pet Stock Association, was the banner show of the three held by this organization, both in number of entries and quality of birds shown. The fact was proven without a doubt that Quincy does not take second place to any city in the state as a show town, and breeders appreciate the fact that a ribbon won at Quincy is of no small value, as the competition was very strong this year, especially in the White Wyandotte, Buff Rock, Houdan and Minorca classes. There were over sixty birds shown in each of the two former classes and several of the prize winners in the two latter classes scored 95½.

Much interest and enthusiasm was shown, both by exhibitors and visitors, and the Association was enlarged by many new members and its future outlook is most gratifying.

PARTRIDGE COCHIN BANTAMS.

Bantam fanciers are beginning to appreciate the splendid beauty of the Partridge Cochin Bantam. When they first began to be shown in this country, they were far inferior to the ones we now see at aur best shows. Their coloring, at that time, was rather dark and not nearly as good as it is to-day, which was probably the reason they did not seem to attract and hold the attention of fanciers.. There is no question about their being a very beautiful bantam, and as soon as the coloring of the females, is bred a little more perfect, I predict that there will bem any more breeders added to their fancy. There are a few males, in this country of very fine color, and if they are carefully mated to the best of hens they ought to improve the quality of the stock. If some interested breeder of Partridge Cochin Bantams would try to corner the market in the breed, by buying up all of the best winners he could procure, it would be the best ehing that could happen for the improvement of the breed, for he would then be enabled to breed the best to the best, and soon establish a fine type of shape and the brilliant coloring which makes the breed so beautiful. As matters stand to-day, the fancier owns one good one, and so on. To get a distinct and desirable strain, requires several years of careful in-breeding. There is as much kowledge and experience necessary in mating Partridge Cochin Bantams properly, as for the lage fowls from which they descended. Most of the breeds of bantams are now bred in a state of quality close to perfection. The Partridge Cochin Bantam has not been bred as long as the other varieties, however, and we must allow it to be a little larger than the other Cochin Bantams for the present, giving our greatest attention to producing Cochin shape and color. Some Cochin Bantam fanciers have a weakness for extra long foot feathering. They make a serious mistake in putting muffs on the birds. The "paddle footed" style of foot feathering conforms the best to the true Cochin outline. The fancier of Cochin Bantams, should be careful to keep the floor of clean, dry, short straw or hay chaff in order to protect their foot feathering from being injured or soiled. Often the foot feathers are injured when in an immature state of growth and off colored feathers appear in consequence of the damage to the body of the quills. The disposition of the Cochin Bantam is very quiet and gentle, and they make very fine pets after they are once accustomed to being handled. They are evidently gaining in popularley all the time when the Partridge variety, will equal the other varietes of the family. In the yards of many fanciers, it is plainly to be seen that the Bantam Cochins have taken the place of the large Cochins. The latter are really getting very scarce and surprisingly so, for only a few years ago they always filled the classes at the sows and were regarded one of the popular breeds of fancy poultry. Each season we see better Partridge Cochin Bantams, and it is to be hoped that the day is not distant when they will be almost perfect quality; then they will be one of our most popular bantams, for no other variety has more beautiful coloring than they, and their gentle disposition makes them very easy to manage, as regards housing and yarding. TENTH ANNUAL MEETING OF AMERICAN BLACK MINORCA CLUB.

The tenth annual meeting of the American Black Minorca club will be held with the Boston show, Thursday, Jan. 19, 1905, at 2:30 p. m. At this meeting new officers will be elected and important business transacted. Every member of the club is earnestly requested to attend the meeting and add to the attractiveness of the show by making as large an exhibit of Black Minorcas as possible. It is to the interest of all Minorca breeders to make the Minorca class the largest in the show, and every one can help to that end by showing either in the open or novice class. More Minorcas were sold for good money at the last Boston show than I have known to be sold at any show. In addition to the liberal prizes and special prizes offered by the Boston Show association, the Minorca club offers as follows:

From the club's treasury:

	1st.	2nd.	3rd.	4th.
Cock	$4.00	$3.00	$2.00	$1.00
Hen	4.00	3.00	2.00	1.00
Cockerel	4.00	3.00	2.00	1.00
Pullet	4.00	3.00	2.00	1.00
Pen	3.00	2.00	2.00

Individual offers as follows:

George L. Harding, Binghamton, N. Y., dealer in all kinds of poultry supplies, silver cup, valued at $50, for the best breeding pen. Cup to be won twice for ownership. Once won by George Dexter.

Hon. Jos. P. Hilldorfer, Allegheny, Pa., fine silver cup for S. C. Black Minorca male having best head; also $5 in gold for best Rose Comb Black Minorca cock, hen, cockerel and pullet.

Geo. H. Northrup, Raceville, N. Y., silver cup for best cock, hen, cockerel and pullet.

Rose Lodge Poultry Farm, Adrian, Mich., $1 for the best cock from Cleveland or any point farther west.

George Dexter, 85 Francis St., Everett, Mass., silver cup for four best cockerels.

J. H. Minshall, 22 James St., Brantford, Ont., $2 for four best pullets.

Henry Finly, 1125 Mass. Ave., Arlington, Mass., $1 for the best cock from New York state, and $1 for best display of Rose Comb Black Minorcas.

Massachusetts members of club, silver cup for best display by member from state of Massachusetts; also silver cup for best two cockerels and two pullets by any member.

Hon. L. C. Holden, Sault Ste Marie, Mich., six lacquered copper souvenir spoons, valued at $3, as follows:

One spoon for the largest entry from New York state.

One spoon for the 2d largest entry from New York state.

One spoon for the largest entry from Canada.

One spoon for the largest entry from Pennsylvania.

One spoon for the largest entry from Massachusetts.

One spoon for the largest entry from Vermont.

In case any of the spoons are not won they shall go to persons making largest exhibits from states not provided for by this offer.

Fred V. Rounds, 217 Main St., Owensboro, Ky., one membership to American Black Minorca club for non-member making the largest exhibit.

Except when otherwise designated, the above specials are to be competed for by Single Comb Black Minorcas owned by members of the club and applicants for membership who have paid $2 for membership fees, to president or secretary of the club before the judging commences.

Send at once to Samuel H. Roberts, Pawtucket, R. I.

Applications for membership and fees for same should be sent to Geo. H. Northrup, Raceville, N. Y., president, or W. D. Davis, Dover, N. H., secretary.

PARTRIDGE WYANDOTTES

I do not think there is another breed of fowl before the Fancy to-day that has made such headway and gained such popularity within the past two or three years. When we come to consider the fabulous prices that have been paid for single specimens of this variety during the present season, ranging from £40 to £165, the reason of their popularity is not far to seek. Really first class exhibition partridge Wyandottes are like the Eldorado potato—almose worth their weight in gold.

How long the present boom will continue I really would not like to predict. But this I can say, there is no other breed of fowl more worthy the time and money spent upon it than the partridge Wyandotte. As an egg producer, an all-round utility fowl, and an exhibition bird combined there is no other breed that I know of that can epual it. It is, moreover, exceedingly hardy, and can be reared and kept in most exposed positions, no matter how damp or how bleak the situation may be, and, if suitably fed, will fill the egg basket in the depth of winter when eggs are eggs, so to speak.

The partridge Wyandotte is not an English breed, although it has been greatly improved in every way since its introduction into this country in the year 1896, just two years after the breed was first produced in America. I think I am correct in saying that Mr. John Wharton, who lays claim to being the pioneer of the breed in England, first exhibited a pair of partridge Wyandottes in the A. O. V. Wyandotte Wyandotte class at Liverpool in 1896, but which did not so much as receive a commendation card. At that time the top colour in the cockerels was several shades darker than the present day exhibtion specimens; in fact, it was more a dark brickish red colour in hackles than the rich golden shade to be found now, whilst the pullets also were a much deeper and darker ground colour, and the penciling nothing like so distinct.

This dark colour is still the favourite one with the American fancier. Consequently such birds would stand no chance of success in the show pen in England, nor would ours at American exhibitions.

Doubtless many of our readers will ask themselves the question, "How has this variety of the Wyandotte family been produced?" In reply, there is not the slightest doubt that the foundation of the breed can be traced back to the partridge Cochin hen, crossed in some cases with the golden Wyandotte cock; and in others with the Indian Game. It is therefore from the partridge Cochin that the feathered legs we sometimes find in partrdge 'Dottes of to-day have been produced. These feathered shanks are happily becoming a thing of the past, and in the course of another year or two will have disappeared for ever.

I will now try and describe my ideal of both sexes. The cock, to be an up-to-date exhibiton specimen, should have a red eye, and not a yellow or daw eye, which is very often the case. The beak should be yellow, the comb rose, or what is termed "cradle shape," with the spike or leader following the line of the neck. The comb should also be as firm and as close fitting as possible, The colour of the face, comb, lobes, and wattles should be a bright healthy red, and the the ear lobes free from any white, which is very objectionable. The head and hackles should be a rich golden or orange colour, and not red as we often see. Each feather of the hackles, both neck and saddle, should have a distinct black stripe down the center, but at the same time not running the whole length of the feather, or it will give the appearance known as "smutty hackle," a fault which in an exhibition specimen is very objectionable. The breast should be raven black right up to the throat, without any signs of rust or tippng of red, although this tipping more or less will always be found in a pullet-breedig cock. The black should continue over the thight, beneath the legs, and right up to the root of the tail, although some strains will show a greyness in fluff behind, which is a fault that should be guarded against when matng up your cockerel-breeding pen. The back and wing bows should be a rich dark red, and not a dark mahogany colour which we so often find.

The saddle hackle should match the neck hackle, and be equally as distinctly striped with black, the more clear and defined the striping the better. It is in this stripng and light golden hackles combined that so many birds fail. It is quite an easy matter to get bright golden hackles almost devoid of any striping, but this should never be countenanced in the show pen, however good the bird mey be in other respects, as particular stress should always be placed upon the striping, or the beauty of the plumage is lost. The wing bar should be a sound black, or blue-black, free from any red edging. The secondaries should be rich bay on outer web, giving the wing end when closed a solid rich bay appearpearance. The tail should be black right down to the root of the feathers, although many birds, when examined carefully, will be found white or grey at the root of the feather, which is a grave fault, but which very often escapes the judge's eye for the want of examination. The legs and feet should be a rich orange-yellow, free from any duskiness, also free from feathers or holes in shanks where the feathers used to grow, but which are very often removed before being exhibited. The pullet should have beak, eye, comb, and leg colour the same as the cock. The ground colour throughout should be a nice soft light brown colour, not red or mahogany, as we sometimes find, although the latter colour is the prevailing one in America. The ground colour should be free from any foxiness or shaftiness, and each feather pencilled with black, the pencilling to follow the shape of the feather. This pencilling is very important, and should extend well up to the throat and right on to the roof of the tail, and be continued down the thighs as far as possible. The hackle should be orange or golden, striped with black. The legs and feet yellow, as in the cockerel, although it is a more difficult task to get a clear yellow lek on the pullets than it is in the case of cockerels. Still, mlch improvement has been made in this respect during the past twelve months.

Although what I have described are typical exhibition specimens of this variety, to mate these two together, with a view of producing birds of equal merit, would be the height of folly, for the produce from such a pair would result in quite 75 per cent. of pure wasters. For this reason I will endeavor to show our readers the best method of mating up partridge Wyandottes to produce the best of both sexes.

OUR BUFF COCHINS have demonstrated the fact that they are the best up-to-date, winning first exhibition pen, Madison Square, 1904, 1-2-3 cock, 3-4-5 hen, 1-5-6 cockerel, 1-4-5 pullet Herald Square N. Y., 1904. Also silver cup in a class of 28. A few good birds for disposal at all times. Charles Magee, Linwood St. and New Lots Ave., Brooklyn, N.Y. 88tf

BUFF COCHINS.—World's Fair champions, pronounced by the most experienced and competent critics, such as Mr. McGrew, as "the equal of any that have ever been shown in America." One cock has been described as "simply a wonder." What higher eulogy can any ambitious breeder desire! These noted birds were bred in my own yards, and I have many more like them, that I am now offering for sale at low prices, considering quality, as I do not intend to exhibit again this year. Write at once for what you want to Holmhurst Poultry Yards, Whitby, Ont., Can. (Dr. J. J. Hare, Proprietor, President of American Buff Cochin club). 82tf

Buff Plymouth Rocks

Mating for General Purposes.

By V. J. Lancaster.

The Plymouth Rock, the grandest general purpose fowl in America. Buff, make his individual flock measure up to it? We sometimes fear we are not. Ah! let us not be one-sided, but may we stand together in making them a well rounded, general purpose fowl.

To do this, we should fully understand just what is required of a general purpose fowl. The words, "general purpose," are used so often, that if we are not careful they will lose their full meaning. Let us look into it a little pleasure, but even these receive more pleasure, if their birds are yielding them a neat profit. They must be profitable or they will lose their popularity, for a breed may be a popular one and not profitable, only for a short time, but a breed can not be a profitable one and remain unpopular very long. For instance: A farmer decides to discard all his mongrels and begin raising thoroughbreds. He chooses they will try Buff Rocks for themselves, as they are after the breed that is the most profitable. We can not tell how far this influence will reach. On the other hand, if this farmer's Buff Rocks fail to be more profitable than those mongrels, he will lose his interest in them, and the next thing, he will be crossing them with something else, or get rid of them altogether. This will prove true with almost plump carcass, yellow skin, clean yellow legs, and no dark pigmet in pin feathers. These may all be combined in our Buff Rocks if we, as breeders, are not forgetful at mating time.

4th.—A general purpose fowl must be profitable under general circumstances; that is running at large, or under confinement, as pullets or hens, cocks or cockerels winter or summer, north or south.

5th.—Last, but not least, they must be fascinating to the true fancier, causing him to put forth continued efforts to steadily advance, year by year, toward the Standard requirements. With the advancement they have made in the past eleven years,they to-day stand side by side with that much older Buff variety, the Buff Cochin, possessing that soft, even, golden buff, also carrying the true Plymouth Rock shape to a remarkable degree.

Now, as a breeder of Buff Rocks understands just what is required of them as a general purpose fowl, he is prepared to mate them with an object in view. This is not boy's play; it takes brains, experience, tenaciousness, and a hat full of common sense.

Let us look into the subject of mating for general purposes. To begin with, we should have good, vigorous stock, also a picture of Ideal Plymouth Rock shape in our minds, and be very careful in the selection of our breeders, that they are near this ideal. Typical shape should be carefully guarded, that they may be Plymouth Rock and not Wyandotte, Cochin, or some other type.

We should not use a small boned bird, no matter how fine in other sections. We know from experience, it is a temptation to use a bird with fine color, comb, and carriage, but with small bone; but we have learned that it positively does not pay, as it deducts the pounds from the future stock, which count at marketing time or in the show room. Neither should we use overgrown rough birds, as their progeny will be slow maturing, and when matured are apt to be leggy like a Langshan; the point is, extremes should very seldom be used; for instance, a bird may be extra fine in a few sections and very poor in another. It is the even, all-around bird with no extreme defects, that makes the best breeder.

In selecting our females, they should invariably be good layers, for if we use drones in breeding pen year after year, it weakens one of the foundation stones of our flock. The right way is to have an egg record of every female, by the use of the trap nest; then it is easy to detect the drones and cull them out. By doing this every year, we will receive a decided increase in thir egg yield. It is absurd to think of using a poor layer, when we are striving to produce a pro[f]f Rock, for eggs are one of [p]fit-channels.

[i]tant point to observe [e]ir vitality. Only strong, should be used. We do [a] saying that many a fine greatly weakened by too may be used occasionally with safety, a bird with white undercolor in all sections, positively should not be used, no matter how fine the surface color may be, for it will undermine the strength in color. As much attention should be paid to undercolor as surface, for we cannot expect to get that soft, even shade of Golden Buff surface,if we continually breed from white undercolor. The surface color should gradually shade into the undercolor; the undercolor shade lighter from the surface to the skin, but all should be buff. There should be such a combination of the two that one cannot tell (from the shade) where surface color ends and undercolor begins. Only under certain conditions should cinnamon buff, orange buff or light lemon buff birds be used; for instance, we have some light lemon buff females which we are compelled to use as breeders, then it becomes necessary to mate them to an orange buff male, to hold the depth in color. This mating will produce a number of uneven colored birds, but a few will develop, with even, bright plumage. Neither should we use red birds. The time was when we had to do so, for he could get nothing else,but that day is past; they should go into the kettle, for we can raise or buy Buff birds to-day.

The nearer both sexes are Standard color, that is, the nearer that even shade, golden buff, from tip to tip, sound in undercolor, no white, with a little bronze in secondaries and main tail feathers, the fewer color culls we will have. Possibly there would be some question as to what we mean by Standard color. This has caused a great deal of discussion. Our opinion as to golden buff, is that shade of buff we find in a twenty dollar gold coin.

We should continually strive for the low stout comb. It is more practical, as it is not so easily frosted, and birds with frosted combs will not do well. We also think a low comb is more beautiful on a Plymouth Rock.

We, as a body of Buff Plymouth Rock breeders, should continually strive to hold them in their proper place, combining the different qualities it takes to make them the best general purpose fowl in America.

By so doing, they will steadily become one of the most popular breeds in poultrydom,filling the farmer's barnyard, taking the fancier's eye, taking the lead in numbers at the shows, filling the butcher shops with rich, yellow carcasses, filling the breeder's purse with gold.—American Buff Plymouth Rock Club Catalogue.

WHITE BRAHMA.—J. B. Romig 1 gander, 1 goose.

LENOX, MASS.

That the officers of the Lenox Poultry show did themselves proud in their 11th annual, goes without question. Every member of the society seemed to vie with each other in making it pleasant for exhibitors and visitors.

I have never seen better quality throughout than was here displayed. In Brahmas the 1st prize cockerel was a gem, and the 1st prize Partridge Cochin hen was the best pencilled hen I ever saw. Barred Rocks were large classes, with quality very even. The hen that received 1st seemed to me fit to win at any place. Whites were a good lot, but the Buffs were simply immence, Tom Briant winning all 1sts and the cups. Tom's face was simply smiles throughout the whole show. Wyandottes were good classes throughout.

Mr. Ford of Elm Court and Mr. Welch of Windhurst were in attendance with a fine lot of well shown birds.

Mr. Harder came down from Pittsfield with a fine lot of Games. Tyres' turkeys and geese were simply grand.

R. M. Dowd's Bantams seemed to feel proud of the beautiful cup they won. The show was disinfected by A. E. Bushnell of Lakeville,Ct., who seemed considerably taller after seeing the blue ribbon on his R. I. Red pullet. White Leghorns were out in force and great lot they were. A REMEDY.

Last week's American Fancier seeks a remedy for the evil of lost show birds or birds being returned home in wrong coops or shipments coming back piecemeal. There is and only can be one remedy and this is, one man being in charge of all cooping and uncooping, or, in larger shows, certain men to do all cooping and uncooping of certain classes.

The great drawback to a cool, deliberate and systematic cooping is the great body of attending fanciers themselves, who prefer to handle their own birds and store their empties in out of the way corners in order to be enabled to be "first on deck" again when the closing whistle announces when the closing whistle announces the show to be over. The fact that fanciers are as a rule men of sterling honesty is the only cause that we are not hearing of more mistakes or lost birds. Anyone who has gone through the mill, anyone who has had to coop 60 or 70 birds of his own in a short space of time in a hall holding 4,000 or more, a hall that is alive with perspiring men in shirt sleeves, coops and hampers everywhere and expressmen and city exhibitors trying to evolve themselves out of this seeming chaos with birds contracted or owned by them, knows what making return shipments means. Nothing virtually will prevent an evil disposed one from adding additional birds to his shipment, especially as the checker on the door or the express people are almost compelled to take a shipper's word for it as to the number of birds in a hamper or tightly covered or screened door coop.

The remedy lies in the one man's control only. Bar all exhibitors, express people; in fact, all from the hall except your immediate assistants and let them place all empties, having the cage number in blue or red on them, below the number given, and as soon as all coops are thus placed, begin packing. Have your entry list or catalogue—if correct, but how rarely—on hand and coop at once all other birds belonging to this same exhibitor. When this one shipment is completed and birds tally with entries, remove to one side to a place where the specified express company has or will have its stand and begin with packing for another exhibitor. Mistakes must become a rarity if the work is followed up in this manner. If any of the birds on exhibition have changed hands, former owners should be compelled to place new shipping address on coop, and if buyer is exhibitor himself, the purchase should be added to buyer's entry in red ink to enable packer to ship all of one man's birds at one time.

While this mode of packing will as a matter of course consume a little more time, yet it will pay best in the end in giving all around satisfaction.

All exhibitors should be prevented from cooping or uncooping their own birds, unless the superintendent personally checks up the entries, when a clear bill could be given. No express representatives should be allowed in the hall, say until 4 a. m. following the closing at 9 p. m. of the previous day; this will give the superintendent and his helpers a chance to arrange the different shipments for the different companies and it would be only a matter of wagon capacity to have them removed at once. It is useless for me to state that the cooping concern should be prevented from taking their coops down when still occupied by birds, and the hall rental should embrace enough time to allow live stock first and coops in second order to be removed and not as I had the calamity to witness lately, see hall owners and coop owners push the half-filled coops to one side and begin filling up the hall with things belonging to a coming attraction. Get the birds out first,then ship them, and after that allow Mr. Coop-owner to go to work and be there yourself every minute and note every bird going in his own coop, and mistakes will become a rarity.

The American Fancier.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 7, 1905.

The Johnstown (Pa.) show last week was a big surprise in number and quality of birds exhibited. If it keeps on increasing each year in the same ratio as this over the last show, the famous "Flood City" will have one of the greatest shows ever held in the Keystone state.

New York this week. Madison Square Garden is the scene. Over four thousand four hundred entries in fine birds stamp the sixteenth annual exhibition of the New York Poultry and Pigeon Association a winner.

The birds, the exhibits in other departments, the doings of the clubs, the visiting fanciers and the general round-up of this great show will be found in our issue of January 14.

The Rochester show follows New York the next week, and then Auburn N. Y., and Boston, Mass., will hold the attention of the fanciers in the east. It will be a lively three weeks, and more to follow.

In the west, Minneapolis is the star attraction after the New York show, followed a week later by the old and famous Chicago show, with Pilot Kimney at the helm. That there will be something doing at the Flour City show is a settled fact, and some facts will be settled there at the A. P. A. meeting, unless all signs fail.

Those magnificent (?) improvised coops (?) at the World's Fair cost about forty cents each. And they were to be burned after using, i. e., all but the wire fronts. There must have been money to burn with these, it seems.

Inasmuch as "the committee of three" was advertised as the A. P. A. selection, it is in order for the executive committee of the American Poultry Association to call for a report of the cooping and feeding expenses at St. Louis. The fanciers of the United States and Canada have a right to know where and why a dollar was necessary to provide such accommodations for birds as those that disgraced the World's Fair poultry exhibit.

It is the duty of the American Poultry Association to repudiate most emphatically any authority or connection whatever in this cooping business. The truth regarding the failure to provide decent coops must be told and the parties responsible for the failure to "deliver the goods" named.

There is another important matter for the American Poultry Association to consider, viz.: Is it right for a member of that body who was an official at St. Louis to make entries after the books are supposed to be closed? Is this square? Is it doing the great rank and file of poultry fanciers of America justice? Furthermore, is it right for a man to enter birds as a breeder of such when he buys them for the sole purpose to show at the World's Fair and returns them afterward to the rightful owner and breeder? We would like the fair-minded, honorable and decent members of the American Poultry Association to carefully consider all this and voice their opinions. Personally, we consider the whole business as outlined above disgraceful.

It shatters the faith of men that are real fanciers, in the integrity and good intentions of the men in control of big shows, and especially so, when they are members of the A. P. A. The fancy is built on a rock. The real fancier is rock-ribbed and a thoroughbred. He can stand any old game and will not murmur when the chances are or an even break. It is just such men, good fellows, that travel a couple of hundred miles or more to show a few birds that they bred themselves, that make poultry shows what they are. They pay the price for what they want. But they are not in love with a management that gives the professional and big exhibitor the glad hand and them the "marble heart." Discrimination in anything of this kind is doing the poultry fancy much injury and drving away many good men from our shows.

If the American Poultry Association would study the rules that govern the English Poultry Club and apply them in a modified form, there would be less of the miserable underhanded and unsportsmanlike methods that have been a blot on the fancy in a number of instances in the past five years. At least, the members of the A. P. A. found guilty of such practices could be punished. Furthermore, the societies holding shows under A. P. A. rules and failing to pay their obligations could be controlled or put out of business by rules that govern such misdeeds in England. The English Poultry Club employs an attorney for just such purposes, and it seems that most shows on the other side of the Herring pond are run on the straight and narrow path of honesty and integrity.

The usefulness of the American Poultry Association can be made everlastingly powerful by adopting the suggestions embodied in the above paragraphs.

Messrs. J. H. Boschen & Bro. 246 Fulton street, New York, have sold the entire stock, fixtures and good will of their business to Mr. Edward R. Donovan, late of Hecker-Jones-Jewell Milling Co. and Mr. William A. Burns, Jr., late of the New York City Milling Co. The new firm of Donovan & Burns will continue the business, having practical experience, combined with increased facilities and ample supply of goods, gives assurance that the established reputation for good quality will be maintained and the generous patronage accorded to the old firm in the past will be carefully looked after. The writer of these notes has known the Messrs. Boschen ever since The American Fancier started in 1893, and they have been steady advertisers year after year. Their reputation has been their trademark, and the quality of the goods they sell has pleased many of the readers and buyers of The American Fancier family. As their successors are built on the same lines, the high standard set will be maintained.

(Concluded from last week.)

Partridge Wyandottes are one of those breeds where two separate pens are necessary to produce the best results. To breed the best exhibition cockerels it is necessary to have the male bird approaching as near as possible to the Ideal I have already described, and the larger the bird the better, both for exhibition and stock as well. To this cockerel I should mate the largest hens or early hatched pullets procurable, but on no account use under sized hens or late hatched pullets, or the produce will be small and weedy. They should have good combs, sound clear leg color, and the more bone the better, and, moreover, should possess the true Wyandotte shape. For it is from the female side that shape in the produce is influenced. The neck hackle should have the distinct striping, with the rich golden edge. The body color should be dark brown, and the less pencilling the better. To give the best resultsn ot more than three or four hens or pullets should be mated to one cockerel.

In pullet breeding the most important item in your mating, and one upon which a great deal of your future success depends, is to know that the male bird has been bred from a pure pullet-breeding pen, and if he be the son of a Palace or International winning hen all the better for your purpose. Such a bird is a darker brickish color in hackles, more of a one shade of top color, which does not show the contrast between the color of the back and the hackles, as in the case of a cock-breeding cockerel. In all probability he will show more or less ticking on breast and fluff, and should he show signs of pencilling on thighs,you can safely use him in your pullet-breed pen, as he is all the more likely to sire well-pencilled pullets. The hens or pullets to match him should be as near as possible to what I have already described in the exhibition pullet, and, when possible, always select the largest and best shaped ones.

The following season it will be advisable to reserve one or two cockerels produced from this pen, for future pullet breeding, to mate back to the year old hens, and use the old cock with the best of his daughters. In this manner you are not only going on the right lines, but you are building up a strain of your own, which can be relied upon at all times to give the best results. It is a well-known fact that where color and markings play such an important part, as in the case of Wyandottes, it is absolutely necessary to adhere strictly to the same strain.

If those of our readers who are desirous of embarking in this most fashionable and popular variety of Wyandotte will only take the trouble to read, mark, and inwardly digest all I have said in this short article, and follow out to the letter the lines laid down therein for their guidance when mating up their pens, they can take my word for it that when the awards go up they will have no cause for regret. Breeding Partridge Wyandottes is not the easiest task imaginable to produce birds true to color; far from it. For they are as difficult as most breeds, and more so than many.

If the young fancier imagines for one moment that he is going to mate up a pen costing but a few pounds,that is going to turn out forty pounders at every hatch, let him dismiss the thought from his mind at once, for such birds are only produced even by the most experienced breeders, and then only at the rate of one in fifty at most. To those who have never before kept Partridge Wyandottes I strongly advise them to start in a small way. The outlay on three really good birds will pay you infinitely better than three times the number of second raters.

Be content to devote your first season to one pen only, whether cockerel breeding or pullet breeding, whichever you fancy, but do not try to produce exhibition specimens of both sexes from the same pen, for it cannot be done.

If at the end of the breeding season you find that you have been able to produce a fair percentage of birds equal to those with which you commenced, rest content and assured that you have, at any rate, hit on the right lines, which, if persevered in, will lead you on to ultimate success.—P. Proud in the Feathered World, England.

CANADA'S GREATEST SHOW.

(From The Poultry Advocate, London, Ont.)

History will record the recent Ontario Show as the largest ever held up till December, 1904, in Canada, there being over 3,100 birds on exhibition, surpassing in every respect the gigantic, loosely-jointed, poorly-managed show held in Montreal some few years ago. This great provincial event is becoming greater each year, and is practically a Dominion or National show, as its exhibits include the best this grand country produces. If the show of 1905 at Guelph is as much larger than the one just past, as it was larger than that of 1903, some different arrangements will have to be made to accommodate the exhibits, if the same system of arranging the coops is adopted, as all available space this year was used.

It would be impossible through these columns to convey to our readers who could not visit the show an adequate conception of the magnitude of the splendid exhibition just past,but we will endeavor to make a few remarks in way of explanation that will help to form in the minds of our readers a rude outline of the show.

In the first place, the weather was everything that could be desired, there being no snow to prevent the exhibits and exhibitors reaching the show in good time, and no severe weather to prevent the usual immense crowd from visiting the extremely interesting and educative exhibition, therefore the door-receipts were all that could be expected,and everything in connection with the management passed along without, to our knowledge, a single hitch taking place.

The immense and commodious exhibition hall is located on the market, and is connected with the city hall. It is two-stories high,and about 200 feet long by 100 feet wide. On the ground floor the cattle and swine exhibits were arranged, also the lecture-room, killing-room and secretary's office. The second floor was occupied by the poultry, pigeons and pet stock, in one large apartment; the sheep in another, while the dressed poultry had still another, which was kept at outside temperature. The poultry was cooped in pairs, and the coops arranged two-thick, in tiers the length of the building, broken only once, about the middle, by the stairs and poultry supply exhibits. Most of the coops used were of the best kind, being made of galvanized iron with wire fronts; the balance were of wood with round wooden rungs in front. These latter ones will, no doubt, be replaced another year by the galvanized-iron kind, which will make the cooping still more uniform.

Mr. John Saunders, as usual, was superintendent of the poultry department, and along with his assistants, did their work well and gave the best of care to the poultry and general satisfaction to the exhibitors. The building was kept clean, and disinfected daily. The feed used was of the very best procurable, and was judiciously given to the birds. As regards the temperature of the showroom, it was kept very comfortable for those in attendance, but a trifle too warm for the birds. The judging was commenced at 9 a. m. Tuesday, Dec. 6, and was completed that day, to the satisfaction of most of the exhibitors, although a few were not satisfied, and in some instances, they had just cause for being dissatisfied. Canada's well-known and popular judge, Mr. Sharp Butterfield, of Windsor, Ont., placed the awards on all Games and Game Bantams, Ornamental Bantams and Buff Leghorns, while all Polands, Dorkings, French, Ducks and Geese,and Partridge Wyandottes were handled by the veteran judge, Mr. L. G. Jarvis of Montreal. Mr. T. H. Smelt, Woodstock, Ont., another well-known Canadian judge, placed the ribbons on all Leghorns, except Buffs, all Hamburgs, Red Caps, Spanish, Andalusians and White Minorcas, while all Wyandotte classes, but Partridge, were allotted to one of our younger judges, Mr. T. H. Scott, of St. Thomas, Ont., who has, by the way, been a very successful breeder of Wyandottes for years. Mr. Richard Oke, of London, another of our young and promising poultry experts, judged all Asiatics (but Partridge Cochin), Buff Orpingtons and Black Minorcas, while still another young and rising judge, in the person of Mr. Newton Cosh, of Port Dover, Ont., passed his opinion on Javas (all varieties), American Dominiques, Cross Breeds and any other variety of fowls. All varieties of turkeys were handled by the turkey-expert, Mr. Anderson; all pigeons by Charles Wegner, and all pet stock by "Brother Donovan," who made such a high score, shown in "A trio of our World's Fair Winners from Canada," and appearin in the last Review.

ONTARIO POULTRY ASSOCIATION.

The annual meeting of the Ontario Poultry Association was held in the city hall, Guelph, on Thursday, Dec. 8, at 1:30 p. m. A large number were in attendance. Mr. William McNeil occupied the presiding chair.

After the minutes of the last annual meeting were disposed of, the secretary-treasurer's report was read, and showed a nice balance on hand.

Much interest was taken in the election of officers, which resulted as follows: President, Wm. McNeil, London; first vice-president, A. Bogue, London; second vice-president, M. T. Burn, Tillsonburg; directors, L. H. Baldwin (Toronto), A.Tyson (Guelph), G. G. Henderson (Hamilton), N. Cosh (Port Dover), P. Grier (Owen Sound), Richard Oke (London), Dr. Coates (Thamesville), H. C. Wilson (Hawkerton), W.R. Graham (O. A. C., Guelph); auditor,Thos. Duff; delegates to Industrial Exhibition, W. Barber and W. McNeil; delegates to Western Fair, J. H. Saunders and W. H. Beattie; delegates to Brantford Fair, J. M. Minshall and George Caldwell; delegates to Winter Fair, Wm. McNeil and A. Tyson.

Three candiates were nominated for president, viz.: R. Bogue, Wm. McNeil and M. T. Burn, and the election was made by ballot, John Crow and J. W. Kedwell acting as scrutineers, and resulted as follows: Wm. McNeil 40, A. Bogue 9, and M. T. Burn 7. Some important changes were made in the board of directors. The district formerly represented by James Dundas,will this year be represented by L. H. Baldwin. P Grier was elected in place of John Ramsay, Newton Cosh in place of T. H. Scott, and Dr. Coates instead of J. W. Kedwell. The last change was made necessary on account of Mr. Kedwell moving out of the district to London.

At the meeting of the board of directors, which was held immediately after the annual meeting, Mr. Westervelt was re-appointed secretary-treasurer, and some important changes were made in the prize list, viz.: Barred Plymouth Rock novice and cross breeds were struck off the list, and R. C. Black Minorcas, Black Orpingtons, Sumatra Games, Black Japanese Bants and Unbeards White Polish Bants were added to the list. Some changes were made in the pigeon list, and two classes added. Where the prize list now reads: "Black and White Turkeys." Black was struck out, therefore, hereafter, the Black variety will have to be shown in the A. O. V. class.

A motion was passed to make it possible in future for the secretary to accept entries arriving within a week after closing date, by charging exhibitors 50 per cent. extra for such entries.

THE LECTURES.

A very interesting part of the programme at the Winter Fair was the lectures of Tuesday evening in the lecture room, by expert poultrymen, on various subjects pertaining to the great poultry industry. Commencing at 8 o'clock, the first thing on the evening's programme was a lecture by Mr. F. C. Elford, chief poultry division, Ottawa, on "A Modern Poultry House for the Farmer," and a discussion by J. W. Clark, Cainsville, Ont. These gentlemen, assisted by drawings of various plans of poultry houses on canvas, endeavored to describe the different plans in detail, and explaining the good qualities of each, also giving the amount and kind of material used in constructing each, and cost per running foot. After hearing these gentlemen, a poultry raiser could not possibly go away without feeling that he had grasped some new ideas, even if his own poultry house was the best in the country, in his estimation.

Next was a lecture by Mr. W. R.Graham, manager poultry department, O. A. C., Guelph, on "Winter Egg Production," in which he explained in detail how to house, feed and care for the flock to procure the most eggs in winter. Mr. Graham terms himself a fresh-air crank, and explained to his large audience the important part pure air plays in keeping the flock in perfect health, and in assisting in filling the winter egg basket. Prof. A. G.Gilbert, manager poultry department, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, was to have been present, but for some reason was detained. The subject, "Future of the Poultry Industry, with Particular Reference to the Export Trade," was to have been dealt with by Mr. Gilbert, but in his absence Mr. Graham took up the subject. Mr. Graham also gave "Results of Experiments of 1904," which proved very interesting and instructive.

Mr. G. R. Cottrell, Milton, also gave an address, and put forth many good ideas. These lectures should prove of great benefit to the great and growing industry, which has before it the brightest of prospects. Much interest was taken in the addresses by the immense crowd of listeners, and many questions were fired at the speakers, which brought out much valuable information.

THE BANQUET.

As usual ,the Guelph Poultry Association tendered the visiting fanciers a banquet at one of the leading hotels of the city. A splendid toast list and programme were provided, and a very enjoyable time was spent by all who attended. Space will not permit us giving a full report of this interesting social gathering.

THE BIRDS.

The quality of stock at this show was the best ever seen in Canda, and reflects great credit on Canadian breeders. Few classes on the prize list were not well represented. White Plymouth Rocks were the largest class in the show, closely followed by the Barred variety. Other very large classes were Buff Orpingtons, White Wyandottes, S. C. White Leghorns and S. C. Brown Leghorns.

Space and time will not permit us saying much about the birds; however, we will make a few comments on the winners in some of the largest classes.

Barred Plymouth Rocks (open and novice) numbered 160 birds, and proved to the public that their old-time popularity had not in the least diminished. Quality was equal to any Ontario Show in the past. First cock, a bird to be proud of, was medium in size and shape, and hard to beat; very evenly and narrowly barred all over and down to the skin; comb medium in size and evenly serrated, also grand legs. Second cock was a trifle on the small size, but grand in shape and nice in color, comb small, legs good. This was a good cock, but color of plumage not as even or legs as yellow as winner's, but back shape the best in class. Fourth was evenly barred and about the correct shade; shape fair. Fifth, a low-set cock, and a trifle on the small side, was nicely barred and to the skin. First hen, a beauty in every respect, shape and color, hard to beat, comb and head points grand, also legs, won easily over balance of class. Second, a very nice hen in shape, was evenly barred, with broad barring, legs good. Third, a medium-sized one and good in shape and barring; fourth hen, grand in shape, being very deep in breast; legs might be better in color: fifth, a medium-sized hen, short in back, nicely barred. First cockerel, a medium-sized, well-developed one, color comb and legs good, was a trifle flat in breast; second a medium-sized cockerel, short in legs and blocky, nicely barred; third cockerel a neat little bird, evenly barred right down to the skin, a little flat in breast shape; fourth, undeveloped, but will make a large one, well barred; fifth a neat medium-sized one. First and second pullets, both large and beautifully barred all over, had good combs and legs; third, small, but a good one. Fourth, well-developed but small; nicely barred, legs willow in color. Fifth, a small neat one, well barred, with good legs and comb.

Barred Novice.—First cock and hen (in one coop) were good ones, worthy of honors received, both well barred; cock blocky in shape; hen carries too large a comb; second cock large and well barred, but too long in back; third a large cock and in good show shape, well barred, legs willow in front color. Second hen was a grand large one and evenly barred all over; beak and legs good. Other winning hens fair. First cockerel was a nice large one, with good color, shape fair except tail, which is carried too high; comb, legs and beak good; second, a nice dark, evenly barred one, only three spikes in comb, beak and legs good in color; third, a nice, neatly barred little fellow, a little narrow in shape, head good. First and second pullets were nice large ones, and well barred; third also good and well barred; other winners fair.

White Plymouth Rocks—One very noticeable feature about this, the largest class in the show, was the largeness of the individual birds. First cock and hen (in same coop) were magnificent birds and easy winners, being very large and as white as snow, grand legs; second cock very large, grand in shape and color, comb a trifle large and legs not yellow enough; second hen, very large and snow white in color. The same remarks as made about second hen would apply to third; fourth, a good shaped bird and large; first cockerel, a large snow-white bird with good legs; second good in color of legs and plumage; third, a beauty in shape, with a good comb, leg color might be better. First pullet was very large and grand in color and shape; legs good. Second and third pullets, nice ones and white; fourth, a choice one, but thrown down for black spot in hackle.

Buff Plymouth Rocks was a comparatively small class of choice quality. First cock a very nice one in every respect; second and third ones very even in color. Winning hens were very large and even in color, especially first hen. First cockerel, a choice one, light even buff in color, shape good; second also a beauty, being very large and even in color. Winning pullets were all good, but might have been better in evenness of surface color.

White Wyandottes.—This was a very large class of choice quality. First hen an exceptionally nice one, large and white as snow; second hen short and a true Wyandotte in shape; third a neat one and very white, grand in legs and head points. First cockerel a nice one, was very white, shape good with the exception of tail, which was too long; second had the same shape defect as first—tail too long; comb smaller and neater than first; third a large, stylish bird, but not white; fourth, a neat, stylish bird, but had same defect as first and second; fifth, poor in color. An unplaced cockerel belonging to J. S. Martin was, in our estimation, best in class. First pullet a gem in both shape and color; head, comb and legs also good; second also a choice one, but had not as good leg color as first; other placed pullets all worthy birds.

Golden Wyandottes were a nice-sized class of good birds. First cock-splendid in shape, color good, especially breast lacing; comb medium in size and even on head; second, nice in color, but poor in shape. First hen was medium in size and very openly laced; second larger and deeper in body, but not as nicely laced as first. First cockerel and pullet (same coop) choice ones, very rich in color, lacing good; second cockerel only fair; second pullet a very neat one and laced beautifully.

Silver Wyandottes—First cock was only fair, poor in shape and breast color; second better in shape, breast beautifully laced, but back color poor. First and second hens were nice open laced ones. First cockerel a very nice open laced bird. First and second pullets large and shape good, lacing open.

In Black Wyandottes those most worthy of mention were first cock and hen. Winning chicks fair.

Buff Wyandottes—First cock and hen were all around good birds. Winning chicks all good; a nice even lot in color.

Partridge Wyandottes—First cock grand in shape, good hackle and saddle lacing; second and third were also good ones, in shape as good as cocks in older varieties of Wyandottes. Winning hens were good Wyandottes in shape and pencilled beautifully, especially first hen. Winning chicks all worthy birds.

Dominiques and Javas were nice classes. First cockerel in Dominiques was the pick of the lot, being large. The first Black Java hen was very large and good in color. First black cockerel was a very promising one. The Mottled Javas with red ribbons were all good birds.

Light Brahmas were a good-sized class, but in our estimation quality was not up to former years. First cock very low set and well laced in hackle, too much black in saddle and wing bows; second cock very large, longer in legs than first and whiter in plumage; third and fourth nice large ones. First hen was very large and in good show trim, color good all over; second not as large as first, but good in color and sape. First cockerel was a fine, large, well-developed one, with good color; second a neat one in splendid shape, head points good, third and fourth cockerels worthy birds. First pullet, a good one in color and shape, but was not large; second one a little larger than first and good in other respects.

Dark Brahmas.—First cock was tall and large, color good, also head points, feet and leg feathering good; second cock a nice one, but not as large or in as good trim as first. First hen was a beauty, being well pencilled all over and having grand foot feathering; second hen a trifle larger than first, but too heavily feathered, and not as nicely penciled. First cockerel a large well-developed one, grand in color; second a nice, neat one, but not as large as first; third very young and undeveloped. First pullet was young but beautifully penciled; second larger and more developed.

Buff Cochins.—First cock an easy winner, being an even light buff all over, was very heavily feathered, head points and shape hard to improve on; second cock a large bird, but not in as good condition as first, very heavily feathered, but a shade dark in color; third, large, but also a trifle dark in color. First hen was also an easy winner and a light, even buff all over, very heavily feathered; second hen also a large, heavily-feathered one, but poor in comb, and not as even in color, as first; third hen even in color, but not as large as others. In chicks as well as in adult fowls, quality seemed to be monopolized by one exhibitor. First and second cockerels, and first, second and third pullets shown by one exhibitor, were very much alike, being large and very even in color all over. First cockerel was very board and blocky. First and second pullets were extremely heavily feathered; third pullet very smooth and a shade lighter in color; third cockerel a nice blocky bird, but a few shades too dark in color.

Partridge Cochins.—First cock was good in shape and had color to burn; second larger than first, but lacked in shape. First hen was heavily feathered and grand in color, being of the proper shade, and very evenly penciled; second nice in shape and penciling. First cockerel very young and undeveloped, but will make a good one; second a blocky little fellow. First and second pullets nice ones and well penciled.

Black Cochins.—Winning old birds were good, but not in good show shape. Winning chicks good color, but undeveloped.

White Cochins.—First cock was very heavily feathered and good in color. All winning hens nice in shape and feathering; first very white. Chicks were nice classes, winners in good shape and very white.

Langshans.—First black cock was very large and tall, and color to burn; second cock was a grand bird and large, but a little too long in back. First hen was very large and grand in color; second also very large and clean in color. First cockerel was very large and well developed; as was also the second cockerel; second was a trifle taller than first. The pullet winning the red ribbon was a magnificent one in every respect. Second was not as large or as well developed as first. Whites were a small class, the most noteworthy bird being the red ribbon hen, a nice large one.

Games.—Black B. Reds were a good class. First cock and hen were worthy birds. First cockerel was a good one, being tall and reachy; quality and color of feather hard to beat. We noticed several entry tickets on Black Reds that read Brown Reds which was very misleading to those uneducated in gameology. Brown Reds, Duckwings and Pyles were all well represented, and the ribbon bearers were all good birds. In Indian Games first cock and first and second hens were exceptionally good, as also were the first chicks. In A. O. V. Games the red ribbons went to some nice Sumatras.

Leghorns.—In R. C. Whites many choice birds were shown. This variety seems to be growing in popularity very fast. The red ribbon in each case went to choice birds. Single Comb Whites were certainly a very interesting class and contained lots of quality. First cock was a large bird with a nice clean face, and carried a large straight comb, color might be better; second cock a good one and might have changed places with first. First and second hens were good Leghorns in shape and had the required color. First cockerel and pullet were very good ones, but others were close to them. Second cockerel was in our estimation the equal of the first. Winning pullets were all worthy of the honors received. Blacks were a fair class, and winners all good birds, especially first cockerel and pullet. R. C. Brown Leghorns, like the R. C. Whites, are growing in popularity very fast in Canada, and a nice class was to be seen. Many complaints about the judging in this class were made. The winning birds were all fairly good in quality, but many good ones were left unplaced. S. C. Browns were a very large class and represented all the best breeders in the country. Winners were all choice birds. First cockerel a good one and well striped in hackle. First pullet was a very nice one, also many other good ones in class. Buffs were a nice even lot, and the winners in both old and young classes were grand in quality.

Black Minorcas were a very large class and were about equally made up of Rose Combs and Single Combs. A special class will be provided next year for the Rose comb variety. Practically all the prizes in the open class went to the Single Comb variety, but the Rose Combs came in for some special prizes. The winners in both varieties were very large and good representatives of the varieties. White Minorcas were the smallest class in the show. As the ribbons were taken down early Friday afternoon we were unable to get any notes on the winners in the balance of the exhibition.

Buff Orpingtons were one of the largest classes in the show and contained scores of birds fit to win in most shows.

All varieties of Game and Ornamental Bantams were well represented with the best Canada produces.

Belgian Hare and Rabbit classes were all represented with good animals, but unfortunately there was no competition and all the honors went to one man.

WATER-FOWL AT WINTER FAIR.

Toulouse geese, a class of 24, and to say that every one is a first-class specimen, is perfectly correct. Bremens were even better in numbers, making a class of 25, but quality all through was hardly as good as in Toulouse. Rouen ducks numbered 23,some of the best I have ever seen, and quality taken all through, very godo. Pekins, a large class of 30, and while this class carried many fine specimens, the quality, taken all through, has been better here, more especially in young. Aylesbury only totaled 13, but quality very choice, the winners at St. Louis again getting to top here. Indian Runners, 11 in number and good quality. A. O. V. made 12, and I greatly admired the seconds in old, a pair of white-crested whites. Muscovy, 23, and Cayugas, 22, the latter being very choice, and is one of the most handsome ducks on the list. W. J. BELL.

Our readers are always interested in portraits of those whose labors have had much to do with making the poultry interests what they are to-day. There are names we almost expect to see when we look at the advertising pages of the poultry journals, and that of G. E. Conkey is one of them, the founder of the firm of G. E. Conkey & Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, manufacturers of the celebrated Conkey's Roup Cure. We are pleased to present our readers this month an excellent portrait of this gentleman.

About ten years ago this remedy was first brought before the notice of the public. Up to that time the dreaded disease, roup, had been little understood, and as this remedy was sold under an absolute guarantee that as long as the fowl could see to drink (it is given in the drinking water) it would effect a cure, it naturally was not long in establishing a record that has grown with years of good management until now 'tis advertised in the entire Poultry Press and is used in every civilized country in the world. That Mr. Conkey has made a wonderful success of this business is evidenced that with the growing popularity of this roup Cure case demands from poultry and stockmen for other remedies, and you will now find at their office in Cleveland a well equipped Labratory wherein is manufactured Lice Liquid, Lice Powder Lice Ointment, Egg Producer and Poultry Tonic, Teroline (disinfectant), Fly Knocker, Mange Balsam, Distemper Cure and Conditioner.

They now have nearly 1,000 agents representing the best Poulery Supply houses in the country, together with hundreds of druggists and general merchandise merchants. Besides this thei mail order trade is something enormous, thousands of packages going postpaid to poultrymen everywhere. The success of Mr. G. E. Conkey is but a just reward for perseverance and determination to make a success out of an article of merit, and those who have used his remedies will be pleased to become better acquainted with him by the publication of this portrait.

...Suggestions for Poultry Profits...

Eggs and Poultry are both commanding a higher price to-day than ever before, and for this reason, if for no other, you should supply your fowls with the best obtainable foods for a satisfactory output of eggs. In feeding poultry it is wise to bear in mind that the cheapest food is not that which COSTS THE LEAST, but rather that which gives the BEST RESULTS Your poultry should not only be supplied with good and sufficient food, but also the Kind of Food that is Adapted to the Purpose for which the fowls are kept. Eggs.—Receipts for week, 30,916 cases. Following a drop all along the line there has been a corresponding rise in prices, just enough nearby fresh has arrived to whet the appetite of those who buy the best and pay for it, to create a demand slightly beyond the supply. Fresh western is much in evidence, and at the new price has been in demand the past week. We quote: Nearby fancy selected, 35 to 38c. per dozen; choice grades, not equal to first quotations, 32 to 34c.; fancy mixed, 30 to 31c.; western, close graded fancy, 28c.; average shipments, 27c.; Kentucky, 20 to 27c.; Tennessee and other southern, 20 to 27c.; refrigerator, 19 to 21c.; dirty eggs, 16 to 19c.; cracked, 15 to 16c.

Live poultry.—Receipts, 27 cars. Fowls, nearby and western, 11½c per lb; southern, 11c.; chickens, nearby and western, 10c.; turkeys,12c to 13c.; ducks, western, per pair, 70c to 80c.; southern, 60c to 65c.; geese, western, per pair, $1.62 to $1.75; southern, $1.25 to $1.35; live pigeons, 20c per pair.

Dressed Poultry.—Receipts, 34,616 pkgs. We quote: Phila. Capons, large fancy, 23 to 24c. per lb.; western and others, 18 to 20c.; dry packed turkeys, Maryland and Delaware, fancy, per lb., 21c.; fair to prime, 18 to 20c.; state and Pennsylvania, fancy, 20c.; fair to prime, 17 to 18c.; Ohio and Michigan, young, scalded, fancy, 18 to 19c.; western, dry picked and young hens, fancy, 19c.; mixed weights, 19c.; good working lines, 18c.; poor to fair, 15 to 17c.; old hens and toms, 16 to 17c. The receipts of eggs in this market for the last day of the year was 4,115 cases, and for the entire year, 3,363,632 cases, a total of 40,363,584 dozen, which being sold at a uniform price of 20 cents a dozen would yield $8,072,716.80. The average price of fresh gathered nearby eggs has been about 29c a dozen for the past year, and furnishes an eloquent object lesson for the thinking man. Nine cents a dozen ought to go far toward encouraging every egg producer to step lively and rush his product to market while the new look is still on them.

While on the subject of markets and big figures let me say no poultryman need be disheartened because his ranch accommodates only hundreds where others have thousands, and that he must carry the feed to them, and tote his product in the primitive ways of his daddy, while his neighbor shunts his in on a pony railway elevated above his yards.

There must ever be a commencement; no eighty acre poultry farm grew in a day. It is the result of constant additions and an expanding market. The capacity of a plant is not what it can grow, but what it can prepare for market and sell at a profit. If one were to raise a thousand ducks and could only find customers for five hundred of them, the capacity of his plant would be the smaller figure. The market that pays no profit is no better than no market at all. That is where the big ranches came into existence, where the returns were encouraging they expanded, but the failures, those who failed to find an appreciative market, they close up like a jackknife.

On Saturday night a party of citizens, who formerly breathed the free and untainted air of the country, got into conversation on poultry matters, which, as it was holiday time, naturally turned to turkey raising. Said one, "At home we used to raise flocks of two and three hundred every season, but of late years we were able to raise none. When six weeks old they would begin to sneeze and all would die."

Now will our turkey raising friends from Seneca Falls kindly put their money in their pockets long enough to tell us what is the name of this disease which decimates whole flocks, what causes it and what will cure it?

REDCAPS.

There can be little doubt that the Redcap is one of the oldest of our breeds of poultry, yet very little appears to be known about its origin. Most writers suggest that it has been bred from the gold spangled Hamburgh, and it would appear that it was the outcome of crossing and selecting this variety of the Hamburgh with the black red Game fowl. In some parts of the country it is known as the Derbyshire Redcap, Yorkshire Redcap, Old English Redcap,Crammer, Moss Pheasant, Pheasant fowl, and so forth; but no matter under which heading it appears, the breed is generally a great favourite wherever it is kept. Years ago Yorkshire used to be noted for Redcaps, and classes were provided for them at many of the shows. Since however, the Hamburgh gained such a footing in that country the Redcap has been very much neglected, and it is only at two or three shows held by agricultural societies that specimens are penned, and where classes are provided for them at exhibitions they are generally well filled.

Considering the breed from a utility standpoint, it ranks chiefly as a layer, and in this respect gets very near the top. Good stock will, on an average, not fall very far short of two hundred eggs a hen a year. The chickens are very precocious, pullets often commencing to lay at eighteen weeks old. It is, however, not tdvisable to encourage them tos tart so early, as it stops their good sized eggs, and scarcely ever cease laying in the winter, except in the most severe weather. The hens are non-sitters,and the eggs are white-shelled. The chickens are very easily reared, and can be safely brought out in late winter and early spring; in fact, they grow better in the earlier months of the year than when the weather gets hot. In hardiness the Redcap is almost equal to the old Game fowl, and very little inferior to that bird for table purposes, the body being plump and carrying a large amount of meat with very little offal, while in flavour is like that of game. Being of a very active disposition, the fowls require unlimited range; otherwise they are apt to mope, and lose that bright lively look which is one of the beauties of the breed.

There is only one variety of Redcap, and it can practically be described as a black red. The cock's head is broad, the beak short and stout, the comb very large, and of the rose eype, measuring in good specimens 3 in. or 4in. across and from 5 in. to 6 in. long to end of spike, and standing perfectly erect on the skull, with a straight leader. The ear-lobes are of medium size, the wattles fairly long and well rounded, and the eyes bright. The neck is well arched, and the hackle full. The body is broad in front, the breast well rounded, the saddle hackle very long, hanging well over the wings and the tail large and flowing. with abundance of side sickles. The wings are fairly long and closely tucked, the thighs short, the shanks stout and smooth, and the toes well spread. The hen's comb is about 2 in. broad. well spiked, and perfectly erect, but in other respects the female resembles her mate.

The cock is as nearly as possible the same colour as the black red Game cock of thirty years ago. The neck hackle and saddle are of a much darker red than those of the black red Game of the present day, and showing a little of the black under-colour; in fact, those of the best specimens are generally striped with black. The back is dark red spangled with black, and the wings are dark red with a black bar across them, while the tail, under parts, and breast are black. The ground colour of the hen is darkish nut-brown, free from smuttiness, and well marked with black half-moon spangling all over the body, almost like the gold spangled Hamburgh hen, while the neck hackle is black, well laced with golden red.

Cocks weigh about 8 lb, and hens 6 lb. In both sexes the beak is horn colour, the eyes, comb, face, lobes, and watles bright red, and the shanks slate colour. Comb and colour rank as of equal importance in exhibition specimens, after which size follows, then style and shape, and condition.—Poultry, England.

Kent, N. Y.

Success and system are inseparable companions in poultry raising.

A hen in the "hennery" is worth a dozen in a tree this time of year, when eggs are wanted.

Take four ounces of commercial glycerine, one ounce of alcohol, and ten drops of turpentine, and put in bottle, to use if combs of fowls get frosted. Without the turpentine, the mixture is fine to put on combs and wattles of birds just as they are shipped to shows—helps keep out the frost, and brightens the combs and makes them brilliant red.

If eggs were sold by weight, instead of by the dozen, there are some breeds that would soon become deservedly popular, that are now little appreciated.

"Which is the best breed?" The one the reader fancies—each reader. There is as much in the man as in the breed. The breed a man fancies is the one that is going to be the "best" with him every time.

Keeping too many breeds by beginners is a sure way to end in failure. Learn one breed thoroughly before starting with another, and be sure you know how to get the best results from the breed you keep.

Select and re-select your breeders. It is economy to breed from a few fine specimens. Quality counts more than quantity in the poultry yard.

Remember the lousy hen will live all winter, lay no eggs, and will die in the spring. The hen can't help it, but her care-taker might.

Constant care is what counts in keeping poultry. Haphazard methods never bring paying results.

Cut clover hay very fine, (short) cover with boiling water, let stand half an hour, pour off water, let it steam a little, then add some middlings or wheat bran, stir thoroughly, and feed in troughs, while warm. Noontime is best.

A colored man was engaged helping me by getting fowls out of the coops in Augusta show. He got a young darkey to help him, who commenced to "yank" them out by the neck. "Heah, heah, boy," shouted the old darkey. "Yer hain't grabbin' chickens in de night; cotch 'em by de laigs."

Extra cold nights, when the temperature gets about zero, it is a good plan to remove all the roosts, provide a bountiful supply of dry litter and make the fowls "huddle." It will prevent the freezing of feet and combs in quite cold houses.

Oh, the snow, the beautiful snow,
How I wish it all would go,
And never come back any more.
It keeps all of the hens
Close shut in their pens,
And shoveling makes my back sore.

GEYER'S SCURVY CURE FOR POULTRY was the first article introduced to the public for this purpose, which has been thoroughly tested in the last ten years by many of our brother fanciers who are willing to say with us that there is no other article on the market like this that can be relied on to do its work properly. It is something that the poultry fancier, who appreciates his fine birds, needs very much. What looks more disgraceful than a fine flock of chickens, many, or all of them, having their legs coated with a thick, hard, scabby crust which is called scurvy? It spoils the appearance of the birds and is very annoying to them. It is also contagious. Here we have a sure cure for this ugly disease. By following the directions we guarantee that it will take off that ugly, hard coat and leave the legs clean and smooth and give them their natural color. It also has no equal for healing sores and frosted combs and wattels. It makes them very bright and red. It is just what the exhibitor wants to prepare his birds for the exhibition room. Some of our customers tell us that they have tried it with good results for weak legs. We only ask you to give it a trial. It is put up in tin boxes. Money must accompany all orders. Price, 25 cents. Address, G. A. Geyer, Florin, Pa. 560tf

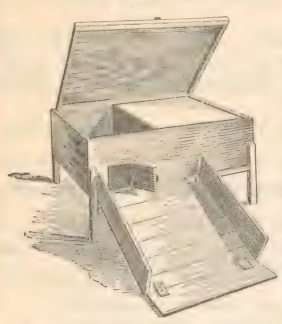
Extends Greeting and Wishes Everybody a Happy and Prosperous 1905.

Storm King Outdoor Brooder, Two Sizes, 50 and 100 chicks, $6.00 and $8.00 each.



The past year (1904) has been by far the most successful and progressive in the history of this company, and we have always made it our business to "set the pace." We have made many important new additions to our line and have materially improved all old patterns. "Competition is the Life of Trade," and for the year 1905 we Challenge Competition both as to Quality and Prices.

1905 PATTERN INCUBATORS $6.50 TO $60.00 EACH

The New Improved Thermostat and Regulating Device of the 1905 pattern Standard Cyphers Incubators, is the highest type of scientific self-adjustment, combined with durability and practical working value that has ever been applied to an incubator. You can't make it go wrong. It is set right in the factory and stays that way. The Patented Exclusive Features of Cyphers Incubators, enable us to positively warrant and guarantee all Standard Cyphers, Patent-Diaphragm, Non-moisture, Self-ventilating, and Self-regulating Incubators. Sold under registered trade mark. The following guarantee backs every sale made by this company or any of its authorized agents:

1905 Guarantee: That each and every Standard Cyphers Incubator we send out will do satisfactory work in the hands of the purchaser, provided he will give it a fair trial, or it can be returned to us, within ninety (90) days, in good repair, less reasonable wear, and purchase price will be returned.

Hare-Curtis Hygienic Brooder, 60 to 75 chicks, all complete, $7.50.

The Cyphers Company's New Policy

This Company, both as a matter of pride and a matter of profit, is determined to serve faithfully the interests of its customers to the limit of its ability. It is the habit of the business world to enlarge its profits to the greatest possible extent—and pocket the proceeds! Cyphers Incubator Company is conducting its business on a different plan.

During the coming season it positively will share its profits with its customers.

A LARGE REDUCTION IN THE PRICE OF STANDARD CYPHERS INCUBATORS has been made possible by reducing "the cost of production," as the direct result of increased capital, a larger manufacturing plant and improved machinery. In keeping with our new policy we now offer our patrons the large saving we have accomplished, and quote the following low prices on our Standard Incubators for 1905:

Our $14.—60 Egg Size Incubator for - $12.00.
Our $20.—120 Egg Size Incubator for - - - $17.00.
Our $58.—440 Egg Size Double Decker Incubator for $48.00.
Our $29.—220 Egg Size Incubator for - - - $24.00.
Our $37.—360 Egg Size Incubator for - - - $30.00.
Our $78.—720 Egg Size Double Decker Incubator for $60.00.

Two Special Low Priced Incubators: Farm-Economy, 100 Egg Capacity, $10.00. Boy's Choice, 50 Egg Capacity, $6.50. These are practical, reliable hatchers with nothing cheap about them but the price. Two New Styles of Brooders: Storm King, an outdoor brooder, two sizes, which sell at $6.00 and $8.00, holding 50 and 100 chicks respectively. The Hare-Curtis Hygienic brooder—see opposite page. Send today for Complete Catalogue and Guide. Please mention this paper.

A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO

Thoroughbred Poultry Culture.

VOL. XXIII. NO. 593. JOHNSTOWN, NEW YORK, JANUARY 14, 1905. PRICE FIVE CENTS

Madison Square

The Sixteenth Annual Exhibition of the New York Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock Club a Success.

(Special Report by G. O. Brown.

Like its predecessors the Madison Square Garden Poultry Show scores another grand success. It ushered in the New Year of 1905 with a show that was not only a record breaker, but a record maker. When it becomes necessary to double tier the Garden with poultry coops, there is truly "something doing." Other shows may come and other shows may go, but Madison Square goes on supreme as ever. "If you want to see the cream of the poultry yards of America you will always find it at Madison Square." said a veteran poultryman to the writer. He might also have added, if you want to see the "men behind the fancy" who have made pure bred poultry the ideals they now are, visit Madison Square. It is the Meca of poultrymen of all degrees. Those that have made past records, those that are coming to the front, those that are just entering the friendly arena of competition, mingle and discuss with the spirit of true fanciers the fine points of the breeds that are on exhibition.

At Madison Square the advent of all wonderful advancement in poultry breeding is first shown to the public. When a breeder succeeds in evolving anything better than the usual best, the first introduction to the poultry world is generally made through Madison Square Garden poultry show. One thing every poultryman recognizes is that no other show gives such a prestige with its awards. Visiting poultrymen always find the arrangements or classifications such that they seem to know just where to locate the varieties they are individually interested in. If certain fancies are inquired for the enquirer is directed to go to Plymouth Rock alley or other breed "alleys" as the case may call for. "Once a fancier always a fancier" is always strongly illustrated at Madison Square. There you find scores of men who have grown gray and full of wisdom sauntering through the long aisles of coops. Some of them have not kept a bird for years, but their hearts beat as true and warm as ever for their first loves in the poultry world—such is the true fancier. What a wonderful impression the Garden has on poultrymen who visits it for the first time. He is awe struck at the immensity, lost in admiration of the beautiful and extensive decorations, dumbfounded at the tremendous crowing concert. He had imagined how great everything was, but as he had made his comparison with other shows, no wonder he was surprised Bordering on two sides of the entire Garden there were displays of incubators, brooders, poultry yard appliances, foods, etc. The display was an object lesson to many visitors. The fact that the growth of the poultry industry has kept equal pace with "general prosperity" of that of any calling, was satisfactorily illustrated. The fact is that hens now-a-days need only lay the eggs, and artificial methods "will do the rest" towards perpetuating her increase in family. And even under such circumstances there is not the remotest danger of any race suicide among the hens.

It was a pleasing sight to see the "Midway" row of booths, across the Fourth Avenue side of the Garden, that represented the poultry press. Each was attractively decorated, and side by side was business transacted in pleasant harmony. Good—a nice start for 1905.

One of the most remarkable exhibits of rare varieties of ornamental fowls, that was ever made by a single individual, was that of Homer Davenport, the well known caricaturist. There were 37 varieties of the pheasant family and 28 varieties of rare water fowls in Mr. Davenport's collection. Among those most interesting to poultrymen was the Adam and Eve (Sonnerants Jungle fowl) of poultry creations. Said to be the first time the genuine jungle fowl was ever exhibited at a poultry show. No wonder some of the beautiful colors of some breeds of domestic poultry come from inheritance. Well might Mr. Davenport's display be said to be a show within a show. Speaking generally of the exhibits it can be truly said that it was as much of a quality as a quantity show. After the winners had been selected and the ribbon honors were on the coops, there were many "others" that seemed equally deserving of high honors in all the classes. That many breeds are making rapid improvements was conspicuous in many classes. Notably so were the newer buff breeds. There was a more marked uniformity in breed requirements with the Orpingtons. There was quite a display of Lakenvelders, Faverolles, Columbian Wyandottes and other comparatively new breeds. The specimens were of a character such as to give a better general idea of what the breeds look like, than any other display has ever offered.

WITE WYANDOTTES

As fine a display as I think was ever brought together in a show room. Just an even fifty cocks.

1st. A large white bird, good head and comb; not quite full enough in breast for ideal breast shape; grand back tail not furnished enough, shanks pale in color.

2d. A large well formed bird and aside from a little coarseness in head and comb almost faultless.

3d. A fine blocky bird of true Wyandotte shape, with better shanks than either of the two that beat him.

4th. Not as well shown as the other winners; a trifle coarse in head and deficient in breast.

5th. A tidy little block, not well finished in tail, but certainly worthy his place.

Hens, 78. 1st. a small cochin shaped bird that certainly needs handling to find merit enough to wear a blue in this class; 2nd a grand looking hen with fine bay eye; her tail being her weakest point; a little too long and pinched.

3d. Not quite as well shown as the former two, carrying a little too much fluff; shanks a trifle pale.

4th. A different type of bird altogether; coarser in head longer in back, but shown in fine condition.

5ht. A good one shown in good condition.

Cockerels, 90. 1st. High faulty comb, but with as fine an eye as you would wish to see, but in looking from one end of the bird to the other you come to tail almost too quick and do not find it finished or full

2d. A larger bird with better top lines, but not as good color; a trifle slack in breast and weak in eye.

3d. On same style as second with little to choose between them, but better in eye and saddle.

4th. A coarser type and head and tail carried too upright.

5th. On same style as 2d and 3d.

Pullets, 84. 1st. A large white pullet with smooth comb, too smooth to be a winner in this large class. 2d. A large pullet, rather coarse in head, feathers rather "sticky" throughout, not being washed properly, but with all a grand female and worthy of her place. 3rd. We really liked better than the others. A grand specimen in every respect. I would certainly like to own her. 4h. Size must have influenced the judge in placing this award, faulty comb, light colored eye and not too good shape.; would almost make you look farther before placing a ribbon on her cage. 5h. One of those tidy, compact specimens that makes you say "Wyandotte" the minute you see her.

YARDS 36.

Say? what a task for the judge. 1st. Headed by a male that makes you think of first prize cockerel, he seems to have hard work to stand square on his "pins," but he has 4 fine females with him. which no doubt had a deal to do with the award. 2d. A different type of Wyandotte altogether almost approaching Plymouth Rock shape, with rather light colored eyes, but very evenly matched. 3d. Headed by a massive white bird, while almost approaching coarseness, yet he makes you want to own him. A little slack in breast, seems about the worst fault he has. With him are 4 large pullets. A grand yard. 4th. Not shown in the best of condition. 5th. A good yard, though females do not match as they should.

BIRDS UNPLACED.

In cocks we thought that No. 13 was the best White Wyandotte male in the Garden. 509 should certainly have had a ribbon. In hens No. 553 another of those that makes you wonder why her coop was not decorated with a ribbon. 563 another.

In cockerels 611 was certainly a grand bird; 663 another and 700 another.

In pullets, 735 would certainly have not disgraced a ribbon of any color.

G.W.WEED.

TURKEYS.

Bronze—(2 years old)—1st cock extra large, heavy bone, extra good wing, good gold bronze color throughout, good tail well penciled, good bar on tail coverts with good edging, extra good fluff with good white edging. 2d fair size and wing, lacks bars on tail coverts; has white barring in main tail feathers, green over back, off on fluff. 3d. Too leggy, lacks on breast, off on wing barring, good tail and good bar on tail coverts, white barring' in main tail, green over back. 4th. Small, short legs, good wing, lacks bars on tail coverts, white barring in tail. 1st Hen good, large bird, little dark over back, good wing, well penciled tail, good bar on tail coverts, good white edging, breast and fluff. 2d. Hen fair size, good wing and penciled tail. Tail coverts good, good barrng, edging little dark, breast and fluff good. 3d. good size, lacks barring on wing, little dark over back, well penciled tail, good bar and good white edging. (1 year old) 1st cock very large, heavy bone, extra good color, shape very broad and deep, breast exceptionally good, also wing and tail, extra good bar on tail coverts, good white and free from white barring in main tail, exceedingly good fluff with white edging. 2d. Fair size, off on color and wing, lacks covert bars, free from white barring in main tail, lacks fluff color. 3d. Fair size, off on wing barring, lacks in barring on tail coverts and color of fluff. 4th. Fair size, good wing, lacks barring on tail coverts, but has good white edging on same. 1st. Hen very large, exceptionally good color, good wing, penciling in tail, barring and white edging, free from white barring in tail, extra good color on breast and fluff. 2d. A fair hen, good size, good wing, tail coverts good bar and well penciled, a little white barring in tail, good breast. 3d. Good size, off on wing, good breast, tail coverts and fluff. 4th. Good size, wing tail, well penciled, good bar on tail coverts and good edging. 1st cockerel very large, breast broad and deep, extra bronze gold color, good in wing, penciling on tail. barring on tail coverts, white edging, free from white barring in tail, good white edging on coverts, extra good white edging on fluff. 2d. green over back, off on wing barring, lacks bar on tail coverts, off on fluff. 3d fair size, crooked breast bone, off on wing, well penciled tail, good bar on coverts, coverts dark, white barring on main tail, off on fluff. 1st pullet fair size, little too dark in back, good wing, well laced breast, good fluff, tail and barring on tail coverts, edging little too dark. 2d. fair size, good rich bronze throughout, good breast, wing penciling on tail, bar on tail coverts, extra good fluff. 3d small, dark over back, good wing, breast and fluff, good tail, tail coverts a shade dark. 4th larger than third, little dark over back, good wing, breast and fluff, good penciling in tail, good bar on tail and on tail coverts, white barring in tail.

White Holland—1st cock extra large and heavy bone with long body, broad and very deep breast, extra white throughout. 2d not as large, but very good bird. Hen same as second prize cock

Slate—1st cock extra large bird, very heavy bone, broad and very deep breast, good color throughout. Hen same as male bird.

C. W. KING

WYANDOTTES.

SILVER WYANDOTTES—Cocks, 6. 1st large, well shaped, fine breast, good comb and wing bars; fails in hackle and saddle striping. 2d, darker, better in saddle and hackle; breast edged, comb coarse, fair shape. 3d, close to 2d. 4th, a nice-colored bird, but rather small, and condition not the best. 5th, only fair.

Hens, 5. 1st, the gem of the Silvers. Good size and shape, fine head and comb; nicely laced all over; rarely find a hen so good; looks like the winner at Herald Square show. 2d, of good size, more open than 1st, but not clear in center; fails in complete lacing. 3d, one of the dark type, fine in head and comb, eyes light, legs fine. 4th, also dark; poor in breast, eye fine, back too long, legs yellow and nice. 5th, too light, poor shape, edging all over.

Cockerels, 9. 1st, a good sized silvery bird, beautiful head, hackle and saddle, fine wing bow and flights; well shown; a prize, surely. 2d, also of good type, not so silvery as 1st and has a little edging on breast which might be more open; also fine in flights; bow too dark, comb good, legs fine. 3d, more blocky, but too high on his legs; fails in comb; nice breast and face; fairly well striped; will be better later.

Pullets, 10. 1st, of the fine, open-laced kind, with nice comb and eye; even in color; an easy winner. 2d, a little darker in lacing; fails in comb, but better in shape of back. 3d, similar to 2d. 4th, good size, open-laced, coarse head, breast weak. 5th, darker and more heavily laced than the others, but the centers quite clear; best hackle of the class. Breast spangled.

GOLDEN WYANDOTTES—Cocks, 5. 1st, good shape, fine golden color, neat head and breast well laced; wing rather dark; legs in bad condition. 2d, also of good size, but darker; fine in shape; stripe good in saddle, but runs through in the hackle; tail rather pinched, legs fair, breast too dark. 3d, a large, good-colored bird; too much edging on breast, back fine in color, but too long; head rather coarse. 4th, a darker, good-sized specimen, fine stripe in hackle and saddle; shape poor, legs fine.

Hens, 4. 1st, good size, well laced, of good color; eye rather pale and comb coarse. 2d, open-laced, good on breast for so light a bird, too long in back, earlobe pale. 3d, large, dark, heavy-laced bird of good colored centers, large comb, eye fine, legs in very bad condition; no doubt a good breeder. 4th, similar to 3d.

Cockerels, 4. 1st, fine type, color and head excellent, breast well laced, but a little flat; fine tail, good legs. 2d, good color; fails to 1st in head and shape of back; breast fair, not so good as 1st; legs good. 3d, similar to 2d; tail too pinched; a fair bird.

Pullets, 6. 1st, good size, open-laced, beautiful breast; back not quite clear; good shape; comb rather too coarse. 2d, also good size, color not quite right, darker, poor in lobe. 3d, similar to 2d. 4th, too small and dark.

SILVER PENCILED WYANDOTTES—Cocks, 11. 1st, fine in shape, size and silvery color, hackle off a little in stripe, and comb could be better. 2d, close to 1st. 3d, good in size and shape, comb too narrow. 4th, similar to 3d. 5th, smaller, fair color; better later.

Hens, 3. 1st, finely penciled and of good silvery color; a fine specimen. 2d, well penciled, but too much of a reddish tinge to color.

Cockerels, 10. 1st, good shape and size, coarse in comb, hackle and saddle fine; approaches Dark Brahma in color. 2nd, close up, fails in color. 3d, good, off in saddle. 4th, loses in color and lobes. 5th, might have been 4th if light had been better during judging.

Pullets. 3. 1st, evenly penciled, fine in head points, neck poor. 2d, loses to 1st on comb and in penciling, especially on cushion.

PARTRIDGE WYANDOTTES — Cocks, 16. 1st, big, fine-shaped fellow, rich colored hackle and saddle, well striped comb, a little coarse; breast a trifle flat, legs fine. 2d, near 1st; an excellent bird. 3d, fails to 2d in head points, too coarse. 4th, near 3d. 5th, darker, maroon color, well striped saddle, fine green sheen.

Hens, 15. A splendid class; far in advance of the Silver Penciled. 1st, an evenly penciled bird all over, good shape and size, face a little pale. 2d, close to 1st, but fails in shape. 3d, a nice one; might be 2d except for eye. 4th, fails in comb as well as eye. 5th, close to 4th; many good ones left in the race.

Cockerels, 13. 1st, a beauty; fine in head and comb splendid; shape excellent, nice tail, easy winner. 2d, darker in color, but of good shape and a fine specimen. 3d, similar to 2d; fails in condition. 4th, of the English type in shape and color; fails in back, cape too light. 5th, fine in bright golden color, off in shape.

Pullets, 11. A beautiful lot. 1st, excellent in color and penciling; head rather small, comb should turn down. 2d, close up to 1st. 3d, a fine one. 4th and 5th also excellent. Some fine specimens were out of it because of disqualifications.

COLUMBIAN WYANDOTTES — Cocks 6, hens 6, cockerels 8, pullets 11. This variety coming to the front fast. In both males and females a good advance has been made the past year in shape and stripe of hackles. The 1st cockerel and pullet were probably the best of the lot. There's a good deal to be done yet to bring them up to where the varieties are, but they will be worthy of it.

BLACK WYANDOTTES—Cocks 2, hens 5, cockerels 3, pullets 3. The females are the better. 2d pullet has a most beautiful sheen of green.

The following pens were shown: 2 Golden, 4 Partridge, 3 Silver Penciled, 2 Columbian. "J."

HAMBURGS.

While the quality of the Hamburgs was good, the number was small. The Silver Spangled led in numbers and fine in quality. 1st cock a grand old fellow; hard to beat, though age is beginning to tell. 2d a good one, too. All the others are meritorious. Hens were neat and likely lot. 1st wins on shape and spangling. 2d not far in the rear. 3d, 4th and 5th all fine specimens. The 1st cockerel, while not so large as is desirable, wins on comb, spangling and color. 2d fails to 1st in comb and carriage. 3d rather too dark. 4th ought to be finer as a cock. 5th off in condition. The winning pullets were a very even lot of the highest quality. Not much choice in 1st, 2d and 3d. Some good Gold Spangled, Golden Penciled and Silver Penciled were shown. Blacks few. "J."

WHITE PLYMOUTH ROCKS.

Cocks, 14. 1st, a grand bird, with rather a poor comb and makes you think of last year's winners. 2d, another good one, though coarse in head and shanks in bad condition. 3d and 4th, evidently birds of the same breeding, too slack in breast, too V shaped in lower lines to make you think of the ideal.

Hens, 14. 1st, a good type all over and grand eye; a good win. 2d, aside from color of eye, the equal of 1st. 3d, coarse in head and rather weak in color of shank. 4th, shown in grand condition, set-in of tail evidently the reason for her not going higher.

Cockerels, 19. 1st, a little too finely drawn, breast not full enough for an ideal, but shown in fine condition. 2d and 3d, not as good in head as 1st, but with same breast faults. 4th, it must have been color that kept him back, for he is certainly the best in size and shape in the class.

Pullets, 24. 1st, certainly a gem; aside from color of shank, she leaves little to ask for; but shanks are too light altogether; in fact, the same criticism will apply to the otner winners.

Yards, 11. A grand lot of birds, with awards rightly placed.

But the real feature of the variety were the display pens of H. Graves, that sold way up in four figures. The finest lot that I think were ever brought together. G. W. WEED.

LEGHORNS AND DISPLAYS.

The Leghorn classes were well filled at the Garden, the many sprightly and graceful birds made a pleasing picture, and the Leghorn breeders feasted their eyes on the finest specimens of modern Leghorns ever in a show room.

White Leghorns—Cocks, 21. 1st went to Rice, with a nice little bird, good shape, comb heavy but erect, plumage faulty. 2d, young, wins club special for best male head, could have been placed higher. 3d, White Leghorn Yards, deficient in wing and saddle, otherwise a beauty. 4th, Blanchard, heavy type, poor comb, shape and color all right. 5th, Orchard Hill, grand bird, worthy of place.

Hens, 22. 1st, Rice, wins special for best female head. 2d and 3d, young, beauties. 4th, Orchard Hill, well furnished head, legs and toe coloring perfect. 5th, went to the Leghorn Yards on a nice, evenly balanced hen.

Cockerels, 30. 1st, Orchard Hill Farm, a show bird clear through. 2d, same, another good one. 3d, Wyckoff, wins club special for best shaped male, comb rather on the beef order. 4th, White Leghorn Yards, good bird, but carries comb too high at back. 5th, Young, nice shape and color, lacks in furnishings.

Pullets, 28. 1st, Smith, 2d, Young, not much to choose between these two birds. 3d, Orchard Hill. 4th, Tompkins. 5th, Edwards and Williams, all splendid birds, of the most modern type.

Brown Leghorns.—A nice, even class and competition close between the several exhibitors. E. B. Cridler deserves especial mention on the quality and size of his exhibit, and won the most of the prizes, taking the four minor prizes in the cockerel class, with four evenly matched birds, but as in many another game, the other fellow's hand held the high card, which in this case was John F. Homeyer, with a beautifully developed bird grand in shape and plumage. In the cock class the first went to Wiebke on a beauty, 2d and 5th Cridler, shows the beautiful striping so pronounced in his cockerels on exhibition. 3d, Dutton, 4th, Imlay, Jr., good birds, but outclassed by 1st and 2d winners.

Pullets.—1st went to J. A. Strunk on a peach, 2d and 5th Cridler, 4th Dutton, 3d Wiebke. The judge got all that was coming to him in this class; in fact, all the Leghorn classes were of such high excellence, so evenly matched, all fit to win in ordinary competition, it took only a trifle to turn the scale in some star's favor.

The Rose Comb Whites and Browns furnished some hot competition, and brought together some thorough fanciers. In Whites, Babcock wins first and the club special easily on a classy cock bird, Rocky River Poultry Yards wins the first and special on hen just as easy with a bird of similar high class, neat head and splendid shape. 2d, Babcock, better condition, loses in shape.

Cockerels. 1st, Babcock, beautiful head, stands straight up on his toes, carries wings a little low. 2d, Rocky River Co., 3d, Snow Flake Co.

Pullets, one, Babcock, with a neat built little bird, 2 same, 3 Rocky River Co.

In Rose Comb Brown Leghorns we found a banner class of birds. Mr. Pierson's cockerel, Mr. Tabor's cock, Mr. Kulp's hen and pullet were four first prize winners, the acme of perfect breeding.

The Black Leghorns were all exhibited by Wyckoff and need a lot of pruning before they will pass as good Leghorns.

Buff Leghorns were not as strong as formerly. Winners might be said to outclass their competitors, and also captured the club special. 1st hen, Brace; cock, Peer; cockerel, Dundas; pullet, Peer.

Breeding pens of Leghorns were an interesting study, being situated in the center of the room, where there was plenty of light. No finer sight could be craved by the Leghorn enthusiast, than to watch the movements of each individual family, of which there were twenty-five; more than one-half were Whites. 1st, Wyckoff; 2d, Blanchard; 3d, Young; 4th, Rice; 5th, White Leghorn Yards.

S. C. Browns, two pens, 1st a walkover for Cridler.

In Buffs my namesake from Geneseo, N. Y., William L. Howell, arose to the occasion and won first with the best lot of Buffs in the show.

The Display yards were a distinct feature. Graves' two yards of White Plymouth Rocks were easily the stars, and it is reported they sold for more money than some one hundred acre farms. John T. Cothran made his usual display of Silver Wyandottes, also of their usual excellence. It is said the boys coveted a few of the best—and not in vain. Willowbrook Farm, two pens of S. C. Buff Orpingtons, E. G. Wyckoff, imported Silver Duckwing and Pyle Leghorns. Mrs. Turner and the Abigail Adams farm, White Wyandottes.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 14, 1905.

The famous Madison Square Garden show finished its "sixteenth annual" in New York city, Saturday evening, January 7.

It was, as in past years, a great show. In some respects it was the largest held in the Garden. It was necessary to double-tier the birds in order to accommodate the increased entries in Wyandottes and Plymouth Rocks.

This new departure was compulsory, but we are afraid the artistic result was not as satisfactory as it would have been had fewer birds been caged and displayed to better advantage.

It was not the fault of the management, nor of Spratts, who cooped and fed the birds in their usual excellent manner; it was simply a case of an excess of entries and the determination of the management to follow the established rule of having but one bird in a cage in the single bird classes.

Unfortunately, the light in the Garden, owing to inclement weather, was not strong enough, albeit it is fine as a rule, to penetrate the lower tiers of Wyandottes and Rocks, and much goodness was hidden in the darker recesses of those bottom coops that could not be thoroughly seen by the visitors and disinterested fanciers.

Even the judging of the birds the first day was done under serious disadvantages, the day being cloudy and stormy and the light very bad. Under the circumstances, the work of the judges is entitled to respectful consideration.

The reports of the show by our correspondents appear elsewhere, as do the awards. It is as complete as we were able to give at the time of going to press. The missing chapters will be supplied in our next issue.

In glancing over the list of entries at New York we find the White Wyandottes leading in numbers by a very large margin. And it was a very great show they made!

The Plymouth Rocks were very largely and splendidly represented, but we do think the Barred Rock classes were not as great in numbers as they should have been, even if the quality in the classes was fine. We missed the exhibits of Hawkins Thompson, Welles and Bradley Bros. Why did they fail to show?

At Madison Square Garden, New York, we would like to see all the bold warriors in the Barred Rock alley get together and fight it out for the supremacy. And, furthermore, we would like to see the best birds in the west compete for the coveted honors as well. Why cannot such a Barred Rock exhibit be arranged, one that will make all exhibitions of the kind pale into insignificance in comparison. It can be done with a determined effort on the part of the Barred Rock club. We are certain that Secretary Crawford will be ready to do his share in bringing about such a meeting.

We might say the same regarding Light Brahmas. The exhibit of this magnificent breed at New York was beautiful in quality, but in numbers it was far from what it should have been. Norwood Farm saved the day by making full entries in all classes, but now comes the word that they will never exhibit again.

This latter is to be regretted. To Mr. George H. Purdue and to Mr. Gibson T. Williams much credit is due in bringing the Light Brahma to the front at New York. Norwood Farm was a breeding ground for the best of stock; both Mr. Williams and Mr. Purdue being Brahma enthusiasts. Circumstances having arisen that prevent both these gentlemen devoting time to their favorites, they have stepped down and out. And more's the pity!

And what has become of the beautiful Dark Brahma? A paltry entry at New York, even if the quality was fine! And the stately Langshan! Where are the famous Blacks that "made history" in the Garden a decade ago?

How about the Cochins? The smallest classes of Buffs ever seen at Madison Square Garden, fine though some of the winners were. The Partridge Cochins were beautiful in quality, but the famous Mitchell team was almost alone in its glory of winning well deserved ribbons.

Adolph Anderson saved the White Cochin from total extinction by a fine entry in all classes. What is wrong in such paucity of entries of varieties that once filled many cages at the Garden?

Following along the line, we come to Silver Wyandottes, one of the greatest, most beautiful of American productions, and at one time largely represented in New York. Small classes greeted the judge, but the quality was exceedingly fine. It is true that of the old veterans Dr. Beckett made his usual entry and received the reward his birds were entitled to, but we missed the other "old timers." One of the features of the Silver Wyandotte showing was the display pen Mr. Cothran showed. It looked like old times to see it. The pen was a fine one, even if not in competition, and some of the cream in the pen were snapped up at good prices by the Silver brigade present.

Golden Wyandottes were about in the same boat as Silvers. They had the quality, but lacked the numbers.

Buff Wyandottes were another surprise in numbers, the exhibit being very small compared to what has been shown in the past and other shows. The quality was fine, as can be seen by the awards and who got the ribbons, but we missed too many of the old exhibitors to make it "real hot" in the alley.

Columbian Wyandottes made a surprisingly good showing, and we are glad of it. They are destined to become very popular in the future.

Orpingtons filled many coops and had quality to burn. The club efforts are bearing fruit. Reports of classes on another page.

Leghorns and Minorcas were liberally represented and brought out birds of great quality, as will be seen by reports on another page.

The Polish and Hamburg entries were not what they should have been at a New York show. The quality was all right in most instances, but where was the competition?

Dorkings, that magnificent breed with its sub-varieties, thanks to Henry Hales, George B. Inches and Watson Westfall, was not allowed to be unrepresented, but what a small showing for a large variety?

The French classes were very small.

Pit Games made a big showing, and we were glad to see a fine exhibit of Indian Games. With Henry A. Kirby back in the ranks, and Harry M. Carpenter still in the fancy, we may expect a greater showing of Indians in the future.

The exhibition Games at New York make one sigh for the good old days when these birds were features at a show. What has come over the Game fanciers in the East? The number of birds exhibited indicates a sad story of neglect. The Game club should hustle a bit and bring these classes up to high watermark again in the future.

One of the most pathetic sights at the Madison Square Garden show was on Thursday, January 5, at 3 p. m. It was in the Light Brahma aisle. Two old veterans of Light Brahmas were sitting within fifty feet of each other—asleep. They were John L. Cost and George Purdue. It was in this state that we found them and all that know these two good old fanciers will swear that they were simply overcome by the lack of interest taken in the Light Brahma for both are men of the cleanest cut type of fanciers, who are men always, wherever they may be. To have such men go to sleep in the Light Brahma alley leads one to think, "Where are we at?" Come, let us bring the good old breed back to where it belongs, at the head of the procession.

The Polish Club of America had a great meeting at New York last week. "Chris" Kirschler was the only one that attended it and he elected himself to every office. That is morally, if not legally, a just proceeding. Mr. Kirschler is an enthusiastic Polish fancier and we are glad to state that he was the "only one" to appear at the meeting. Consequently he is IT. But a few more of his tribe would make the Polish fancy. The American Fancier congratulates him and trusts the time may come when others will take the same interest in a club and the Polish fowl that he does.

Our artist, Mr. A. O. Schilling, will attend the Boston show and will take orders for sketching. All those who are familiar with Mr. Schilling's work as it has appeared in The American Fancier will no doubt be glad to meet him and will avail themselves of this opportunity to place their orders with him.

MUDGE'S COMPLAINT.

Editor American Fancier:

I shall be gratified if you will publish my experience with the management of the Herald Square show. I sent there in a three division box, cock, hen and cockerel of B. B. R. Bantams, securely fastened and properly tagged. After the show had been in operation a couple of days I was informed by a Bro. fancier that my cockerel could not be found. I immediately sent a post card to the secretary, making inquiries, to which I received no reply. I then wrote the president, who informed me in answer that they hoped to get trace of the bird. He also sent me a marked catalogue, where I was credited with 4th cock and 2nd hen, the cockerel not having been judged. (In "Fancier's" report I was credited with 8th cockerel, to which I offer a strong objection). Since then it has come to my knowledge that another exhibitor from N. Y. state, lost a pullet by similar carelessness or negligence,who was notified of the fact and compensation made him. When his birds (White Leghorns), were returned,he found the missing pullet, that had been placed among the White Minorcas! and he gladly refunded. My bird was equally or more valuable and why, I ask,should not the same justice be dealt to me? Why should any one exhibitor be left out in the cold, especially when the show was so pronounced a success financially and otherwise. On top of this I have received a circular,as I presume all other exhibitors have, asking me to take shares in this much applauded success. Better had the management discharged their obligations first, by paying premiums earned. I wrote the secretary on Dec. 27 in relation to my lost bird and compensation therefor, to which I've received no answer. I think such actions as these are not conducive to the best interests of fanciers and show management generally, but rather have a tendency to keep exhibitors away. In this I'm sure there are others who will bear me out from their own experience of the same show. Thre is no kick coming as to placing of awards.

MADISON SQUARE.

Dr. Wolfe, a beautiful pen of Silver Spangled Hamburgs, Millville Poultry Farm Co., Buff Plymouth Rocks, Peapack Farm, White Plymouth Rocks, C. H. Latham, Barred Rocks and Barred Rock Bantams.

Homer Davenport, the famous political cartoonist and collector of rare fowls, gave the visitors to the show a treat. He had his farm at the show—the Moorish and Barb horses excepted—sixty-five pens in all, twenty varieties of pheasants, seventeen varieties of wild geese, eleven of rare ducks, besides wild turkey, quail, rare pigeons, several varieties of peacock, and the original fowl from the jungle in three colors, giving the speculative breeder an opportunity to compare his birds, as evolved in the present day type, with what is said to be the grandfathers and grandmothers of all chickens. In those days nature only taxed the reproductive powers of the hen for a paltry two dozen of eggs, if their housekeeping affairs were not disturbed, one in the spring, and the other when the first family were able to hustle for themselves, but now nothing less than twenty dozen will satisfy the most exacting.

I would suggest to Mr. Davenport he purchase a certain bow-legged rooster, which won a first prize, and mate it to his Damoselle Cranes, he might originate a breed of Missouri Creepers. The judge would get the "Dam" end for his, and the public and exhibitors could take the "sell" for theirs.

HOWELL.

BLACK MINORCAS.

Single Combs—Cocks (11) a representative lot of birds, but not in the best of condition. First cock a good one in shape, fair color, lobe a little rough, considerable white in face, comb weak with bad thumb marks. 2d a grand bird, excellent color, a true Minorca comb, nice smooth lobe and clean face; an easy winner. 3d, a grand body bird, immense size, a typical Minorca except comb shy two serrations; should have sported the red. Class was judged when light was poor, which accounts for error. 4th a fine colored bird, but carries tail too high. 5th loses on condition.

Hens (18). 1st a magnificent specimen of the true Minorca, a wonderful combination of color, size and shape. 2d, a good one in shape, but plum color in every section; plenty of better ones in every way that should have won the honor. 3d a beautiful female, color to burn, a hard proposition to overcome, but loses to first in size. 4th good in every section except tail, which is a little too high. 5th loses on condition and head points, but otherwise a good one. Plenty of good ones in the balance, notably No. 1518.

Cockerels (20). 1st a fine bird in color, a four point comb, extra fine lobe, a little short on back, tail rather high. 2d sound in color, extra fine comb, but wattles very coarse, shape one of the best, a corking good bird. 3d a star for color, shape and size; nice long back, good comb, but loses on condition. 4th a very fine cockerel if it were not for his comb, which was very weak. 5th a little shy on breast, lobe rough, six point comb, color O. K.

Pullets (22). A grand lot and a hard class to judge. Would be injustice to any one of the first five birds to say one excelled the other on any point, except 1st pullet, that won on head points and fine condition. A class too good to criticize, with quality enough left to furnish material for another. Garden show.

Pens (8). Cock in first pen a fine, large bird, but poor comb, having nine points, color very good. Hens also sound in color, size and shape, but afflicted with the same kind of comb. 2d pen contained cockerels and pullets, was shown in the best of condition, which no doubt accounted for the position they held. 3d pen had four females that certainly were the goods. For color they cleaned up the whole bunch of pens, shape and size also good, but lost first honor on account head and short back. 4th pen cockerel, hoop comb, tail too high, pullets rather young. 5th cock a grand body bird, comb too large, hens not in condition. Pen 2675 contained some splendid females for color and shape and is worthy of special mention.

White Minorcas showed full classes except in cocks, and the quality was gilt edge in the winners. 1st cock, 1st and 2d hens having immense size and the proper shape. First pullet also a gem.

In Rose Comb Blacks the 1st cock was a stunner for size and shape, color, also very good comb, one of the best. 2d cock a large bird, carries tail high and back a little short, comb poor. Hens and rest of class only fair. No pens shown.

BANTAMS.

The galleries of Madison Square Garden were again filled with as grand an exhibit as ever of Game and Ornamental Bantams, for here is where the little giants of the bantam race meet, to battle for superior honors.

Buff Cochin Bantams.—Cocks. 1st, grand shape, low down, well feathered, lacks in comb. 2nd, another good one, but trifle too low; in other words lacks depth of body. 3rd, a good colored bird; balance good quality. Hens. 1st, a typical Cochin, immense feathering, with grand, even color; wins easy. 2nd, a grand shaped hen, fails to winner in feathering. Balance of class contained hens, termed as top notchers. Cockerels. A strong class. 1st best all round bird in class; good in every way. 2nd, fine color, fails in breast and carriage. 3rd a good one, needs more time; balance close up.

L. Brahma Bantams.—Cocks. 1st, a typical bird, good in color and hackle. 2nd, another good one, but fails to winner trifle in shape. 3rd, close up. Hens. 1st, an easy winner, good in every way. 2nd, good, but fails to winner in color; balance good quality. Cockerels. 1st, only a moderate bird in shape, but excellent in color. 2nd fails in leg feathering. 3rd, best shaped bird in class. Pullets. 1st, good color and shape, but seems too far gone for a pullet. 2nd, a nice one, good in size and shape, balance good quality. Dark Brahma Bants only a single entry throughout, winning hen the pick of the lot.

Golden Sebrights.—Cocks. 1st, a good one, fine in lacing. 2nd, good shape, fails to winner in lacing. Hens a good class. 1st, a very narrow laced bird, fails in some sections. 2nd, nicely laced and in every section; might have won; balance good quality.

Bearded White Polish Bants showed up with a few good specimens, such as 1st and 2nd hens.

White Booted Bantams, small class, winning cock an old winner, but seems to be passing his prime.

Barred Plymouth Rock Bantams, a nice display; and if they stay in the hands of genuine fanciers, it will not be long before they are as popular as their larger brethren.

Cornish Indian G. Bants. were represented by a number of very good specimens of this rarer variety.

A. O. Variety class, as usual, is a rather interesting class. This contained a Frizzle cock, Old English Game, Blk. Minorca, Rhode I. Red and Cuckoo Cochin Bantams. Winning Frizzle the most typical bird of this class.

INDIAN GAMES.

Cocks, 9.—1st, a grand bird, a good head. Typical in shape of body and almost absolutely perfect in color throughout. Shown in condition of feather as hard as nails. Unfortunately he went out of condition before the week closed, but on day of judging was away ahead of his class.

2d, another fine bird, fails in comb and color to first.

3d, a lower down bird than either 1st or 2d. Good color. Not in as good condition.

4th, a fine large bird, good head and low shanks,too red in color; not shown in as hard condition of feather.

5th, a bird of good form and color, too wild in coop to show well.

Hens, 10.—1st, one of the finest laced hens that has been at the Garden, and typical in shape, shown in good condition.

2d, also very good; an easy second. 3d finely shaped hen well laced ,fails some on color. 4th, a little beauty in lacing and shape. 5th, a large hen of good type, fails in lacing. Hen, 1863, was way up in quality, but was marked "Dis," because of stubs. Cockerels, 10.—All of good quality. 1st, an unusually strong bird in size, shape and color; fails in comb, but leads his class well. 2d, and 3d both fine and near together, but not in class with first. 4th and 5th birds of good type.

Pullets, 11--1st, a model in shape and lacing, wins easily. 2d, the largest bird in the class, fails in lacing. 3d, a nice bird, fails in color. 4th and 5th fair birds.

Pens, 2.—1st a cock and 4 hens, all grand in shape and size. 2, a cockerel and 4 pullets, the cockerel one of the best in the garden. Females, fail to 1st in size and marking. Whites represented in each class with one good bird.

LITITZ, PA.

Lititz is famous all over the country for the superior quality of Bretzels it produces and they also put up a first class article in the line of a Poultry show. This was the second show held by this association. 1,100 birds in competition, a grand lot of fowls, with quality enough to make some of the big ones blush with envy. The attendance was all that could be desired and the management wore a broad smile of satisfaction and they had a right to smile from the fact that every one else seemed to be satisfied. There was that general absence of kicking on the part of a few exhibitors that usually makes the management all sorts of trouble. We are sure that the visiting exhibitors appreciated the efforts of the association to make it as pleasant and profitable for them as possible. Over 60 birds changed hands, to our knowledge, at good prices and we don't know how many more, as we neglected to get a record. The success of this great show was due to the united efforts of every member of the association, and it took more than one man to make this association. A word to the wise is sufficient. In regard to the birds space forbids us to give a report in detail of the various classes. Almost every standard breed was represented and some that were not in the standard, among these the Buff Laced Indians, bred and originated from the yards of W. H. Card of Bristol, Conn. The American classes were as usual in the lead,White Wyandottes the strongest, all the winners sky flyers, just dropped out of a snow bank, judging from their color. Buff Wyandottes also showed good quality, but smaller classes. White Rocks a corking good string, competition very hot, first cock also winner of color special for whitest bird in show, also a wonder in size and shape; rest; rest of winners gilt edge, notably 1 hen, 1 pullet and 1 pen. Barred Rocks showed some old winners. 1 and 2 cocks A No. 1, first and second hen ditto; 1 cockerel finely barred, very distinct and a valuable bird. 2nd close up. 1 pullet the cremo and led the whole class; have seen no better this year. 1 pen nicely barred, rest fair. Buff Rocks a treat to look at, winners all had quality of the highest order and showed wonderfully uniform color. In Asiatics, Partridge and Buff Cochine, led in quality with some really fine specimens. Light Brahmas also very good. In Leghorns, S. C. White showed the fullest classes. 1st cock an old war horse and a winner since a chick; the rest of the winners in hens, cockerels, pullets and 1st pen show a type of Leghorn for shape and color that will guarantee their owner a place in whatever company he chooses to go. S. C. Browns showed a strong bunch of birds outside of 1st cockerel, that proved to be a wonder in shape, striping and head points; the rest of the winners carried off the honors at Sanatoga in November and again proved their superior quality in this show.

Buff Leghorns a hard class to judge; quality of the best, 1st pullet winning special also for best colored female in show. We were surprised at the quality displayed and the competition offered in Buffs. In Game and Ornamental Bantams, Judge Cornman scratched his head more than once and looked puzzled. 100 Game Bantams of the finest quality, besides 100 Ornamentals,made a whole show in themselves. Pekin Ducks led in Waterfowl. The winners showed immense size and snowy whiteness. Below we give a complete list of awards:

POULTRY NOTES FOR JANUARY.

By J. P. W. Marx.

I have always advocated hatching chickens early in the year, and taking the chance of rearing them, A few might be got off at any time to be going on with, leaving for a month or two the heavier hatching operations. Somehow at the present time I feel very inclined to commend this to my readers. The weather up to now has been open and mild, therefore we may fairly expect winter when we ought to be having spring. If I knew what the weather would be like in March or April I might say, wait a while. As it is, I feel somewhat unhappy that circumstances prevent me thinking about chickens until next month, and I have an idea that a chicken or two in hand this week will be worth having when March comes. I have seen several lots of chickens, both under hens and in rearers, doing famously, growing quite as if it were summer. Eggs, too, are now numerous and fertile, but if in a week we have frost and snow and cold winds (all the three are overdue), the result may be to stop laying and lower the fertility, so when you want chickens you may find eggs are scarce and the hatching percentage small.

Fowls intended for breeding should not be sent to shows; the breeding pen, not the show pen. is now their proper place. Select the fowls for the various pens to the best of your knowledge and judgment. Let them settle down and do not disturb them again. The fact will sooner or later have to be admitted that the same fowls cannot be shown and at the same time bred from with sucess; if the attempt be made there will be many sterile eggs and weak chickens, and even if some of these be dragged up to maturity, very often they turn out dwarf duplicates of their parents. As I wrote last month, selecting the pens is not a trifling little matter of a few minutes. One or two pens, may be, we have made up our minds how to arrange weeks ago—nay, we have in our mind's eye seen the wonderful chickens they are going to breed, and my New Year's wish is that your expectations may be fulfilled to the feather. There are other pens besides the champions to arrange, and this is difficult to finally scttle until the birds are got together in them. As we look over our stock feeding on the various runs, we think that cock is just the thing for those pullets—perhaps his nieces or grandchildren; while as to those hens, there is a cockerel from the old bird made for them. When we get them together we have to alter our opinion—there is too much color in one and the same fault in another, too much feather here and too little there, and so our original plans are frustrated, and we have to try to work out something better. Fowls in a breeding pen do not look the same as they do in a show pen, and vice versa. No doubt the show pen helps you to pick out the best and to decide which bird is to go with which, yet one likes to see the fowls together walking about the breeding run before being quite satisfied.

This carries me on to the fact that if fowls have to be bought to walk about the breeding pen they should be purchased at once. If you intend buying some well-known bird which has been winning pretty freely all the season, get him into your possession at once, so that it may have time to recover from the excitement and unnatural living which forms part of the life of a show fowl. Again, buying the bird you want for breeding is not a matter of a post or two, unless some particular bird is the subject of the deal, when even then there is sure to be a bit of fault-finding and cheapening. In ordinary cases you will perhaps obtain the bird you want with least trouble by writing the breeders (if of any standing) the price you are willing to pay, and some description of the chief points required. Then when the fowls arrive on approval a day or two will be required to look them over, and most probably they will not suit, so that business has to be done all over again with some other breeder. Thus days and weeks slip by, and the foundation of your breeding affairs on which depends so much your summer's enjoyment, watching the chickens develop, is still unlaid. Delay in buying hens or pullets may be more serious than in transactions with the other sex, because the change of home often backens or stops laying. If, too, real winter comes before the eggs from the new purchases, their chickens will be behind at the start. Once again take notice not to give forcing powders to produce eggs. As the temperature stands at the time of writing, a course of Epsom salts, given either in the soft food, or, preferably, in the drinking water, may be distinctly advisable. A handful of common salt mixed in the soft food for a dozen fowls twice a week in open—that is, not frosty, cold, or snowy—weather is in all cases useful. Let not lime to supply the want of material for the egg shell be forgotten, as it is sometimes, as when fowls are taken from a run where they can find all they want and put in a pen where everything has to be given them. When penned-up fowls leave their food and greedily eat lime or crushed oyster shells it looks as if they would be better with less food and more lime. It is annoying to pick up shell-less eggs from the nest boxes of your 50-guinea pen,and should be more so because, under ordinary circumstances, it is your own fault. Shell-less eggs, too, are a pretty object lesson whereby to introduce hens to the egg-eating business.

I had no time and was too tired to attend the Faverolles club meeting at Hereford on December 10th, when the question of clean or feathered legs was to be discussed. I appointed a proxy for my vote, and hope he went withthe majority, which, I hear, decided that so far as the legs are concerned, the standard should remain as it is, and this means they are to be slightly feathered. The Faverolles Club, having amicably settled the little difference in its ranks, can now direct all attention to the maintenance and advancement of the breed. Outside the club the small difference seems to have been magnified into a revolution. Ever since November I have been chatted with and had tea with by many who "know" a Faverolles (whether they ever bred or kept them seemed immaterial), curious for the last news from clubland. Was the Faverolles Club going to split, and would it bring down the Poultry Club with it? The whole business has been the best advertisement the Faverolles has had. Utility points alone have so far failed to make any breed a success. Over and over again the most useful fowl is no good to show nor to breed show fowls. If some people are so taken by Faverolles that they prefer them before all breeds for utility purposes, they are quite welcome to breed them how they like; but they must let the show Faverolles alone, which, for practical purposes, will be as useful a breed.

It is perfectly obvious that the opening and peaceful closing of the question has been most serviceable to the breed. A questionable point has been definitely settled, apparently in accordance with public opinion—not a bad guide—and is not likely to be reopened.

The same observation has been made to me in several districts this month that no eggs are laid by hens or pullets which have every appearance of laying and behave as if they did so every day. The fowls were of various breeds, irregular ages, kept under different conditions up and down over a large area, and fed in all kinds of ways. In some cases the fowls had been highly fed on meal; in an odd case or two some old household recipe had been given, hitherto never known to fail, and based on cayenne or black pepper. I suggested that the feeding, whatever it might be, should be changed, diminished in quantity, and that vegetable food take the place of meal or condiment; in some cases it might be necessary to chop up the green food,and mix it with flour to insure the fowls eating it. I expect the fowls had been overfed, or, more properly, too highly fed. The feeder has been feeding as if it were icebound winter, forgetting that this season there is a quantity of food in the fields. In one instance lime was forgotten; in another, where the fowls ran on a wholly grass paddock, closely wired in, I thought grit might be useful. One case I cured by lending the poultry-keeper a loud-crowing cock; he is prevented keeping a male bird by a bed-ridden neighbor, but took the risk for a few days, and now has eggs to console himself and the sick and needy, who for a time is trying to bear the intolerable nuisance under the very peculiar circumstances.

As I tie up the two fat volumes of The Feathered World for the bookbinder, I bethink me of those two heavy lines and sad announcements so unhappily frequent this year, telling the departure of friends more or less familiar. I care not to particularize; sit by the fire for a quiet spell, and you will see a crowd (a crowd much too large) of faces never to be seen here again. Dear me, I'm dreaming, and there's the cock crowing me a glad New Year's wish. I pass on the wish, doubly underlined, first to the Editress and her family, then to the staff at Arundel Street and all over the world, and lastly, but not one whit weakened by heartiness, to my many friends in the Fancy world. A happy New Year to all, and let me add words which fell from our broad-minded vicar reminding us that "he will have the happiest year who succeeds in bringing most happiness to others."—J. P. W. Marx, in The Feathered World, England.

A WORD WITH NOVICE BREEDERS

One naturally asks one's self whether one ever knew a novice breeder who raised stock as good as the parent stock with which he operated. And nine times out of ten we are satisfied that if the mating be left to the novice he does not, for some years, breed as good a bird as those he bred from.

There are novices, of course, who are very fortunately situated. Men who have really proficient breeder friends, who advise as to mating, and practically take the responsibility on their own hands. But leave the novice entirely alone; let him find out things for himself, and we shall see that he is a long time before he can breed up to the parent form.

The reason is that he generally starts hot-brained, fevered. He has a little money. The poultry mania fever is high. He must buy! He pounces upon a good bird, a frequent winner. He shows it and wins, gets, as he thinks, a great name, and in a year or two, if the money be done, total eclipse. His name is seen no more. He may struggle on a year or two, but seldom in that time does the youngster produce a chicken equal to the original parent.

All the same, if he has pluck and perseverance, and the money to set himself up once again, he will do a lot better next time, though it may be many years before he produces a flier.

Of course, no breeder, be he ever so experienced, makes an equal success of things every year. Now one breeder will be found producing the champion of the year, now another and yet again another, as years roll along. There must be a certain amount of fluctuation as to merit of annual crop in all yards, but it will seldom happen that in astute hands there will be no bird in a year's production that can come up to the quality of its parents.

If such happens it must be more or less through accidental circumstances, unreliable broodies, breakages in nests, trampling on chickens, disease amongst the little ones, or destruction by vermin. But with the novice failure to produce merit as good as that of the parents has altogether a differently wide cause. The novice knows nothing, can expect nothing, gets nothing, and is generally very sore headed about the "rotten breeding pen," when failure comes.

Of all the simple, innocent, rash folk I know there are none that can compare in poultry matters with one's own dear private non-poultry friends. Their notions, their advice, their recommendations are simply side-splitting, till, perhaps, it comes to allowing their three year old kid to poke the chicks out from under the hen with a stick. Then the face gathers gloom, no larger, if damage has not been done, than a man's hand, but which visibly enlarges, and deepens in color, when the dear mother expresses her full sympathy with the child, and tosses her head as if you were the most crack-brained idiot under the sun."

And when you tell her that that same chicken, which has had such a narrow squeak for its life, came from a £25 Bantam, and might itself be worth that amount, some of us have, ere this, felt the contempt in that dear friend's heaving bosom as she exclaims, "Come away, dear; leave it alone. Don't go near them at all, poor things."

Well now, there is many a novice who rushes into the fancy with very little more enlightenment than this. He, like the dear mother, knows everything or nothing about poultry. He has won this and that on other people's breeding and mating, and a little charitable advice to our headstrong friend goes over him like a cold douce. For all practical purposes he knows nothing, and his mating powers are nil. He has probably got through a breeding season or two before he realizes that every breed is better for, and most breeds imperatively demand, a cockerel breeding pen, and also a pullet breeding pen. Even the self colored breeds are better for it.

Then he fails to grasp the importance of strain. He does not realize that strain is like bending a bow to the fullest stretch. It bends the pedigree away from the natural, and the consequence is, bring two strains together and you have given every opportunity to reversion back to the original; every chance you could, in fact, give except crossing two distinct breeds.

The novice laughs at the notion. Failing to grasp that the highest quality bird is bred from the highest quality show bird on the one side, together with brother or sister of a similar quality bird on the other side, failing again to appreciate the extreme importance of not crossing strain, failing to appreciate the fact that too near consanguinity of blood (as brother and sister) mated together, is fatal, though parent and offspring, and parent and grand-offspring are right, failing finally to appreciate the fact that merits and defects in the parent birds must be well balanced one against the other, and never, under any circumstance, must the same defect appear in both.

Failing all these things, he makes, as a rule, as we said at first, a fearful hash of things. His annual produce is worth next to nothing, and a lot of expense has been incurred that has brought no remunerative return. No wonder so many novices drop out from the fancy as novices, and never make for themselves a permanent name. They are without knowledge, and yet expect to produce as good stuff as the man who has gone through his novitiate and stuck to things through all loss and vexation, till he has acquired a competent understanding of breeding.

Some novices do succeed the first year or two in breeding up to the merit of parent simply by a happy fluke. Like a painter painting a picture, such an one makes a shot or stroke, more by good luck than good management. By a happy fluke he chooses the mates from the same strain as the cock, and sisters of good birds, and as one side of the breeding pen is always more or less of a dark horse or mare, an accident in getting hold of the right mates has resulted in a good bird or two.

It will, from these remarks, be seen that the novice cannot go too softly or too warily. He should read up all and everything he can lay his hands upon about his breed so as to better himself. He should ask and question everybody in his power that he is assured knows more than himself, and will answer straight. He should accurately dot down all appearances the chickens present in the different stages of their growth; deep, earnest scrutator, missing nothing, observing, registering, and storing up all knowledge. He should be a bit of an experimentalist as well. There is nothing like trying different things in a small way over which we are in some uncertainty. It is only in this way that men have left the rank and file and stood out, as champions all alone.

The late Mr. Partington, it was said after his death, was a man of this type. He could beat almost anyone he showed against, and it was an open secret that he bred the birds his own way, and not after the manner of the rank and file. It was said that his Orpingtons were really not Orpingtons at all, in the way of being derived from the Spangled Hamburgh, the Dorking, and Cochin, as at first mated together. He introduced other ways of obtaining the Orpington, at least what would petitors at shows.

The novice can do a little, too, in the way of experimenting, but it would be well that he should only try pass for such and win against all comdown those lines where he feels he cannot obtain the requisite information except by experimental research. That which is already known, that he should try to compass without experiment. It is time thrown away, to try to find out what other men have already found out, and have been using successfully for a generation or two.

The novice's sheet anchor for a year or two should be "few birds" and good. If he can get somebody else to do the mating for him whilst he reads up and makes all enquiries, and gains all knowledge, he will be a wise man. The novice has a great many things to learn besides mating, so he should give his mind to things thoroughly, or he will come out, like his flock, a waster. Housing, feeding, doctoring, and a host of things will assail him for study.

Therefore, unless he be a wealthy man, let him begin with moderate stock, not attempt to fly his hawk or kite too high, but notwithstanding his endeavor from the first start should always be to produce at least one bird (and it may be with judicious management and deep study, he will be able to produce more) as good as the original best bird he started out with. When he can do this he may spend money more freely in buying better quality to breed from.—Fanciers' Gazette, England.

WEAK SHELLED EGGS.

Weak Shelled Eggs occur more or less in all poultry yards, and they are most undesirable at all times, but more especially just now, when so many eggs are being employed for hatching. Some eggs are laid with so thin shells that the slightest pressure will break them. Others are laid with only a skin-like material and no shell. The former generally results from a deficiency of shell-producing food, the latter is almost always an indication of a derangement of the egg organs. Hens in perfect health may lay weak-shelled eggs, but when they have no shells it is a sure sign the hens are ill. It is hardly ever the case that a whole yard of hens lay eggs without shells. It is usually one or two. But many lay eggs with weak shells. Those without shells are often eaten up by the hens as soon as laid or detached. It is decidedly unprofitable to have eggs without shells, as they cannot be sold. Few care to eat them, and if they endure egg-eating, which is a fault meriting nothing sort of the slaughter of the hen, it will be understood how important it is that as soon as ever an egg is laid without a shell efforts should be made to asecrtain which hen laid it, and treatment to remedy the deficiency should be started at once. The following remedy is said to be excellent for fowls that lay a weak shelled or shell less eggs:—Catch the fowl, and put in a coop or pen by itself. Feed sparingly on soft food, and give half a teaspoonful of Epsom salts every morning. A week of this treatment will rectify matters.—Indian Fowl Fancier Journal.

GEYER'S SCURVY CURE FOR POULTRY was the first article introduced to the public for this purpose, which has been thoroughly tested in the last ten years by many of our brother fanciers who are willing to say with us that there is no other article on the market like this that can be relied on to do its work properly. It is something that the poultry fancier, who appreciates his fine birds, needs very much. What looks more disgraceful than a fine flock of chickens, many, or all of them, having their legs coated with a thick, hard, scabby crust which is called scurvy? It spoils the appearance of the birds and is very annoying to them. It is also contagious. Here we have a sure cure for this ugly disease. By following the directions we guarantee that it will take off that ugly, hard coat and leave the legs clean and smooth and give them their natural color. It also has no equal for healing sores and frosted combs and wattels. It makes them very bright and red. It is just what the exhibitor wants to prepare his birds for the exhibition room. Some of our customers tell us that they have tried it with good results for weak legs. We only ask you to give it a trial. It is put up in tin boxes. Money must accompany all orders. Price, 25 cents. Address, J. A. Geyer, Florin, Pa. 560tf

1905 Patterns--Valuable Improvements--Absolute Guarantee ---Reduced Prices.

These are some of the advantages offered in the new STANDARD CYPHERS INCUBATORS.

Never before have such perfect machines been offered.

They are the kind that are guaranteed to surpass all others WHEN YOU operate them.

The new and exclusive features that have been added to the Cyphers Standard Incubators and Brooders and the great improvements that have been made on all old patterns put this line in a class by itself

And yet the Prices are Lower than ever before

"Competition is the Life of Trade" and for the year 1905 we challenge competitino, both as to QUALITY and PRICES. We have reduced the cost of production to more than offset all the great improvements and ARE GIVING OUR CUSTOMERS THE BENEFIT.

This means a saving of from 12½ per cent. on the smallest size to 20 per cent. on the largest size. Read all about it in our fine 1905 catalogue.

GOLD MEDAL AND HIGHEST AWARDS were won at Louisana Purchase Exposition.

CYPHERS POULTRY SPECIALTIES

A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO

Thoroughbred Poultry Culture.

VOL. XXIII. NO. 595 JOHNSTOWN, NEW YORK, JANUARY 28, 1905. PRICE FIVE CENTS

BOSTON

The Finest Show Ever Held in the Hub. More Quality Than Ever. Large Attendance--Perfect Weather--Excellent Management

The ninth annual exhibition of the Boston Poultry Association, held at Mechanics' Hall, January 17 to 21, was the finest in point of quality ever penned in the city of culture. The number of entries was not as large as at some former shows,but what was lacking in quantity was more than balanced by the quality exhibited. About five thousand entries is not much below former records.

The fact that no show was held at Boston last year,made this one a great magnet and many new fanciers attended and enjoyed the function.

The old management did itself proud Mr. Arthur Sharp and Mr. Walter Baylies being the social lever that made the fanciers' stay in Boston a pleasant memory. Secretary S. L. Roberts was the right man in the right place and kept the machinery going in perfect motion, being ably assisted by Secretary Bailey of the Newark show.

Signor Tomaso Rackham, with his corps of assistants, handled the cooping and feeding in the most approved style. Spratts did the cooping in a way that made many wish that they had been at St. Louis.

The judging started at eleven in the morning of the first day and was completed by Wednesday noon the following day. The complete awards were printed in catalog, which was on sale Thursday noon.

The informal reception given to visiting fanciers was held in the private dining hall at the Copley Square Hotel, on Tuesday night. It was well attended and passed off most gloriously. The vaudeville performers provided were clever and artists in their lines. The speeches, while limited, were in keeping with the occasion. Secretary Roberts, Mr. T. F. McGrew and W. B. Atherton being especially happy in their remarks.

Such gatherings do much toward bringing fanciers in closer touch with each other and smoothing over some of the rough edges that the show room is responsible for when competition is rather warm. Excepting in a few instances there was but little feeling prevalent among exhibitors regarding the judging at Boston. An exhibition without any kicking on the part of exhibitors is impossible.

The entries at Boston were as follows:

Plymouth Rocks	277
Rhode Island Reds	198
Dorkings	69
Orpingtons	47
Leghorns	100
Minorcas	84
Andalusian and Spanish	56
Polish and Hamburgs	114
Houdans	28
A. O. V. French varieties	21
Games of all kinds	74
Water Fowls and Turkeys	50
Bantams	200
Exhibition Yards	96
Displays	217
Pigeons	1943
Pet Stock and Cats	170
Eggs	74

This, with the birds in exhibition and display yards, makes the total over 5,000.

LIGHT BRAHMA COCK

THE BIRDS.

Light Brahmas always hold the place of honor at a Boston show and lead the list in the catalog. The number exhibited this year was not up to what was exhibited in the good old days, but the quality was excellent. A special report appears elsewhere.

Dark Brahmas were very much in need of reinforcements as to numbers, but there were some very beautiful birds exhibited by Mr. Leach.

Mr. McGrew speaks of the Cochins in another column, and we can only add that the Buff Cochin cockerel exhibited by Oakland Farm was the finest type of the breed we ever handled, and he had the color as well.

Langshans dropped in numbers, but the quality of Mr. Gibson's exhibits was so high that the Langshan is still a factor in the poultry world.

Barred Plymouth Rocks were well represented, albeit many prominent eastern breeders did not favor Boston with entries. Mr. P. H. Scudder was announced to judge, but owing to severe illness, could not officiate. Five judges were selected to award the prizes in the five classes and they did their work voluntarily and to the best of their ability. But disappointment was manifest nevertheless, as Barred Rock exhibitors are shrewd and wise as to the class of birds a selected judge wants. The classes were good ones.

In cock birds, the first and second were fine specimens in color, the second losing in shape; the third impressed us as a very even colored, well barred bird, having fine shape. Hens made up a grand class. First a beautiful bird in type, clean yellow beak and legs, magnificent straight parallel barring in every section, and while a trifle darker in color than usually accepted, is a winner in any company. She is a western bred bird and eastern Rock fanciers gladly acknowledged her fine points. Second and third were both fine specimens in color and barring the others being strictly high class. Cockerels were made up of many different types and caused no end of discussion.

First cockerel a flashy, bright colored bird, rather uneven in barring, fair comb and lacking in shape of breast; second well barred, but uneven in surface, good size; third and fourth finely barred, the bars being straight and parallel, good in shape, and while a trifle darker in shade than usually allowed, are very strong candidates for the highest honors at any show. We rather fancied No. 256 (unplaced) for a place. He was evenly barred in all sections and had the Rock shape. Pullets a fine lot, first and second being of same type as first hen, grandly barred bird. The pens were fine, first being well matched.

Silver Wyandottes, one of the best displays we ever handled. First cock a beautiful bird in type, trim as a well-groomed hackney, full of curve lines, fine in hackle and saddle color. excellent in head points, good breast lacing and excepting wing bow carried fine wings; a true Wyandotte,albeit a trifle under weight; second, a grand bird in color, but over shown, comb showing signs of coarseness, but the Wyandotte lacing was there all the same. Hens a good lot, but excepting the first and second, not as strong as we have seen at Boston. Cockerels unusually fine, the first being a star in color, hackle, saddle and wings, blending beautifully in true silvery color; breast lacing very fine, extending to body and fluff, the best cockerel we ever handled! second another fine bird in shape and color, losing only in wing-bow and bars; third, fourth and fifth very much above the average and with the others away, ready to win anywhere. Pullets not as strong as we expected, although first, second and third had good open lacing and fair style; we found one of the best birds in the novice class. Pens mustered only two, but they were fine ones, first winning with a very fine male at head of pen.

Golden Wyandottes a disappointment in number, but the first cock and first, second and third hens and winning pullets were strictly first class.

Silver Pencilled Wyandottes made up fairly good classes in number and had some exceedingly fine specimens among the winners, notably first and second cock, first hen, cockerel and first and second pullet.

Columbian Wyandottes a really fine lot; as good as we have handled.

Leghorns dropped rather low in numbers, but there were some beauty brights all the same, especially in the White Leghorn alley, D. W. Young making a great sweep with a really fine string of true-bred Leghorns. Sorry some of the Brown Leghorn breeders failed to show up to give the winners a tussle. There were some good Buff Leghorns among the winners.

Orpingtons might have been more numerous, although the quality was very good.

Polish were a walk-over for Oke and McNeil, but the quality was there. The rest of the classes are commented on elsewhere.

BUFF WYANDOTTES, WHITE WYANDOTTES, PARTRIDGE WYANDOTTES, WHITE PLYMOUTH ROCKS AND BUFF PLYMOUTH ROCKS AT BOSTON.

Buff Wyandottes, 114 birds; Cocks, 14.—First a very large bird with good shape, breast deep and full, back very good, tail full and well carried, sickles long and covering the tail well. In color this bird is even,rich golden buff all over, under color, fairly strong all through. Comb quite large, but well proportioned and sets well. Lobes have quite a bit of light, eyes good. A very nice bird of great size. Second: This bird is certainly a Wyandotte all over, as good in shape as they are made and without attempting to criticise the awards at all, we will say that he could have changed places with first and no fault found. Color, deep rich buff and undercolor solid buff. Has a little more dark in wing and tail than first. Has a fair comb, solid red lobes and nice bay eyes. A hard bird to beat. Third: Another good bird. Good size, good in shape, except that back, although short, is a bit too flat. Breast is round and full. His color is not as even or as good as first and second, under color good, except in hackle, where it shows somel ight. Comb and eyes good, lobes show a bit of white. Fourth: A large bird of good shape, better in shape of back than third and is also more even in color and stronger in under color. He is even in color, but has both light and dark in wing, and some dark in tail. Good head points, comb, eyes and lobes. Fifth: Very much like third and fourth in shape, size and head points. Color even, under color very strong all through, better in color of wing than fourth and has no more dark in tail. Comb not so good as fourth and a little white in lobes. The winning cock birds were all good ones and very little difference between them. Hens, 16—First' A beauty easily the best hen in the show. Just about perfect in shape, and large in size Color even and solid all over, including wing and tail. Has a fine head, comb and eye both good. but lobes have a bi of white. This hen can scarcely be beaten. Second: Not so good a bird a first and we think that she was not so good as birds that were placed lower Sheh as fine shape and color, quite a bit of dark in tail. Her head is too fine too much of the game order,comb poor, lobes and eyes good. Third:A large hen of good shape and clean color in wing and tail, but she is somewhat uneven in body color and appears a bi mottled. Has a nice comb, eye too light and lobes have some light. Fourth: Another bird very much like third in shape, size and color; she is also somewhat mottled and has some dark in tail. Has a good head and is better in lobes than third. Fifth: A large hen with good shape, except being a little pinched in tail. Color a nice shade of buff all over, even and smooth. Good clean wings and tail. She has the same fault as second in head, as her head is too fine. Comb fair, eyes and lobes all right. This hen should have been placed higher. Cockerels, 21—First: A good Wyandotte in shape and of fairly good color. Color is hardly even and there is some light in his under color. Wings show some dark. Tail fairly good, some dark. Head very good, comb fair, eyes light and lobes all right While a good bird, there were others that were as good. Second: Fine colored bird, being a light, bright buff, quite even in color, under color strong all through. Good in shape and carries himself in good style. Comb is his worst fault, as it is much too large. Eye fine, lobes all right. Solid buff wings and almost solid in tail. Third: A darker bird than second, even in color, good in under color, solid buff wings but tail has some dark. In shape he is very similar to first. Comb good, lobes clean and eyes fine. A good bird. Fourth: A larger bird than any of the other winners, very nice in shape, except that breast is not quite full enough. Color not quite even, hackle and back being of different shades of buff. Under color good, except in hackle, which shows some white. Tail and wings quite clean. Comb is about the right size, but has a poor spike,it being short, or we might say, there was no spike at all. Eye light, lobes clean. Fifth: A finely colored bird and just about solid buff all over. This bird fails badly in shape, being long and straight on the back and lacking in breast. Nice comb, clean lobes, but eyes are light. With better shape would be a winner. Pullets 17—First: A fine large pullet, with good shape and even rich color all over, under color very strong in every section. Wings free from any foreign color, but tail has quite a lot of dark. She is rather coarse around the head and has a poor comb and light eyes. Second: Just about the same size as first and of the same shade of color. Good shape except in tail, which is rather pinched and not quite long enough. Under color lighter than first and wings not so clean, but tail is cleaner. Better in head than first, nice comb, good eyes and lobes. Third: Another large pullet with nice blocky shape. Color good, but not exactly even all over, under color strong all through and wings and tail almost free from foreign color. Comb, lobes and eyes good. A fine bird. Fourth: A small bird with nice even color, good under color, clean wings, but has quite a lot of dark in tail. Fairly good comb, good lobes and eyes. Better birds than this were not placed. She is too small and not the best in shape. Fifth: We could not help thinking that this was the best pullet in the class and should have been first. She is good in size and shape and fine in color, being of the right shade and even all over. Under color strong, wings and tail just about clean. In head points she beats any pullet in the class, as she has a fine Wyandotte head, neat comb and good eyes and lobes. Pens 9—First: This pen is an easy winner. The cock is as good as any cock in the whole lot, and if he had been in the single class would have made a good run for first place. Four fine females with this male make a pen that has shape and color and they match well, all being of the same shade of buff. Good combs and clean wings and tails put on the finish. Second: Another fine pen, all five birds being large, good shape and fairly even color. The male is a good one all through and the females are good. They are not so well matched in color as the first pen. Third: Another pen of nice large birds, the male being a very large one. He is quite light in color and the whole pen is of a lighter shade than first and second. They are well matched in color, size and shape Fourth: This pen is close up to the winners, as they are all birds of good size, type and color and are quite well matched. The male is a particularly short, blocky bird and good in color and comb. A good pen. Fifth: This pen is composed of five nice large birds, good shape and color, but the male is too dark for the females, and he has black in tail and both black and white in wings. Females are nice color, and all have good heads. A male that matched the females better would have made a better pen.

White Wyandottes, 225 birds—Cocks, 30—First: A large bird, grand in shape, just about pure white in color, nice neat comb, good lobes and eyes. Second: Another good bird not quite so large as first, and not quite so good in shape, but very clear in color,good comb, eyes lobes and legs. Was second cockerel at Boston two years ago. Third:Another good one, hardly as large as first and second; fines hape and color, very neat in head points as comb is small and well shaped, wattles, lobes and eyes very fine. A hard bird to beat. 4th, just about the same kind of bird as 3rd, back a bit too flat, color clear, comb good, eyes and lobes all right; 5th, as pure white a bird as there was in the whole lot, good shape and color, nice comb, lobes and eyes. He fails in shape of breast. There was very little difference in the quality of these five cocks as they are all extra fine ones. Hens (30). 1st, a big white one, good in shape, and way up in size; rather too large and heavily built; nice neat comb, good eyes, lobes and legs; 2nd, not much difference between her and first, good shape, size and color, good head; legs and beak somewhat light in color; 3rd, another big one, rather long on the back, all right in color, head a bit coarse, good comb, eyes and lobes; 4th and 5th,just about as good as the winner; very little choice between them. Cockerels (40). 1st, a very fine bird in all ways, shape, color and head points just about right; a true Wyandotte; 2nd, a very short, blocky fellow with clear white color, good head and good legs; about the only criticism we could make about him is that he might be just a bit too high up on legs; 3rd,much such a bird as 1st, clear color and good shape, good legs and nice head; 4th, the whitest bird in the class; he is fine in shape, has fine legs, lobes and eyes, but he is not good in comb; 5th, very much like 2nd in shape, being short and blocky but standing rather high on legs; nice clear color, good legs and head points.

Pullets (36). 1st, a beauty and an easy winner; fine blocky shape, pure white color, not very rich in color of legs and beak, head points about perfect; 2nd, a large blocky pullet, nice clear color, not quite so good in shape of back as 1st, good head, beak too light in color, legs fair; 3rd, a nice pullet in all ways, very close up to the 1st and 2nd, shape, color, head and legs all good; 4th, a nice white bird of good size, but hardly as good as the others in shape, being somewhat long and straight on the back, beak light in color; 5th, a big one, nice in shape and color; just about such a bird as 2nd in all ways. Pens (17). 1st, a good pen, well matched, birds all of the right type and color; 2nd, close up, birds all large, good shape and clear white; 3rd, another good pen in size, shape and color; 4th, not much beaind the others in any way; 5th, right on deck with the rest of them and all of the winning pens of this variety were a credit to the breed and to their breeders.

Partridge Wyandottes (62 birds). Cocks (6). 1st, a nice big fellow, good in color and striping, some red in breast, good head and nice legs, back too long and straight, breast fair; 2nd, another large one, good color, fair striping, breast cleaner than first, fair comb, light eyes and light in lobes. He too is too long and straight on back; 3rd, a more blocky bird, just about the same as 1st and 2nd in color and striping; lots of red in breast and fluff, good comb, light eye and some white in lobes; 4th, a smaller bird, fairly good shape, darker in color, well striped, good clean breast and nice head; 5th, a lighter colored bird than the other winners and not good in shape or striping, has a very neat head and small comb. Hens (12). 1st, a massive hen, good shape, good color and fine penciling all over; has a neat head for so large a hen; legs nice in color for a Partridge Wyandotte female; 2nd, close up, richer in color, just about as good in penciling, but not so good in shape, as she fails in breast and back; good in head points and legs; 3rd, not so good a hen as 1st and 2nd in color, too long and straight on the back; good penciling, especially in fluff, fairly good head and legs; 4th, rather light in color, fairly well penciled all over, very nice shape, good, legs not so good as the birds above her; 5th, a good shaped hen, not so good in color or penciling as the others, good head, dark legs. Cockerels (12). 1st, a very fine bird and the best shaped Partridge Wyandotte male in the show, very nice rich color, fine striping, neat head and nice legs; an easy winner; 2nd, another fine bird, good in shape, except a bit off in back, best colored Partridge Wyandotte male; finely striped hackle and saddle, nice legs, fair comb and eye, light in lobes; 3rd, lighter in color than 1st and 2nd, nicely striped, good colored breast, fair shape, good legs, not first class in comb; 4th, a dark bird with nice clean breast and fair striping; quite good in shape nice legs, fair head, comb very small; 5th, a lighter colored bird than 4th, nice shape, fine legs, good striping neat in head, comb small. Pullets (12). 1st, a fine pullet, the best colored Partridge Wyandotte female nicely penciled all over, fair shape, good head, legs somewhat dusky; an easy winner; 2nd, larger than 1st, about the same in shape and penciling no better in head and legs; 3rd, not so good as 1st or 2nd in color, about the same in shape, as well penciled, and no better in head and legs; 4th, about the same color as 1st and 2nd, not so well penciled, good in size and shape, legs fair color, comb poor; 5th a good shaped bird of about the right color, but not so well penciled as the other winners; very good in head, legs quite dusky. Pens (4). 1st, a very fine pen of Partridge Wyandottes, large size, females well matched in size, shape and color; the male bird was a fine one in every way; this pen wins easily; 2nd, a very nice lot of birds, all good in color and markings, large in size, good shape; the male in this pen is a very large, nicely gotten up bird.

White Plymouth Rocks (118). Cocks (9). 1st, a grand good bird in color, very good in shape, very nice in head, as his comb is good shape and eyes and lobes right, very nice legs for a White Rock cock; not just right in shape of tail; 2nd, a big one and very nice in color, good shape, good head and comb, and nice yellow legs; like 1st he is not right in tail; 3rd, a fine large bird, good color and shape, comb and eyes not so good as 1st and 2nd, good [illegible] tail much better than 1st and 2nd; 4th, a good shape bird not quite so clear in color as 1st and 2nd, short legs, comb is good shape, but has only three points, eyes good; 5th, the largest bird in the lot, fair shape and good color; he fails in comb as it is too short and too high. Hens (15). 1st, a large hen, pure white in color and of true Rock shape, fine in comb, eyes and legs; an easy winner; 2nd, a pure white hen, shorter in body than 1st and not so good in comb; legs are of fine color; 3rd, almost the same shape as 1st and as good in color; she fails only in legs and comb; 4th, a large white hen of the right type; nice legs and good head; comb not of the best; 5th, not quite so large as the other winners, but of the proper type and good color; good comb, eyes and legs Cockerels (25). 1st, the best White Rock male in the lot, fine in size, shape and color, comb, eyes, lobes and legs good; 2nd a big one, good in color and shape, nice yellow legs, comb too large, eyes right; 3rd, a fine bird and we like him better than second; not so large but just as good in shape and color, better in comb, and as good in legs; 4th, a nice bird in shape and color, not as large as 1st and 2nd, good legs and eyes, but poor in comb; 5th, another nice bird in shape and color, good comb, eyes and legs. Pullets (24). 1st, a grand pullet in color and shape, nice legs and eyes, but comb is not quite right; an easy winner; 2nd, a larger bird than 1st and as good in shape, but not so pure in color, not better in comb, legs and eyes good; 3rd, a bird of the right type, good color, nice eyes, fair comb, but color of beak and legs is too light; 4th a big one, good shape, fairly good in color, comb not quite right, light eye, good legs and beak; 5th another good shaped bird, good color, fair comb, right in eye, beak and leg. Pens (9). 1st, a pen of nice white birds all of the same type; the male is a bit too blocky, but white and he has a nice comb; 2nd, these birds are well matched in color and shape. They are all white, but short in the back and blocky in shape 3rd, large birds, good in shape and color, fair combs. The male is minus his sickle feathers. 4th, a nice pen of white birds, all well matched in type fair combs and good legs; 5th, a good pen of white birds, all good in shape; the male has too heavy a comb.

Buff Plymouth Rocks.—(90 birds). Cocks (21). 1st, a large bird, fair in shape, back is not long enough and tail is carried too high; color good, not quite even, undercolor good except in hackle, where it is light; comb large and has only three points; eyes light, wings and tail quite clean; 2nd, about like 1st in color and size, undercolor light, wings and tail quite clean, back longer than 1st, tail carried lower and smaller in comb; 3rd, a better colored bird than 1st and 2nd, but has a lot of dark in wing and tail and some light lacing on breast; good comb; 4th and 5th, both nice birds and close up to the winner. Hens (13). 1st, a grand hen, one color all over, fine in shape and up in size, fine undercolor, wings and tail not quite clean, fair comb; 2nd, very much like first in shape and color; these two hens are in a class by themselves when compared with the rest. This hen has cleaner wings and tail, and better comb and eye, but is not so smooth and solid in color as first; 3rd, this is a good shaped bird, but not so smooth and even in color as first and second; wings clean, but tail has a lot of dark; poor comb; 4th and 5th, both good hens and fully as good as third in all respects. Cockerels (21). 1st, a good one and an easy winner, fine in shape, nice even color, good undercolor, tail very clean, wings show a little white; fine comb, legs and eyes; 2nd, much like 1st in color, not so good in shape, rich undercolor, good clean wings and tail, poor comb; 3rd, another fine bird, as good in color as first and second, too short in the back, has a bit of light in undercolor, good clean wings and tail, and good comb; 4th and 5th, very much alike in color and shape; both too short in back; good combs, fairly clean in tails and wings. Pullets (20). 1st, a beauty and an easy winner; nice shape, smooth even color all over, good undercolor, clean tail and wings, nice comb, legs and eyes; 2nd, another good one, nice even color, good shape, clean wing, a bit of dark in tail, rich undercolor, good comb, good eyes, and a little light on legs; 3rd, a good shaped bird, even in color, good undercolor, some dark in wings and tail, light beak and eyes and poor comb; 4th and 5th, both good birds and worthy of their place. Pens (3). 1st, a fairly good pen, females not quite smooth and solid in color, but fair in shape. All have bad combs. Male is nice in color, too short in back and way off in comb. 2nd. We like this pen better than 1st. They are as good in color and shape as 1st and have much better combs. 3rd. This pen is darker in color than the others, but about the same in size, shape and combs.

HENRY R. INGALLS.

LIGHT BRAHMAS.

Cocks. 1st, a large, well-shaped bird, fails in head points and a little too low on legs for a typical Brahma; 2nd, the best colored bird in the class, fails in breast and carries his wings a little loose; 3rd, a broad, deep-breasted bird, strong in color points and a rong candidate for the blue ribbon; 4th, off in head and comb, too dark in back for the present day Light Brahma; 5th, a large, full-breasted bird, but poor in hackle and tail. Hens. 1st, a large bird with nice tail coverts, fine laced hackle, but did not fill well in front; 2nd, a typical Brahma, fine in shape and head points, good color and a hard bird to beat; 3rd, a blocky bird, extra good in color, but fails in comb and head and a little too short on legs. 4th, a nice bird all over, fine shape and nice hackle, beautiful tail coverts and should have gone higher; 5th, a large bird, but fails in hackle and tail. Cockerels. 1st, a large bird, good in color, but fails in breast and comb and does not stand well in coop; 2nd, a blocky, deep breasted bird with nice head and comb, his tail being his weakest point; 3rd, fails in head and breast, good in color points; 4th, a good, promising bird, but needs more time to develop; 5th, a nice, showy bird, strong in color points and might have gone higher Pullets. 1st, in a class by herself and a hard bird to criticize; 2nd, a nice, showy bird, good in color points, fails in shape of back and tail; 3rd, a large, broad bird with excellent hackle and tail, but not quite white enough in surface color; 4th, a good bird, fine color, but needs more time; 5th, a very good bird, but fails in hackle and tail.

RHODE ISLAND REDS.

Single Combs.—Cocks, class of fifteen. 1st, a large, broad-breasted, rich red surface color, deep undercolor, little off in shape, poor comb, eye quite good, off in tail; his color placed him ahead; 2nd, color too dark, but good in shape, comb little large, good in tail, off in legs. Hens, class of twenty-three. 1st grand in shape, good color, little mealy in wings, good eye; 2nd, very much like the first as to shape and color, comb too thick, tail little light. Cockerels, class of thirty-six. 1st, rich, even surface color, good eye, back short, tail pinched a little off in undercolor in hackle and shoulders; 2nd good shape, off in comb and ear lobes, color good, legs showing the strong red pigment. Pullets, class of thirty-one. 1st, fairly good shape, good in color, off in comb, tail too light; 2nd, poor comb color, little mealy, off in tail.

R. C. Cocks, class of thirteen. 1st, big stocky bird, rich in both surface and under color, poor comb, weak in eyes and tail, off in wattles; 2nd, good head, quite good in shape strong in legs, wing little dark. Hens, class of twenty. 1st, shape and color good, head little pale, tail good. This is the same hen that won first at Madison Square. 2nd, little off in comb and size, fairly good in both shape and color.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

At Boston, Mass., on January 19. Mr. George E. Howard, editor and publisher of The Feather, Washington, D. C., bought a one-half interest in The American Fancier. Beginning with the first issue in March, it will be printed at the finely equipped plant of George E. Howard. There will be no change in the editorial management, but many changes will be made in The American Fancier and The Feather that will bring both up to the highest standard of excellence. The American Fancier will be the weekly edition of The Feather, while the latter will be the monthly edition of the former. The staff of correspondents engaged will be shortly announced, as well as the business policy of the new corporation that will be in charge of the destinies of both papers.

The Boston show is over.

It proved to be a history-making affair, as we anticipated in our remarks last week.

It proved much more, viz.: An annual Boston snow is a necessity. Ask the Hon. Josepn Hilldorfer of Pittsburgh, Pa., and he will answer: "I'll be at Boston every year after this."

While it is a source of regret to us that Boston did not have a show last year, we feel that the omission has commissioned the powers that be to perpetuate annually the Boston show. The fanciers of the United States demand this, and the liberal management of the Beantown function appreciate it.

New England is the cradle of the fancy of the United States, and why should not Boston be the show of that land of fanciers every year?

We are pleased to state that the next annual show at Boston has been announced to take place at Mechanics Hall, the third week in January, 1906.

What happened at the Boston show will be found elsewhere in this issue What others think of the exhibition will also be found there, and perhaps in the next few issues more or less interesting facts regarding it will be printed.

Mr. McGrew remarked to us: "The display of incubators, brooders and poultry appliances at Boston was the most remarkable gathering I have ever seen, even exceeding the great St. Louis display." Who will dispute this statement?

The Big Newark show is an next week, and Spratts will coop and feed it, while Deacon Sparks will look after Supt. Rackham in the latter's effort to pose as an exhibition Game. The deacon thinks station is all right, but claims that legs and shanks are potent factors all the same; consequently he insists on fair judgment, and we are informed that Messrs. Russ and Stanton have been appointed to decide which of the two above mentioned gentlemen is entitled to the gold special at Newark, viz.: The gamest legged man in the show.

We are surprised that no report of the cooping committee at St. Louis has been furnished the American Poultry Association at its annual meeting at Minneapolis. Why not? The fanciers of America demand this report. and we are glad to state, so does one of the members of that committee. Unless this report is made public, there will be dissatisfaction existing all along the line, and from what we can learn, a rigid examination and investigation will be asked for at the next meeting of the American Poultry Association. Publish the figures, explain the rank injustice of cooping birds in unsuitable coops. This is what the poultry fanciers and exhibitors who were at St. Louis want to know.

It is up to some of the higher powers, the "John Doe" perhaps, to explain this miserable piece of business, and The American Fancier will not let up until the true inwardness of the affair is placed before the poultry fraternity of the United States and Canada.

A movement is on foot in New England to boom the Light Brahma fowl at the next Boston show, and we learn that George Purdue will be asked to again place the ribbons, as he did some years ago, to the entire satisfaction of all the Light Brahma contingent.

We have received a number of letters from individuals that pitch into the Herald Square show held in New York the first week in December. We threw these into the waste-basket, for the simple reason that the writers did not have the courage to sign their names to the communications they sent us. Anonymous stuff is not recognized in The American Fancier office, so be good in the future, you well-meaning scribes, and sign your "John Hancocks" if you want to be recognized in these columns.

Our associate editor, George E. Howell, will leave New York city after April 1, and again reside and take charge of Spruce Farm, Howells, N. Y. We regret to have Mr. Howell leave the metropolis of America, but we do congratulate him on his getting back to his native heath and again taking up a business that he is qualified for, viz.: cattle and poultry raising. He will continue his column of "Practical Pointers" in The American Fancier in the future, and we are of the opinion that they will be even better than in the past. We base this on our thorough knowledge of the man who writes—from experience. This makes articles valuable, serviceable and instructive.

The American Fancier will have a New York office and it will be well located. More later.

ST. LOUIS PRIZE MONEY.

Those who have not received the prize money awarded them on poultry, pigeons and pet stock at the St. Louis Fair, might hasten payment if they will write to Frederick J. V. Skiff, Director of Exhibits, World's Fair, St. Louis, and ask him for their money. It might not be of any disadvantage to call the attention of your Member of Congress to the delayed payment.

T. F. M'GREW.

A GOOD RECORD.

Mr. A. C. Brashears of Baltimore, Md., bought eight hens, in market,early in March, 1904. They were common hens, but most of them showed more or less Plymouth Rock blood; one a half-bred Brown Leghorn, and one of no particular breed. I send the following record of these hens for the ten (10) months, except (2) were killed on Thanksgiving day, and the last few days of November, and the month of December, there were only 6 hens. Three were set, and one raised a brood of chicks.

March	108
April	183
May	170
June	149
July	163
August	126
September	102
October	46
November	13
December	52
Total	1112

Mr. Brashears now has 6 of these hens and 6 pullets, all late May hatch. Pullets are from the half-bred Leghorn, except two pure B. P. Rocks. One of these Rocks has begun to lay, and has laid five eggs in six days. Who says common hens won't pay when attended to properly.

BOSTON SHOW.

R. C. cockerels, class of twenty-two. 1st, a grand bird, good shape and color, strong in head, eyes and legs, little too light in tail; 2nd, weak in comb, too much contrast in surface color, quite good in shape, off in tail. Pullets, class of twenty-two. 1st, color and shape good, strong in comb, eyes and tail; 2nd, head fails, good in eyes and comb, surface color good, under color too light, and little too high in tail. In pens, we found six in the Single Comb and seven in Rose Comb,and as a whole they were a strong class.

D. P. SHOVE.

HAMBURGS.

The classes of this beautiful and useful breed were not up to the former shows in numbers, but the quality was there generally. In Golden Spangles there were 3 cocks, 6 hens, 3 cockerels and 6 pullets. There is a steady improvement in the spangles of this variety, but they are still far behind the Silver Spangled in this respect. The latter brought out 6 cocks, 9 hens, 8 cockerels and a dozen pullets. The Silvers carry off the prize for quality over all other varieties, both in males and females.

It will be some time before so many finely marked Silvers will be brought together again. Their owners are entitled to be proud of them. Golden Penciled were small in numbers, having only 2 males and 8 females, but they were good ones.

Silver Penciled, 2 males and 6 females. The Blacks dropped off very much in males, there being only 2 cocks and 2 cockerels. Hens 8, pullets 8. The quality in females was great, almost every one worthy of a ribbon. They were very free from the purple sheen once so common and were nearly all in a beautiful green sheen, showing improvement much to be commended. It is hoped that the breeders will bring out a strong team of cockerels another year, as there is no more beautiful bird than a black cockerel if hatched early and brought out in fine condition. A fair sample of Whites was shown in all classes.

"SHEEN."

BANTAMS OTHER THAN GAME.

The Variety Bantam classes were not as large as we expected to find,but what was lacking in quantity was made up in quality.

Golden Sebrights.—Cock. 1st, nice shape, bad comb, smutty tail; 2nd,well laced, clear tail, good comb; 3rd close up. Hens. 1st, too heavy in lacing, good shape; 2nd, good all around bird, balance of class close up. Cockerels. 1st, nice shape, poor lacing; 2nd loses on shape; 3rd, best laced bird in class. Pullets. 1st, heavy laced, good shape; 2nd, better lacing, trifle larger, balance an even lot of fair birds.

Silver Sebrights.—Cocks. 1st, good shape and lacing; 2nd, about the same. Hens. 1st and 2nd, good, but trifle large; 3rd, best in class but out of condition. Two very good cockerels and pullets shown.

R. C. Blacks.—Cocks. 1st, a fair bird, poor comb and lobes; 2nd and 3rd, nice birds; 4th should have changed places with winner. Hens. 1st, small and well shaped; 2nd and 3rd, fine in head points and color. Cockerels. 1st, a miniature Hamburg; 2nd, another cracker. Pullets. 1st and 2nd, good all over.

Buff Cochin Bantams. Hot competition. Cocks. 1st, good color, lacks leg feathering; 2nd, fine length of feather, too wild to show up well. 3rd, fair bird; 4th, a miniature Cochin in shape and color, trifle off on comb. Hens. 1st, and cup winner a wonder in shape, color and length of feather; 2nd and 3rd, good color and condition; 4th, better shape, but too light in color. Cockerels. 1st, easy winner, small, good shape and feather; 2nd, trifle long in body; 3rd, better shape and color, but too large; balance about even. Pullets. 1st, wins on color; 2nd, small and well feathered; 3rd, best shape, balance of class fit to win in good company.

White Cochin Bantams, small classes. The winning birds excel in color and looseness of feather. Only a few Blacks shown, the winners worthy of better competition.

Partridge Cochins, a nice lot of birds, but trifle large. The same may be said of Light and Dark Brahmas.

Japanese Bantams, a nice display of all colors, the winning white cockerel and pullet, typical Japs.

Polish Bantams were represented by some very good whites, and a few Buff Laced worthy of special mention.

CHAS. M. SMITH.

JUDGE McGREW'S REPORT.

Buff Cochins.—The best lot that has ever been shown at Boston. The cock bird and cup winner is the finest specimen that we have ever met with. Truly Oakland Farm have overdone themselves in quality, winning all the main prizes and many of the minor ones in all the open classes, as well as in the exhibition yards. The Partridge Cochins are equally fine in comparison with other years and other shows. The cock bird that won the first and the cup, is pronounced as one of the best Cochins shown in years. The display of Whites are a remarkably fine lot. There were no Blacks shown.

Buff Cochin Bantams.—In the Buff Cochin display there were a remarkably fine lot of birds. The cock bird that won the blue ribbon at St. Louis gained the same position here. In hens there were some surprisingly fine ones. The cup went to the hen shown by Mr. Schilling, perhaps the best of her kind ever shown. The Whites and the Blacks full up to the quality that we generally find at Boston. A few Partridge Cochin Bantams of good quality as to shape and color, but rather oversized, were shown.

INDIAN GAMES.—There was a grand display of Indian Games in the show. The cock bird from California was awarded the blue ribbon, and seems to be classed as a remarkably good bird in every way but color, his color not equal to either the second or third winner. In hens and pullets the judge selected for shape and Indian Game type,rather than for color. While the winners belonged all to the same party, some of the Indian Game people preferred the second hen and pullet to the first. In Pit Games there was an excellent lot of all high quality, and here, as at New York, they seemed to be gaining in favor.

GAME BANTAMS.

Game Bantams at Boston were not so large in entries as in former years, still the deficiency was made up by the general high quality prevailing throughout the classes. B. B. Red cock. 1st, a bird of the proper stamp with nice color for a cock, wins easy. 2nd, on the same type, balance close up. Hens. Winner, nice station, trifle large; 2nd, nice type and better size, but fails to winner in color; balance good ones.

B. B. Red cockerels. 1st, a trim little game, with nice top color; 2nd, longer in body, not so well developed; balance very fair. Pullets, a nice class, not much choice between 1st and 2nd. Brown Reds, only one pair pullets shown.

Golden Duckwing. 1st cock, a good one, wins easy; balance very fair. Hens, only one, but a good one. Cockerels. 1st, fails in tail carriage, otherwise hard to find fault with; 2nd, lacks reach. Pullets, only two, but both nice ones, very neat and trim.

Silver Duckwings.—Cockerels. 1st, a promising bird; 2nd, another good one, pushed hard for first honors; 3rd, very fair. Pullets. 1st, a beauty, worthy of special mention; 2nd, and 3rd, both of the proper type, with good color.

Red Pyle. Cocks. 1st, an easy winner; 2nd, has developed too much color. Winning hen a good one. Ckls. 1st, a bird of the proper stamp, with nice color; 2nd and 3rd, good ones. Same may be said of pullets.

Birchens, only a small class. Winning cock and pullet worthy of special mention, as they have the quality of the real thing in Game Bantams. Only one pair Wheaten pullets was shown in A. O. V. class. A. O. S.

MINORCAS AT BOSTON

The American Black Minorca Club held its annual meeting at the Boston show with the result of bringing together an exceptionally fine class, consisting of 119 Black Minorcas, a class, which according to all reports, surpassed all Minorca exhibits of the winter thus far, in quality, though in number it fell below the club's exhibit at the World's Fair in November, and at Chicago one year ago It was freguishedoG8d shrdlu etaoin cmfwmhtsm quently remarked at Boston by disinterested fanciers, that the Minorca class excelled in quality all other classes in the show. I cannot say positively as to that, as there were many excellent classes which I did not examine critically. Certainly, I never knew a class of birds to receive more favorable comment than the Minorcas of 1905 at Boston. Many lucrative sales were made and the breed added many new admirers to its host of old friends.

Joseph P. Hildorfer won the grand special for best display of Single Comb Black Minorcas and George Dexter won the Massachusetts cup for best display of Rose Comb Black Minorcas.

Every bird in all of the Minorca classes and varieties equaled or exceeded the new standard weights, showing that Minorca club exhibitors are breeding advance of the standard.

In Single Combs the first prize cock was a grand bird, especially fine in head points. After the awards had been made, the owner told me that he had refused an offer of $125 for that cock. I do not wonder that he preferred not to part with such a bird. The 2d prize cock (World's Fair 1st) was also an exceptionally fine bird and the difference which decided the winning between him and the first was only slight. The 3d prize cock was an old timer, having won in two Boston shows previous to this and at Chicago and at Springfield, Mass., last year. In plumage color he surpassed the 1st and 2d cocks, but lost in ear lobes and shape, showing the effect of age, and he was not quite so large a bird. 4th, 5th and 6th cocks were also fine birds.

1st prize hen, large and well shaped and won special for best colored Minorca female in the show, a truly grand bird, a winner at Springfield, Mass., in December and at Chicago last year. 2d hen, (2d also at World's Fair) another grand, large bird, which attracted much attention on account of her great size and beauty. 3d prize hen also a grand one. 4th hen would have reached a higher place had she been in better condition. 5th, 6th and 7th deserve special mention, but space and time forbid.

In cockerels the 1st prize winner was a wonder and won special for best head of male Minorca in the show. 2d prize cockerel, another grand one, comb slightly bent, was the only point in which he was second to the first cockerel. 3d and 4th cockerels, and in fact every one of the 14 cockerels in the class would have been a creditable first winner in most of the shows.

The 1st prize pullet, also 1st at the World's Fair, probably as near the ideal Minorca as we shall find, and having won 1st at two of the greatest exhibits given by the club, places her owner in an enviable position, but she had to be examined closely and compared carefully, section by section, to the 2d winner before their respective places could be determined so closely were they matched, and like the cockerels, the balance of the class of 19 pullets were exceptionally fine and their places were determined by merely slight differences. Age and condition did much to decide their respective winnings and failures to win.

There was quite a strong ambition among exhibitors to win 1st pen, because the $50 Harding cup went to 1st pen as special, two winning being required for ownership, George Dexter having won once. Dr Holmes, a new exhibitor at the club's meeting, covered himself with glory by winning 1st pen in an exceedingly strong class, the Harding cup and special for the best shaped Minorca female in the show. The pens from 1 to 6 were all creditable.

ROSE COMB BLACK MINORCAS

The reputation of this grand variety for excellence and attractiveness was well sustained. Many persons visited the show for the sole purpose of seeing specimens of this now most famous of all varieties and crowds gathered before their coops to admire them. Fine specimens from the yards of four different breeders were shown and competition was lively.

The first prize cock was a large bird, weighed 10 lbs., won 2d at the St. Louis World's fair, a typical Minorca in every way, finest of green sheen in plumage, grand white lobes and good firm comb. He received much favorable comment for extremely long and well shaped back and body, and low carried tail. 2d prize cock was a son of the 1st, much like his sire, but not quite so large. He with two fine hens sails for Germany early in February. 3d prize cock another very handsome bird, very fine plumage, not so large as 1st and 2d winners, and carries tail a little too high.

The 1st prize hen was a perfect beauty in style, finish and color of plumage. She had a small, perfectly shaped comb closely fitting to head, and was shown in the very best of condition. 2d hen, also a grand bird, 1st winner at the World's Fair, weighed 7½ lbs., but needs about two weeks more to beat her best. 3d, 4th and 5th hens, all fine large birds above standard weight.

All cockerels and pullets were fine large, typical Minorcas with small, neat Rose combs, white lobes, red faces and green black plumage. They made a beautiful sight.

There were two pens in which the types shown were quite different. The first pen was composed of birds longer in body and back, with better carried tails than 2d pen, about the same age birds in 2d pen, but much larger, had better combs. Unfortunately there is an error in the catalogue, which makes it appear that the winners of 2d prize were awarded first and vice versa. This was no fault of the management of the show or the judge, but obviously someone had changed the number cards on coop, so that the birds in one coop were credited to the owner of those in the other. When the change was noticed the catalogue had been printed. The actual awards on Rose Comb Black Minorca pens are 1st, George H. Northup; 2d, M. V. Allen & Son, the reverse of which appears in the catalogue.

In White Minorcas there were only four birds shown, cock, hen, cockerels and pullet. The Whites and the Single Comb Blacks were judged by the writer of this article, and I am gratified to know that all seemed pleased with the work.I did not hear one word of dissatisfaction. T. F. McGrew judged the Rose Combs in his usual careful and correct manner and gave perfect satisfaction.

GEORGE H. NORTHUP.

Houdans.—1st cock, a large bodied, well shaped, finely colored bird, with a very large, well shaped crest; beard and muffling fully developed; a truly great bird, wins the $100 champion challenge cup. 2nd. Same style of a bird as 1st; fails a little in size to the 1st. 3rd, a tall dark bird, deficient in head points. 1st, 2nd, 3rd cockerels way up in style and finish and splendidly shown. 1st and 2nd hen stand out prominently for shape, size, color and crest development, in a class of strong birds, and are easy winners. 3rd, a good bird for size and shape, fails in crest development. 1st, 2d, 3d pullets. Three beautiful birds in style and finish, with true Houdan shape and splendid crest development, beards and mufflings, nothing in their class can touch them.

Creves and La Fleches represented by a pair of each kind,but being worthy of a larger competition. Fine large birds; best we have seen in years.

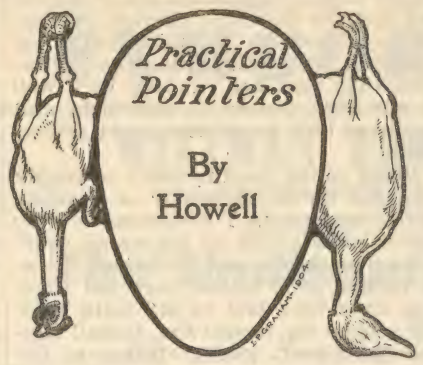
SOME MARYLAND FANCIERS.

There are many excellent poultry fanciers in Maryland. Whenever they exhibit their stock at leading poultry shows they win a satisfactory share of the honors. Among the Maryland fanciers is Mr. Charles E. Ford, who has for a good many years raised Light Brahmas and White Leghorns of a high grade. Jesse Riggs as a White Wyandotte breeder, has made show records. John Ridgley of H., has won many laurels with his Barred Rocks, so well managed by Mr. Phipps. Mrs. E. Turner has made a specialty of White Wyandottes for a number of years. winning prizes at many leading shows. Miss Anna E. Brennan has also made good records with Barred Plymouth Rocks. M. E. Phelps is not new in the show arena. He is now raising White and Buff Plymouth Rocks. I recently visited Mr. Phelps' Brightwood Farm near Laurel. He keeps some fine Jerseys, and Colley dogs as a side line with his poultry. I was surprised to find such a large uniformily good flock of Buff Rocks. Advised him to show in New York. I note that he did and received a good share of the honors. Mr. Phelps is an ardent fancier and thinks as much of the comfort of all his live stock as he does of his own. He has a son Howard, seven years old, who is a regular "phenom." He can point out the best buffs and quickly detect any defect, as an experienced expert. I pointed out a "fine colored pullet," and the little fellow said colors alright, but she carries her tail a little bit too high, there's a better one." and he was correct. Senator Gorman is a neighbor adjoining Mr. Phelps farm. Mr. P. is fixed for an extensive poultry business, as the farm was originally fitted out for a duck ranch.

Our universal friend, John L. Cost, is soon to get in line again as a poultry breeder. He will keep his old favorites the Light Brahmas, but hasn't decided just what other breeds he will keep. He has asked many "disinterested" friends advice, and found out that there are so many breeds that are each so much better than any of the others that he can't make a selection. At last account he was thinking of making a cross of Davenport Damoselle Cranes and Faverolles. He thinks if he could get a breed with English side whiskers like the Faverolles, that would have that stately glide walk of those Cranes, he'd be suited. G. O. B.



CORRECTION.

Editor American Fancier:—

I see an error in your issue of Jan. 14th, in your report of Leghorns at the N. Y. Show. You state that all the Black Leghorns were exhibited by Wyckoff and that all prizes went to him, which is an injustice to me and an error I want to correct in your next issue. I won FIRST prize on pen of S. C. Black Leghorns and received special merit on the quality of the pen.

It only takes a moments time and a small amount of space to give credit for any thing found in the columns of a contemporary that is good enough to reprint.

This remark is called forth, from observing where an ink-slinging pirate has stolen the excellent poultry notes of our Editor Brown's Budget bodily, and contemptuously appropriated to the use of his paper, without credit or comment.

Silver Spangled Hamburgs

The Brilliant
WORLD'S FAIR
record which entitled my birds to claim against all competitors from the United States, the

Championship of the United States,

has been strikingly endorsed by the awards at the big New York and Boston Shows, where my birds won against the best breeders, including the noted Canadians, an anparalleled list of prizes :

MADISON SQAURE GARDEN, 1905

Second, Third Cock; First, Second, Third Hen; First, Second Cockerel; First, Second, Third Pullet.

BOSTON, 1905

First, Second Cock; First, Second Hen; First, Second, Third Cockerel; First, Second, Third Pullet; First Pen. Specials for best cock and four hens, and best cockerel and four pullets, and Cup for best display.

These birds have not been bought but have been bred in my own yards from parents also all bred in my own yards and are shown to be equally good as to males or females.

The proof of the pudding is in the eating. The test of a strain comes on the results of the breeding. The above record following previous years of great success at Boston, New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, New Haven and many other shows, speaks for my strain, and stamps it as 95-97 by the more systematical lay of the old hen and the increased number of shipments of new laid eggs that reach the market. My personal observation has been that eggs are running very well in size, and quality is extremely uniform and high in percentage of perfect eggs.

Being called upon recently to supply the eggs for an incubator at a young ladies' seminary, I compromised the matter of selection by taking an equal number of dozens from different chicken farms. If it should turn out these eggs have been laid by old maid hens, and useless for incubation, I shall suggest the sweet young things at the seminary go into executive session, and pass resolutions condemning the methods of the wretches who shipped me the eggs.

Proper training has much to do with successful showing of our fowls. The elongated deacon from Cape May County, in the Mosquito state, is an exception to this rule. Designing to capture a certain prize, he washed his birds with Ivory soap and tickled them under the chin with a rye straw, until the bird became what might properly be called pugnacious.

Now this bird was good enough to win, and the deacon was willing he should win, but he fought the judge, and was rude to him, so he passed him up. Deacon, how did the cars get down in the subway?

There is a moral to the above story, which reads, "always take the middle course and avoid extremes." Don't overtrain and don't overfeed. When feeeding a flock of hens to the limit, it is only too easy to increase just a trifle more, in an endeavor to squeeze in one more working day on the old hens program,an extra matinee performance so to speak, and the result is the loss of a week's eggs from that pen.. Such advice to the old stager is simply useless, and at times I hesitate to give it, yet it may check some fellow who is just approaching the danger line, in an eager desire to accomplish just a little more than the capacity of his flock.

It also may be the means of setting some fellow who is working on opposite line to thinking. It may cause him to take notice of some pen which would respond to an increased ration in a hurry.

Such being the case my apology is unnecessary. The classes at the Garden are getting to be so large it is no disgrace to be beaten. It isn't saying too much, when making the claim that every exhibitor goes there expecting to win, but when a class numbers up in the hundreds, they can't all win. The conscientious judge takes a great responsibility upon himself in handling such a class, how important that the best bird win, how important the winners shall not after the awards have been placed, prove to be deformed and keeping the reward of merit from better birds.

Whatever the cause, it is wonderful the advance in prices fancy bred fowls are selling for here in the Metropolis. A few years since, a chicken selling for a hundred was considered a wonder,now the ruling price is up to three hundred.

Nothing remarkable about the great outpouring of birds at Madison Square Garden. The many good things strolling about is very attractive bait to the expert angler.

Big prices at the Garden act as a stimulant throughout the country, helping to revive the fancy and encourage the most obscure, as well as the more prominent.

Editor American Fancier:—

In looking over your report of awards of the Erie Show, published in the issue of December 31st, 1904, I find the following errors, which I would kindly ask you to correct.

The name of F. W. Peters, winner on 1st cock, 1-2-4 cockerels, 1-4 hen, 1-2-3-4-5 pullet and 1st pen in White Plymouth Rocks was omitted.

Winner 1st cockerel Buff Plymouth Rock, name should be R. W. Candell.

Winner 1st cock,1st cockerel,3d pullet Black Java, name should be S. S. Barber.

F. E. THOMPSON, Sec'y.

Fertile eggs depend on healthy, active fowls. Exercise is as essential as a good mixed diet. See that the male bird is well fed. Some are so gallant they will not get their share of food. Examine the craw at night, and if not properly filled, give more food by lantern light. It is a little trouble, but it pays in many ways to do it.

Make early test to ascertain the fertility, per cent. of the eggs. Often there are hens that do not lay fertile eggs, so the male is not always the cause of so many unfertile eggs.

If you can manage to leave the pullets in possession of the house when you separate the cockerels from the flock they will do better than to send them to new, strange quarters.

A little learning is a dangerous thing in any occupation, but the man who knows it all in the poultry business is the biggest fool of all.

Turn over a new leaf of progress for the new year.

Give the houses a good airing every day, if only for a few minutes. Every day cleaning, even in winter should be the order, and this is imperative when the flock has to spend most of the day in the house.

Show reports are educational in many respects. They are also legitimate news to the fraternity. The paper that sifts the awards through an "our advertisers,' screen' furnishes a garbled, uninteresting report of no real value to any reader.

SECOND HAND

CYPHERS INCUBATORS

FOR SALE CHEAP

I have a large number of No. 3—360 egg size Cyphers Incubators, manufactured by the Cypher Incubator Co., Buffallo, N. Y., which I have taken to accomodate large operators who have installed Model Incubators (manufactured by me) in their hatching rooms. I will sell these Cyphers Incubators at $18 each. They are guaranteed to be in good working order—in fact, some of them were only bought of the Cyphers Incubator Co. late last season, and are less than a year old.

RE---MODEL---ED

Some of these No. 3—360 egg size Cyphers Incubators, manufactured and sold by the Cyphers Incubator Co., I have had shipped to my factory and fitted with my split bottom diaphragms and my new patent thermostat, and refinished. These machines I will sell at $24 each; and inasmuch as they contain my new thermostate, I will guarantee them to regulate more accurately, with less attention, and give larger average hatches than the 1905 Cyphers Incubator as made by the Cyphers Incubator Co. under its new management, or any other make of incubator on the market, with exception of the Model.

This, or your money back. Here is a genuine chance to purchase a good incubator that is really cheap.

The great number of shows already held (and to be) in New York State this season, is great evidence of the rapidly increasing interest in pure bred poultry. Make your matings now for the gerat Hagerstown Jubilee winners. The early bird catches the prize ribbon.

The winter shows are giving evidence of more careful breeding—the average quality of all breeds of poultry is constantly improving, the breed type becoming more pronounced. Damage to some of the breeds,by being oversized, is occasionally in evidence. Young fanciers must learn tne fact that with most breeds pushed beyond standard requirement weights, results in loss of breed shape, and makes the specimen coarse.

A SHOW AT ALBANY, N. Y.

The Albany Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock Association will hold a show at Albany, N. Y., March 15, 16 and 17, 1905. J. D. Jaquins and C. E. Rockenstyre will be the judges.

COCHINS.

OUR BUFF COCHINS have demonstrated the fact that they are the best up-to-date, winning first exhibition pen, Madison Square, 1904, 1-2-3 cock, 3-4-5 hen, 1-5-6 cockerel, 1-4-5 pullet Herald Square N. Y., 1904. Also silver cup in a class of 28. A few good birds for disposal at all times. Charles Magee, Linwood St. and New Lots Ave., Brooklyn, N.Y. 88tf

BUFF COCHINS.—World's Fair champions, pronounced by the most experienced and competent critics, such as Mr. McGrew, as "the equal of any that have ever been shown in America." One cock has been described as "simply a wonder." What higher eulogy can any ambitious breeder desire! These noted birds were bred in my own yards, and I have many more like them, that I am now offering for sale at low prices, considering quality, as I do not intend to exhibit again this year. Write at once for what you want to Holmhurst Poultry Yards, Whitby, Ont., Can. (Dr. J. J. Hare, Proprietor, President of American Buff Cochin club). 82tf

Consider our male line cocks 2, 3, 4, 5, also 2, 6, cockerels as well as the male in first pen, seven first class males, wherein does this RECORD (not hot air) fail in demonstrating the superiority of our male line of breeding, we have been conceded the honor of establishing the finest line of female which we have maintained by winning 1, 2, 6 hens 1 6 pullet and the four pullets in firsts prize pen, this years winnings in addition to our record given below leaves nothing more to be said to demonstrate that our strain of this variety stands at the head. For TEN YEARS as NOW we are PRODUCING THE GOODS, every bird sold carries with it these years of inheritance the survival of the fittest since the origin of the breed. You are bound to get the richest inheritance possible, we could not help it if we would.

VOL. XXIII. NO. 596. JOHNSTOWN, NEW YORK, FEBRUARY 4, 1905. PRICE FIVE CENTS

AUBURN, N. Y.

A Finely Cooped and Well Managed Exhibition.

The third annual exhibition of the Auburn Fanciers Association was held in the State Armory Jan. 18-23. The exhibition was a success both financially and in the large entry, also the fine quality of stock exhibited. Sec'y J. H. Scott deserves credit for the able manner in which he handled the show besides all the preliminary work that falls on the secretary. He was the first in the morning and the last one out at night during the five days of the show. Superintendent A.J. Lutesinger and his assistants saw that the birds alwayls had fresh water, feed and plenty of clean shavings. The banquet given by the Association Friday evening was enjoyed and appreciated by the visiting fanciers, and those who had the good fortune to be present will carry away with them many pleasant memories of Auburn and the social and wholehearted lot of fnciers that make up the Auburn Fancier Association. In regard to the birds on exhibition in most cases the classes were full to overflowing, particularly Barred White and Buff Rocks, White, Partridge and Buff Wyandottes, S. C. White, S. C. Brown and S. C. Buff Leghorns, S. C. Buff and Black Orpingtons. In Barred Rocks 1st cock, 1st hen, 1 and 2d ckl., 1st and 3d pullets was a string of good ones; 1st and 2d pens in young and old were also very fine.

White Rocks showed well filled classes. Cocks a fine lot in the first four winners, 1st hen chalk white and good shape, 2d very close, rest of class good. In cockerels the winners also showed excellent breeding. 1st a peach for color and shape; 1 and 2 pullets gilt edge; one hen in third pen the best in the whole hen class. Buff Rocks a bunch of good ones, notably 1st ck., 3d ck., 1 and 2 hen, 1 cockerel and 1 pen young.

Wyandottes, Silver Laced class small but winners very good. White 58 singles a grand lot. 1 and 2 cock a pair of stunners, rest of class very strong, notably 1 and 2 cockerel. Golden Wyandottes hot classes, 1 and 3 cock, 1 and 2 cockerel, 1 hen and 1 pullet, and 1 pen of old and young, all strictly high grade birds. Buff Wyandottes, a puzzler for the judge and awards well placed. 1 and 2 cock, 1 and 2 cockerel, 1 and 2 hen, 1 and 2 pullet and winning pens. a grand collection and many good ones in the balance. Rose Comb R. I. Reds showed some exceptionally good ones. 1st S. C. Red cockerel a very worthy bird.

Leghorns, S. C. White, 55 single, winners all top notchers in cockerels, hens and pullets. 1 and 2 pullets gems. S. C. Browns, 1 cock and 1st cockerel very rich in saddle and hackle, 1st hen and 1st pullet also very good in color, but a little too dark. 1st and 2d cockerel in R. C. Whites were very fair specimens, rest of class ordinary. 1st hen in R. C. Browns led the class. S. C. Buff Leghorns showed 82 birds, including pens, the cream of the St. Louis and Madison Square winners, being present and plenty more just as good. This was a hard proposition for the judge, who appreciated the fact that he was given a clean alley and was not limited to time. All that is necessary to say in regard to quality, is that it did not take a back seat for any big show that the writer has ever attended. This will give the reader an idea as to the quality of the winners.

Black Minorcas were small classes, R. Combs showing the best quality. Single and Rose Comb White Minorcas also small classes, but excellent quality.

Orpingtons one of the best classes in the show; it is remarkable how rapid has been the pace set by the Orpingtons both Buff and Black. Great quality was in the winners in both of these varieties at Auburn. Bantams were well reperesented in almost every variety of Game and Ornamental. Pigeons also made a fine display.

G. W. WEBB.

BANTAMS AT AUBURN.

Small in quantity, but the best in quality. The Bantam class at this very popular show gets larger and better each year and is a strong rival to the best in this state.

Buff Cochins, 1st cock, a nice shaped bird, but a little dark on wings; 2d, a god bird, loses on shape and style; 3d, too large and too dark.; 1st hen a beauty, fit to win at any show. 1st ckl., a nice little bird, a trifle dark on wing; 2d, a fair bird. 1st pullet, a grand Cochin and wins easily 2d; another good one as was the 3d, 4th and 5th fair.

Black Cochins.—Several good ones, but in particular 1 ckl. and 1st hen.

Golden Seabrights, all grand birds, especially 1st hen and 1st cock.

Game Bantams were small classes, but were exceptionally good. The 1st B. B. R. Game cock being the best in my eyes. The following varieties were shown: Birchen, B. B. Red. Brown Red, Silver and Golden Duckwing and Red Piles.

The Ornamentals were judged by the veteran poultryman and Bantam breeder, Mr. Morris Davenport, and Games by Billy Greenman, another old hand at it. Both gave perfect satisfaction.

L. W. PINCKNEY.

MIDDLETOWN, CONN.

The Town Hall, Middletown, Conn., was the building selected by the Middlesex Poultry Association in which to hold their second annual exhibition, and the choice of the hall was surely good, as it is one of the best lighted I have seen, the only fault being that it is too small for a large exhibition, and so the birds had to be double tiered. A courteous lot of gentlemen are at the head of this association, whom it is a pleasure to meet, and I found on my arrival Tuesday morning, all birds in place and a grand lot from which to select the winners. Messrs. Nichols, Card and Lowe placed the awards with dispatch, being all up Tuesday evening, the first day of the show, and with entire satisfaction, as far as I could learn.

In Barred Rocks, a well filled class, winners being of good,even bright barring, set off with fine shape| Buff Rocks brought our a corking display; in fact, one of the largest the writer has ever seen at a minor exhibition, due to the state meeting of the Buff Rock club, and contained over one hundred birds and a mighty hard task to select the winners, most of them being gems of the highest order. White Rocks also good classes, splendid in shape and pure in color.

R. I. Reds was another banner class, the next in point of numbers to the Buff Rocks, with about one hundred, reminding the writer of the old-time displays of Reds held in his section some six years ago, and just as much enthusiasm was manifested. The tendency in this section seems to favor a dark bird approaching mahogany in color, which is not correct, as the Standard calls for a bright, brilliant red for male, with lighter shade for female, and these dark birds cannot be called bright red in any sense. In the winners I found some especially fine birds, both in color and shape, fit to enter and compete at our largest exhibitions.

Wyandottes contained some very nice birds, Whites leading.

Brahmas especially strong in Dark, quality way up. Partridge Cochins good classes and fine, 1st hen being considered the best hen in show, any variety. She was a beauty,as were all the winners. A nice lot of Buff Orpingtons of good color and shape. Leghorns fine, Browns leading in point of numbers. Other varieties were rather small classes,but contained good ones. Bantams in Buff Cochins very good classes and quality good.

The show seemed to be well patronized by a good class of people, quite a number of ladies being interested spectators. It was from one of these that the writer got a little quiet amusement while handling the R. I. Red classes. She had been watching for some time, and at last approached him as he was taking away a bird for further examination and asked what he was going to do with it. On being told that he intended to take it home with him she wanted to know if they were for sale or if they sold eggs there.

The show was neat in appearance and altogether a successful exhibition.

POLISH CLUB MEETING.

Editor American Fancier:—

Please to inform Mr. Krischler that he wasn't the only one at the Polish Club meeting. That I appeared at the place designated, hoping to be taken in membership, and also to tell the members that I desired each one to put a pen of a Polish variety to a yearly egg test, so that we may not be distanced entirely by the Great American Mongrels For 24 years I have bred White Polands.

The 1905 main catalog of the Cyphers Incubator Company, referred to on page 5 of this issue, is one of the largest books of its kind ever published and forcibly indicates the remarkable growth of the incubator brooder and supply business in the United States. There are other features in this book that will bear careful study.

The Cornell University Poultry Association will hold its second annual show at Ithaca, N. Y., on February 14, 15 and 16. A large exhibit of all kinds of poultry (including many prize-winners from various breeders) will be on hand. Mr. T. E. Orr and Prof. J. E. Rice will speak and give demonstrations in judging and scoring fowls.

We regret that the copy of the Dorking report at Boston reached us too late for last week's issue, but it appears this week on another page, with some comments on the Dorkings at New York, also.

Speaking of Dorkings, we take pleasure in printing the following letter:

Edgewood Farm, North Grafton, Mass.,
January 25th, 1905.

Editor American Fancier.—

I cannot refrain from congratulating the American Dorking Club on the very interesting and beautiful exhibit of Dorkings at the late Boston Poultry Show. It was the best show of Silver Gray Dorkings and Colored Dorkings ever seen in a show room in the United States. The improvement in the Silver Grays is impressive. Their size and breadth of breast is marked. What a difference in the Dorking and other breeds when cooked, and on the table! There are people who know how much better the Dorkings are than other breeds for the table. It is pleasant to note the growing interest of the public in the Dorkings, and there were many men who looked over the display in Boston who made the remark that they owned a few, and there were no breeds their equal for food. One would think that the more southerly states, such as Texas, Florida, Virginia, etc., etc, would be full of Dorkings to make Capons, and general table poultry. Their egg producing qualities is quite good enough for the average person who likes to keep a "few hens" for the family use.

Very truly yours,
GEORGE B. INCHES.

Mr. Inches is an enthusiastic Dorking fancier and what he says regarding this magnificent fowl is based on a very solid foundation of fact. It is a pity that the Dorking is not more extensively bred in the United States. We are pleased to state that even in this cold Northern New York section of ours, Dorkings have been, are being and probably will be bred, because the few stalwarts that have them, appreciate their true qualities. They are perfectly hardy here, and if they can stand our winters, they can stand most any climate.

The booming of some of the new breeds has temporarily driven many old favorites in the back ground, but time will bring them to the fore again, i. e., as soon as the poultry press and show managers give them an equal chance with the more modern popular idols.

The Kingston, (N. Y.) show last week was caught in the blizzard that raged in the Eastern section of the state. The president and secretary were unable to get to the show until the last day, being snow-bound at Rifton, N. Y. Many birds were unable to reach the show but notwithstanding all these drawbacks, a fine class of poultry and pigeons were penned.

Mr. J. A. Gamewell, Hackensack, N. J., who years ago was secretary of the Black Minorca Club and a prominent exhibitor and breeder of Black Minorcas, has returned to the fancy. He couldn't stay away. At Herald Square he exhibited a fine lot of Langshams and captured the blue ribbon on pen. But Mr. Gamewell is going back to his old favorites, Black Minorcas and Whit ePlymouth Rocks, and will dispose of his Langshans. Light Brahmas will also be taken up. His new plant will be known as Poplar Grove Farm, and is located at Hackensack.

That was a strange resolution offered and passed at the Minneapolis meeting of the A. P. A., viz.: To restrict poultry papers from publishing verbatim reports of the American Poultry Association meetings in the future. It is further intimated that at the adjourned meeting to be held at Hagerstown, Md., next October, even stranger measures will be proposed and discussed. We can assure the promoters of this new departure of a very warm time when the discussion starts. There are two sides to this question and it seems to us, an even chance for either. At present we are not exactly certain as to the "leit motif" that actuated the introduction of the resolution. That it will create considerable bitter feeling is obvious.

The premium list of the Pittsburg show is out. It is as liberal as in the past in the distribution of prizes and the eighth annual exhibition promises to be the best ever held in the Smoky City. It is needless for us to state that Pittsburg is in the same class with New York, Boston, Chicago and other great shows. The management of this show has been very successful and as a financial proposition. Pittsburg is the limit. The show is run by well trained fanciers and the hospitality as well as fine business management appeals to the best exhibitors. The dates are February 20 to 25. Entries close February 11. Premium lists can be obtained from G. C. Sutch, Sec'y., 4 Lydia St., Pittsburg, Pa.

The 1905 catalog of the Model Incubator and Brooders, manufactured by Chas.A.Cyphers is just at hand. It is in keeping with the fine grade of goods manufactured by Mr. Cyphers, and also is a monument to his standing and ability in the artificial hatching and rearing of chickens world. His name is inseparably connected with the advancement of incubators and brooders in America. This handsome catalog will be sent free to any of our readers who will send their address to Chas. A. Cyphers, Henry St., Buffalo, N. Y., and mention the American Fancier in doing so.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Minneapolis Boys and the A. P. A.

I trust I am not taking up too much of your valuable space, but feeling lonesome on my way home, after having one of the best times of my poultry show life, thought I would, as the old saying is, "Drop you a few lines."

I cannot go much into detail, but I must say that I was very much surprised at not only the large numbers, but the quality as well. Many of the birds were good enough to stand behind the blue and red at most of our eastern shows, but as Judge Hewes remarked, they fail only on condition, and in that I am sure they will improve as they must, if they stay in the game.

The show was held on the top floor of the court house, which was fairly well adapted for it, but many coops were so located that it was hard to judge or view the birds. This was my first score card show, and while everything passed off smoothly, I still think that comparison is the ideal way to judge a show. At the same time I do not in any way wish to belittle the score card, nor get into any argument concerning the two methods. The only fault I can find is that in walking around one must not hold his head too high, as there were many bolts sticking up through the unfinished floor and the writer on several occasions was accused of either feeling big or feeling "full."

Many old faces were to be seen and many new ones. The Minneapolis boys really are a jolly good lot of fellows and so are the girls. The only regret that I have is that my stay was so short. I would like to go into detail and mention the different "boys and girls," but it takes up too much space, and not to be partial, I will cut names out, but as a bunch they cannot be beaten and they will always have a warm spot in my heart.

The show was judged quickly, and, I believe, well. From the outside world I did not hear one kick. Either the boys out there are game and know how to take their medicine, or the judges make no mistakes. I was much interested in watching the score card work, but fail to see any advantage over comparison, other than the fact that the losers have an idea what "one man" thinks of his birds, which in my opinion, amounts to little or nothing. We were royally entertained by the commercial club at a banquet. Wit and humor flowed freely and the old war horses had a chance to let off steam. T. E. Orr, Kimmey, Hewes, Wickey, L. C. Smith, Holden, Rankin and a few of the lesser lights each had their turn in being funny and serious. R. V. Collins was an ideal toastmaster and played his part well. Dick Salisbury of the Commercial Club welcomed the visiting poultrymen in a neat little speech and was warmly applauded.

The boys and girls were taken on a special car all around Minneapolis, thence to St. Paul, where they were dined by the Commercial Club of that place. We were better entertained at this north-west meeting of the A. P. A. than at any meeting I have ever attended, and I am glad indeed that I helped to get the meeting to go there.

The A. P. A. meeting—what shall I say and how shall I says it?—either the ozone of the north-west or the mixing in with those good fellows or something, had a very soothing effect, but something must have been responsible, as we had a regular love feast, as it was one of the most harmonious meetings I have ever attended. Much important business was attended to with neatness and despatch, and I sincerely hope the example set will continue, as there is no need, no use for anything but harmony, as we must all stand or fall by what is done and we should adopt the motto, "In unity there is strength." Let the outsiders snap and growl as is their wont, but the members of the A. P. A. should be so united and work for a common end, viz: Better poultry and more of it. And I believe that the disturbers will be so ashamed of themselves before long, they will hang their heads in disgust at their own actions. As the retiring president of the association, I will ask that harmony prevail and let each and every member work for the elevation of poultry culture, and it can be done in no better way than through the American Poultry Association. It has been a big factor, it is to-day; and as the years come and go those of us who live for a few years more will find out that it will be a bigger factor.

Our new president, Geo. D. Holden, is a man of ability and a perfect gentleman, understanding the wants of the poultry business in the yard and also in the show room, and I congratulate the association on being able to secure the services of such a breeder and judge. On the re-election of T. E. Orr, there is little that I can add, as he is so well known all over the land, but right here I must add that the association is to be doubly congratulated on his re-election at this time and in the midst of the work of getting out our new standard, and as I view it we are starting out well.

CORRECTION.

Editor American Fancier—

I note that you give Mr. Geo. M. Benham credit as breeder and owner of the First Barred Rock cock bird in the Rochester show notes. I bred and own this bird and expect him to head a select pen for exhibition cockerels this season.

A LITTLE ORPINGTON EXPERIENCE.

In looking over the copies of The American Fancier that have accumulated during a few weeks' absence from home, I notice Mr. Howell's suggestion that I write out for the readers of the Fancier my experience in breeding Orpingtons. While I am very willing to comply, I would much prefer to read of the experience of others, fanciers who have handled this breed much longer than I have. But, for some reason, these breeders, although very enthusiastic in their praises of the Orpington when I meet them and ask their opinion, are very slow in giving their indorsements for publication. I would urge all such to let their light shine. They owe it to the poultry industry in general, and to the breed in particular, as well as to themselves.

Although I have bred the Orpington fowl for two or three years only, I have been able to visit those who have bred them for a much longer time, and by asking questions kept myself pretty well posted since their first introduction into their country. From my own acquaintance with the breed I can say that it's good qualities have never been exaggerated. This was something of a surprise to me, for I always made some allowance for what I supposed to be the lively imagination of too enthusiastic admirers. But I have to confess, in the light of my own experience, that in doing so I did both the breeders and the breed an injustice.

Right here let me say that in thoroughbred poultry I could never be satisfied with symmetrical proportions,or perfect markings alone, much as I can admire them. I must have a breed that can be depended upon to fill the egg basket while the culls make fair returns as market poultry. This may be commercialism, but it is also business. I have never owned a breed that combined all of these traits to the same extent as does the Orpington,and I have experimented not a little. For beauty of outline they are certainly unsurpassed, while their rapid growth and early maturity is remarkable, to say the least. Added to these qualities they are possessed of extreme hardiness. I do not recall ever losing but one from sickness, and that one was quite a young chick. Out of nearly 100 White Orpingtons hatched last spring, not one has ever shown the slightest symptom of disease. Some may say this was owing to the treatment they received. While that may be true to some extent, other breeds in the past, under the same conditions, were not exempt from colds, catarrh, roup, canker, bowel trouble and other ills to which poultry flesh is heir. This being the case, I am forced to the conclusion that the Orpington has an especially strong and rugged constitution. I believe there are just two objections that are urged against this breed. The one most commonly heard is they have white shanks. Now, this would be an objection worth considering if yellow shanks were an indication of any peculiar merit belonging to the breeds having them. So far from this being the case, we have but to compare some of the yellow legged breeds to see that particular color carries nothing with it but mere fancy. For example, we have the Indian Game, which is a good table fowl, but a poor layer. Then we have the Leghorn, which is a good layer, but worthless for the table. Added to these we have others, breeds and no breeds, big and coarse, but of no particular account anyway, yet all with yellow legs. So this objection simmers down to a matter of preference, a question of taste and educational prejudice. But there is something to be said for the white-skinned breeds as such. In the first place, they are exceptionally good layers. In the second place, this white skin carries with it a whiter, more tender, juicy and delicate meat than can be found on any yellow skinned fowl. So marked are these qualities, that in sections where are Orpingtons are grown, largely to the exclusion of other breeds, retail dealers in dressed poultry have a large and persistent demand for these fowls because of the qualities mentioned.

I believe the time will come when the American breeders, becoming accustomed to these white shanks and more thoroughly understanding the superior merit accompanying them, will discard the prejudice that in some cases influences them, and admit that the white shanks are not so bad after all.

Objection number two is, "it is an English breed." I hesitate to mention this criticism because of its insignificance. The mere allusion is to give it undue importance. My only apology is that it has already been harped upon in the poultry papers. The class of would-be fanciers who offer this objection seem to be thoroughly tinctured with a bogus Americanism. They can see no good in any breed of foreign origin,and the favorable mention of an English breed drives them into a perfect frenzy of supposed patriotism, while they shriek "Angl-maniacs." My advice to all such self-sufficient persons is to withhold their criticism of English breeds because they are English until they have produced one equally good.

IRVING CROCKER.

DORKINGS AT NEW YORK.

The display this year of this grand fowl was small, and especially so compared with last year, when the American Dorking Club held their meeting in New York. All three varieties of Dorkings were represented, numbering in all 25 birds, the Silver Grays leading as usual, with 19 birds. We can easily agree with Judge G. O. Brown that the Silver Grays were simply grand. The awards follow: Cocks (3). 1st, Westfall, a wonderful bird in every particular. Extra long in body, deep trough the breast and low set. Top color most entirely free from any black in all parts; breast, tail and under parts a clear, glossy black. Toes and feet about faultless and a most excellent comb. Surely a very typical specimen indeed. 2nd, Inches, not in best condition; a large bird, something new in Dorking type from anything the writer has ever seen, certainly a very grand bird, but in our opinion not proportioned rightly to give really good symmetry, and the correct Dorking form. Looking from the side his slightness in depth makes him look very much smaller than he really is, while from the front view his great width gives him a flat appearance. 3rd, Hales, looks tall beside the others; good breast, nice top color, except hackle showing some striping; rather faulty comb. Cockerels (4). 1st, Inches, an easy winner, very good in both his white and black color, large and good form, good shaped comb, but too large. 2nd, Hales, not just pure in breast, somewhat rusty on hackle and back, stands rather high on leg. Comb too large, but good shape. 3rd, Hales, good type Dorking, has comb over and is much smaller. 4th, Westfall, a good Dorking, but shown in bad condition, the greater part of his hackle being gone. Hens (4). 1st, Hales, not real large, but a well proportioned hen, excellent wing and back color, breast too pale in color and hackle fails in striping. Comb rather too large. 2nd, Westfall, a large one, rather tall, beautiful hackle, very good back, wings too shafty, excellent head and comb. 3rd, Westfall, might have gone higher, large good form and certainly the best wing and back, color good, breast and hackle, head and comb only fair. Pullets (4). 1st, Hales, a grand good big one. She is a little tall and too pale color in breast and hackle. 2nd, Westfall, much the same type, not so large; very good breast, head and hackle; a clean, silvery back, but fails some in wing. 3rd, Westfall, beautiful in color, but small and narrow build. 4th, Inches, large, excellent form and color, should have gone higher. Colored cocks, only one, Hales', a fine colored bird, but this is all I can say, as there was no Dorking form I could see about him in any way. Hens (2). 1st, Inches, a large one, with good color in all parts. Comb rather faulty. 2nd, Hales, rather small, good top color, not enough white in head and hackle, breast not red enough. Pullets (1). Inches,looks as if it would make a good hen. White (2). A hen and cock,both Hales', fine birds of purest white.

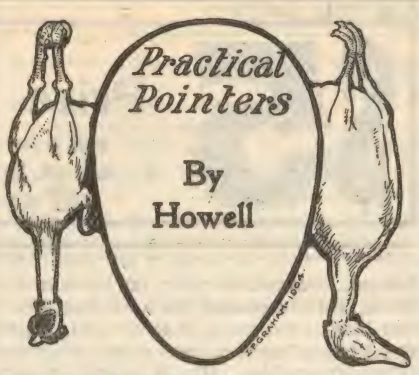
The above is a small half tone reproduction of the new 1905 catalog issued by the Cyphers Incubator Co., Buffalo, N. Y. The cover, as indicated in the above, is a work of art, being beautifully embossed in brown and gold The contents are in keeping with the cover, containing in addition to many fine illustrations, a remarkable amount of literature, relating to artificial incubation and rearing of chicks. The complete book consists of 228 pages and cover, is 8x11 inches in size and weighs one and one-fourth pounds. 110,000 copies have been printed for distribution in this and foreign countries, although the actual cost of printing, mailing and handling this catalog is thirty cents each, it will be sent to readers of the American Fancier on receipt of ten cents. Address Cyphers Incubator Co., Buffalo, N Y., not forgetting to mention this paper.



DORKINGS AT BOSTON.

After a rest of one year, Boston has gone on record again with another of her world-renowned exhibitions. The American Dorking Club met with them this year, and it was with the very greatest pride and pleasure that they viewed the long string of Dorkings shown there. The old and reliable Judge Sharp Butterfield placed the ribbons, and we can easily agree with him when he says that during the past eight years that he has judged Dorkings in America the quality of this fowl has advanced 50 per cent. more than any other breed.

The Silver Grays number 49 birds, Colored 20 birds, and the White ones, that have done so well in past years, did not show up at all. Silver Gray cocks (8). 1st, Inches, the New York 2nd bird in better condition, still all I said of him there will also apply again without any alterations. 2nd, Westfall, the New York 1st cock. Remarks made on this bird will also apply again. 3rd, Hales, is smaller and more slight in form than the other two; he fails some in breast color. Comb very good and long, flowing tail. 4th, Inches, though good in color, is what I call a bad actor. He crouches in his cage and shows no form and style whatever. 5th, Westfall, similar to 3rd Hales cock. He is larger and has better color in breast and hackle, excellent comb and long flowing tail. 6th, Hales, fine breast, good back and hackle, good comb and long flowing tail, fails in size. Two other cocks were shown by Mr. Cope. One a large bird of fair color, but far too high on leg. The other quite pure in color,but very small. Hens (16). 1st, Inches, is not the best for color, but a monster in size and just about correct in form; 2nd, Inches, was just the reverse. Color very grand throughout, form not so good and far back in size. 3rd, Westfall, long and low set body, nicely proportioned, wings and back even in color and quite free from shafting, breast and hackle fairly good. 4th, Westfall, a large one, excellent head, comb and hackle, good back color, but too shafty in wings; body rather short and too high on the leg. The New York 2nd hen. 5th, Hales, not real large, but well proportioned body. Top color very fine; hackle too pale color and breast too light and washy; comb too large. The New York 1st hen. Cockerels (10). 1st, Inches, the New York winner, looking well. His comb has got very large from being inside. 2nd, Westfall, a very close thing for first place; is not so pure in breast, but looks to be ahead on his top color, a very good comb of about the right size. 3rd, Inches, is extra good; size very good form, but fails in top color, and comb is large and fallen over. 5th, Westfall, much younger than those above him, a very large, low-keeled bird, with a form we like. This bird looked very moulty on his back and hackle, which no doubt put him back. 4th, Cope, a big husky fellow, fails some in breast and some stripy in hackle, good straight comb. 6th, Hales, quite good body form, pure breast color, good comb, looked moulty on hackle and back. Pullets (15). 1st, Hales, is very silvery on wings and back, hackle, head and comb about right, breast too light and heavily shafted, her weakest point; very good form and good size. 2nd, Inches, good size, very nice form, not so silvery on wings and back as the winner, good head, comb and hackle, breast, though very even color,is too dark. 3d,Inches, has very silvery wings and back quite good head, comb and hackle, and a breast that is just about right. This pullet no doubt would have been much higher if not for her very faulty toes and feet, which nearly put her out entirely. 4th, Inches, we liked very much; large, good form and good color throughout. 5th, Hales, a monster big one, very silvery on wings and back, breast and hackle too pale and washy color, comb rather large, stands too high on her legs. 6th, Westfall, a long, low-keeled bird, very bright, good breast, nice silvery back, color a little brown in wing, excellent head and hackle.

Dark cocks (3). 1st, Miss Goodell, is ahead in form and comb, otherwise is very close with 2nd,Inches, which is somewhat larger and fully equal in color. 3rd, Inches, I liked best for just color alone, but is far out on comb and lacks fullness in breast. Hens (5). 1st, Inches, a grand big hen,excellent form and color. 2nd, Inches, not quite so large or good color, comb rather faulty. 3rd, Miss Goodell, very good top color, breast not dark enough, and not enough white on hackle and head. 4th and 5th, Inches, two more fine hens, but smaller. Cockerels (5). 1st, Inches, a large, well matured bird,with good color in all parts. 2nd, Miss Goodell, is not so large, but very typical form and color superb. 3rd, Hales, a really good cockerel, but shown here at great disadvantage, his mates having pulled all his saddle feathers and made a good start on his hackle. 4th, Miss Goodell, we liked, looked young and not nearly ready. Pullets, 7. 1st, Miss Goodell, a real beauty,not overly large but best of form and color. 2nd, Inches, not so good in form and color, but larger. 3rd, Hales, very large, might have won had she not been so high up on her legs. 4th, Inches, smaller; also out of condition. 6th, Warrington, fair in color, but tall and narrow build. CRITIC.

Mr. Howell, associate editor of The American Fancier, will furnish weekly reports on the egg and poultry market, and answer all questions submitted to him relating to commercial and practical poultry keeping. Eggs—receipts for week, 43,658 cases. With a blizzard raging generally throughout the country, and a general tie-up of railroads, only an enormous stock on hand saved this city from an egg famine. High prices for so long a time has had the effect of discouraging egg consumption, and big and little dealers were stocked up when the storm came, hence the slight advance in price. We quote nearby fancy selected white, 33 to 34c per dozen; choice grades not equal to first quotation, 31 to 32c; fancy mixed, 30 to 32c. One of the newer big ranches is the Maxwelton Poultry Farm at Gladys, Va. The owner, Mr. R. O. Haythe, resides here in Manhattan, and it is his desire to obtain a permanent market here for the produce of his plant, which consists of three hundred and ten acres devoted to his poultry, thirty-five of which are covered by the buildings and runs. One of the unique features of this farm is the fact that the lumber for the building is cut, sawed and dressed right on the farm,and the food will all be grown on the farm in the future.

The brooding houses are all one hundred and ten feet long, sixteen feet wide, three and one-half feet in the front, six and one-half feet in the rear where the hallway leading into the pens extends the. length of the building. Heat is furnished by the use of the hot water system,which was installed after a personal inspection of most of the large broiler plants in the East. The laying houses are one hundred and twenty-eight feet long, sixteen feet wide; the pens are sixteen feet square, the yards sixteen by eighty feet.

The breeding houses are also one hundred and twenty-eight feet long, and 16 feet wide, but are divided into sixteen pens instead of eight. The breeding pens are sub-divided into two rooms, one contains the roosting poles, and the other, nine by eight feet is the scratching and laying pen, the front of which is covered with wire and has a curtain, which can be lowered nights and stormy days.

The breeding and laying houses have no hallways, but are original in the plans for feeding and caring for the stock, that beats the overhead rail road a mile. It consists of a raised platform that runs along the front of the houses, from this a door opens into each pen the same as from a hallway, the attendant walks on it, and the fowls reach their yards under it; the wire for the yards is attached to these platforms, instead of the houses.

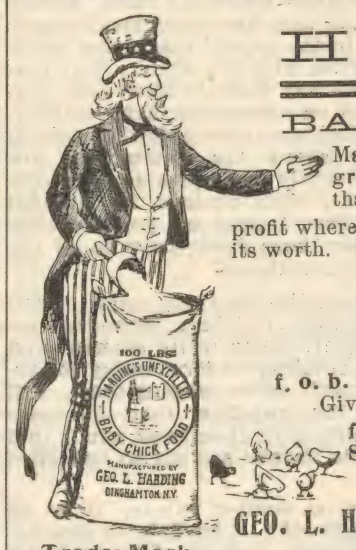
Mr. Haythe is a reader of the American Fancier, and belongs to the hustling younger generation of Southerners.

In describing the new features of this farm I believe I have done the fancy a great service.

There is a ranch in the Mohawk Valley, this state, where the patronizing and sunny influence of the big chief of the American Fancier is wafted down the Cayadutta creek into the valley. They have been gathering White Leghorn eggs by the half bushel there all winter long, and I wished to tell how they did it, but was disappointed.

Saw it stated recently by a writer that his hens were laying as well as he could wish, one having laid 31 eggs in December, as there is only 31 days in December, an ordinary mortal should be half way satisfied.

There is a half formed scheme among the large egg and poultry producers, to pool their issues, and open headquarters here in New York, where all their products could be sold direct to the consumer, and where the people could go and buy a chicken which fire and water with the aid of table cutlery would be able to reduce to a state which could be masticated. The brand the trust is now serving up defies all these.



LOST BIRDS AT HAZLETON SHOW.

Editor American Fancier.—

I see in your last issue an article by Mr. G. Bradley Cook, in which he criticises Hazleton show somewhat. As you have heard one side of the story, it won't be amiss to hear a little of the other side.

Mr. Cook entered a pen and one hen, White Wyandottes at our show and claims he got two birds that were not his. He wrote to the secretary, making some severe charges, claiming he had positive proof that the birds were tampered wih by one exhibitor, while they were being judged, and that he wasn't so sure but what his bird got first, and had been changed. The secretary wrote him and stated if he had the proof 'twas his place to furnish it so he could sift the matter to the bottom. He also sent a clipping from the premium list, referring to exhibitors handling their own birds. (This is the article referred to by Mr.Cook as being underscored in red ink.) There were three exhibitors in White Wyandottes, Mr. Cook, F. H. Castner and Hazle Poultry Yards. Mr. Castner's birds arrived late and he was allowed to assist the superintendent in cooping his own birds, judging in the meanwhile was going on in the classes that were filled, When these birds were cooped, the judge blocked the aisles, no one but the secretary was with him, so there could be no possible chance of birds being tampered with, as Mr, Cook claims, and furthermore there was no chance of his bird winning, as several that didn't get placed had her beat easily. This hullabaloo that Mr. Cook is raising has no foundation whatever, as we have the man here that cooped the birds, who swears positively that they were cooped correct. He says he could pick them from any of the others, as they were the dirtiest Wyandottes on exhibition. They looked as though they were taken at random from a mud heap and shipped to the show. I think if Mr. Cook had become acquainted with his birds before he sent them, he would have recognized them when they came back. It looks to me like wanting something to kick about to let people know who he is, because if he had to rely on his winnings to do it they'd never hear of him. Let me say in conclusion, we have sifted the matter thoroughly and find that no other exhibitor has Mr. Cook's birds, so it's up to him to acknowledge he has them.

THE AMERICAN RED CLUB.

Editor American Fancier.—

A statement from the writer may be helpful in informing your readers respecting the two applications of the Rose Comb Rhode Island Reds for admission to the Standard of the American Poultry Association, and in explaining the present status of the American Reds.

The application of the American Red Club was for the admission as American Reds of the "breed of fowls heretofore known as Rose Comb Rhode Island Reds," under a standard different from the standard under which the Single Comb Rhode Island Reds were admitted to the Standard of the American Poultry Association. The other application was for the admission of the Rose Comb Rhode Island Reds under that name, and under the same standard adopted for the Single Comb Rhode Island Reds, with, of course, a statement as to the difference in comb.

The application of the American Red Club prevailed and the Rose Comb Rhode Island Reds were admitted as American Reds, under which latter name they are now to be known officially.

The motion made at the meeting and passed in the regular way was framed in the following language: "In accordance with the application of the American Reds of the breed heretofore known Rose Comb Rhode Island Reds. be admitted to the Standard of the American Poultry Association, under the name of American Reds, by which name the said breed is to be known hereafter, and with the Standard proposed in this application and made a part thereof, the said standard to be modified so as to make it conform with the forms of the said Standard of the American Poultry Association, but not in such manner as to change its meaning in any part."

The motion was carried by unanimous vote, and the sercetary was thereupon directed to cast a ballot admitting the Rose Comb Rhode Island Reds as American Reds, under the application of the American Red Club.

It is proper to say that this movement in the interest of changing the name of the Rose Comb Rhode Island Reds to American Reds, and for a new standard separating these birds from the Single Comb Rhode Island Reds, has been advertised as much as possible since last March, when the application for admission was made to the American Poultry Association. Advertisements have been run in several papers on the subject, and it is fair to say that there is scarcely a Rose Comb breeder who did not know of the movement. A systematic plan of giving due notice to every breeder was adopted, and each was requested to offer suggestions, or to send in his objection to the plan, but not a single protest against the movement has ever been received by the writer from any exclusive Single Comb breeder, and so far as the writer is informed, none of these breeders hase ver made a protest to any person.

The membership of the club at the time of the Minneapolis meeting was over seventy-five, including most of the best known breeders, and many were waiting to see the result of the application before uniting in favor of the movement, promising their support in case the application succeeded. It is fair to presume that the membership will be doubled within the next two months, and the club will proceed on progressive and energetic lines in the interest s of this breed, whose destinies have now been placed in its charge.

The greatest pains were taken to have this case decided on its merits, so that, for the sake of the breed, it would not be possibleg for any person afterward to say that any action had been taken without due deliberation, or that any snap judgment had been attempted. It was thoroughly understood that the writer had not attempted. and would not attempt, to secure a vote by any bargain whatever, or by offering any poultry editor, or any other person, any

CYPHERS INCUBATOR COMPANY,

GRANT M. CURTIS, President. Buffalo, New York, U. S. A.

Twenty-two Gold and Silver Medals have been awarded the Genuine, Patent-diaphragm, Non-moisture, Self-ventilating and Self-regulating Cyphers Incubators in twelve different countries, within the last fifty months. Our latest triumph was at the World's Fair, St Louis, Mo., where the International Jury of Awards pronounced the 1905 pattern of the Standard Cyphers a "Practically Perfect Incubator."

Notice the Medals shown on this and the opposite page. Each one means a victory in the foremost civilized countries of the world and is evidence that our incubators are universally recognized as

The World's Standard Hatchers.

More Evidence of this, is that Standard Cyphers Incubators and Brooders are used on the Experiment Farms of Forty-six different Countries, States and Provinces in all parts of the world. No other line of incubators or brooders manufactured can approach this record. These Government Experiment Farms are for the purpose of Public Instruction. Can you doubt that the Standard Cyphers Incubators and Brooders are the best when they are used and publicly endorsed by these Government Institutions?

To Get the Best Results in their poultry work these Experiment Farms must use the best Incubators and Brooders. Our 1905 Catalogue contains the personally signed endorsements of the managers and poultrymen of these Government institutions. (See opposite page.)

Reduction in Prices. Although we have improved all our Standard Hatchers up to the highest point of perfection, yet we are offering them to the public at prices much lower than ever before. This great opportunity of getting improved machines at reduced prices is owing to a large saving we have accomplished in manufacture. We increased our capital, enlarged our plant and installed labor saving machinery. The saving made in this way we give to our customers in the shape of reduced prices. This is in keeping with our new policy which was announced in the January number of this paper. For the season of 1905 we offer regardless of consequences,

Silver Spangled Hamburgs

The Brilliant
WORLD'S FAIR
record which entitled my birds to claim against all competitors from the United States, the

Championship of the United States,

has been strikingly endorsed by the awards at the big New York and Boston Shows, where my birds won against the best breeders, including the noted Canadians, an anparalleled list of prizes :

MADISON SQAURE GARDEN, 1905

Second, Third Cock; First, Second, Third Hen; First, Second Cockerel; First, Second, Third Pullet.

BOSTON, 1905

First, Second Cock; First, Second Hen; First, Second, Third Cockerel; First, Second, Third Pullet; First Pen. Specials for best cock and four hens, and best cockerel and four pullets, and Cup for best display.

These birds have not been bought but have been bred in my own yards from parents also all bred in my own yards and are shown to be equally good as to males or females.

The proof of the pudding is in the eating. The test of a strain comes on the results of the breeding. The above record following previous years of great success at Boston, New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, New Haven and many other shows, speaks for my strain, and stamps it as 95-97 suport in return for his vote or his influence. The matter was well understood by all who voted on the proposition and there is no doubt that the supporters of the motion will be as fully satisfied with their action at any future time as they were the time the vote was taken.

To show the attitude of the poultry press on the question, it is pertinent to state there were present at the meeting at least nine editors and accredited representatives of poultry papers, and, including editors of poultry departments in agricultural papers, there were present at least eleven editors and representatives of poultry papers, everyone of whom gave the motion his vote and his support.

This club purposes to have no quarrel with the Single Comb breeders. They have their standard and we have ours, and each club will proceed in the way that seems best suited for the advancement of the breed it represents.

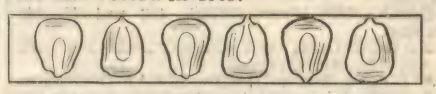
There is no valid reason why Single Comb breeders should be admitted to membership in this club, and since one of the main purposes of this movement was to separate the Rose Comb from the Single Comb, in name and in characteristics, it seems to the friends of the American Reds that the interests of both breeds will be better protected by excluding from membership in this club, all who breed the Single Combs, at least until such time as the whole country is fully informed of the differences between the two standards, and all breeders have accepted the plan for separating the Rose from the Single Combs. It is much better in any case for one breeder to have but a single breed of birds so nearly alike that it is easy on the part of unscrupulous men to send both combs from the same pen, and the supporters of this movement believe that the best interests of all would be conserved by such a restriction. The plan will tend to decrease the number who breed both varieties, and at the present stage of the development of these birds, a breeder needs to give his careful attention to but one of the breeds in order to bring it forward in the most satisfactory way. The promoters of this plan are in many cases sinking their own interests for the advancement of the breed, and this fact will in the end be fully understood. The writer may be permitted to say that he has given his labor and money as no man has ever given his time and money in absolutely unselfish devotion to the breed, and though now he feels that others should do their part of the work required, yet he does not propose to relinquish his efforts or lose his interest.

The standard is framed for the future and will never need to be changed, and there is set up an ideal which will allow constant improvement and make it possible to breed from year to year to a definite plan. And, being framed for the future, in some respects the standard makes it hard for breeders at present to sell specimens satisfactory to themselves, yet there is but one way to develop fine poultry, and that is to work to make every specimen as good as the best ideal specimens that have been or can be produced.

The weights will not please some, but those weights were not established in the interests of the writer, several men of the best reputation already having found it easy to bring out birds above the required weights, and deeming it advisable to place the birds at a weight which will allow them to compete as market poultry with the large American breeds, one man even having gone so far as to suggest that the weights should be put near those of the Orpingtons. These men also claim that the egg producing qualities of the birds are more satisfactory in the larger specimens than in the smaller ones. Certainly it seems as though the breed should maintain a standard for weight equal to that of the Rose Comb Black Minorcas.

Take also the matter of the black in the hackle (erroneously called "ticking," since the black almost always appears as a lacing). Some will find it hard for a year or two to get rid of this, and the writer will be among the number, but several breeders known to the writer have very much less of this black in their birds, some having it almost entirely eliminated, simply because they have not taken pains to preserve it.

The Single Combs now have the name and can make the most of it, and they have certainly no reason to complain of the new movement in favor of the Rose Combs. The Rose Combs have their own name, American Reds, and a distinct standard, and the breeders of this fowl will soon find, if they have not already discovered, that the separation of the breeds will mark a great step in advance for the Rose Comb all Rose Comb breeders who apply for Reds, and if there is any opposition which has not become known to the writer, it will certainly disappear in the light of future progress.



Let all proceed in the interest of a true and uniform type of birds that will and grace and beauty to the show room while fulfilling to the fullest extent all the requirements of a great utility bird.

The proposed standard will be sent to all Rose Comb breeders who apply for it, though it must be understood that this standard is to be modified to some extent to make it uniform in style with the other standards of the American Poultry Association.

Salzer's Home Builder Corn.

So named because 50 acres produced so heavily, that its proceeds built a lovely home. See Salzer's catalog. Yielded in Ind. 157 bu., Ohio 160 bu., Tenn. 193 bu., and in Mich. 220 bu. per acre. You can beat this record in 1905.

WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THESE YIELDS?

120 bu. Beardless Barley per acre.
310 bu. Salzer's New National Oats per A.
80 bu. Salzer Speltz and Macaroni Wheat.
1,000 bu. Pedigree Potatoes per acre.
14 tons of rich Billion Dollar Grass Hay.
60,000 lbs. Victoria Rape for sheep—per A.
160,000 lbs. Teosinte, the fodder wonder.
54,000 lbs. Salzer's Superior Fodder Corn —rich, juicy fodder, per A.

Now such yields you can have in 1905, if you will plant my seeds.

"ZIM" PROTESTS.

Gloversville, N. Y., Jan. 21, 1905.

Editor American Fancier.—

Although it has been but a short time since I retired from active service in the Poultry Show business, still judging from the comments on the Blk. Red Game Bantams at a show recently held and report written for your paper, I have decided that breeders of this variety must have made giant strides in breeding short bodied specimens, as in said review of the winning birds the writer says: 1st pullet, trim, little bird, of excellent station, lacks in length of body." Its the first Game or Game Bantam of any sort I ever heard of that was too short in body. I have bred a few, handled several I did not breed, and seen several others, but never saw one yet too short in back or body to suit me, but I may belong now to the "fossils" perhaps " am rusty," or "not on my job." COLOR OF BARRED ROCK LEGS.

Editor American Fancier:

Would some of our large breeders of Barred Plymouth Rocks please answer the following questions, viz: 1st. Is the color of the Barred Rocks' legs yellow or green, according to Standard requirements? 2nd. If yellow legs are demanded by the Standard, why do our large breeders of Barred Rocks show birds with green toes, and in many cases green on the shanks. 3rd. If the Standard says yellow, why do our judges of poultry give the prizes to birds with green toes and streaky yellow shanks? 4th. If we have to breed Barred Rocks with green legs to win prizes, I would like some of our judges to come out in print and tell us so or back up their right to place birds with green legs as prize winners. 5th. I was a visitor at the Madison Square show last week and was surprised to see so many Barred Rock males with green toes and in many cases green half way up the shank.

NEWARK, N. J.

An Ideal Fanciers' Show, Splendidly Managed== Immense Attendance

The ninth annual exhibition of the Fanciers Poultry Association of New Jersey (incorporated) was held at Bamberger's Auditorium, Newark, N. J., January 30, to February 4.

It was a financial and artistic success. We have attended many shows in the past twenty years, but the management of this one from start to finish is the limit.

When an entry fee of two dollars a bird is exacted it means a fanciers show to begin with.

When no second prize money is paid unless classes are filled, it means more. And such birds! Why,the cream of the yards represented were there. This again vindicates the management in its demands for the best only. Quantity is a desirable revenue in large shows, as far as entry fees are concerned; quality however is the ideal to be secured, even at an increased fee.

Newark had the quality, the fees and come out ahead financially. This is explained nicely in another column of this issue by "An Exhibitor," who has been at many shows and knows whereof he speaks.

The hall is on the top floor of a large department store building and is well lighted.

The cooping and feeding was done by Spratts and was the finest this reliable concern ever did. The arrangement of the wire cages was perfect, a space of six inches separating the backs of the cages, giving a full view of the birds completely, which was appreciated by exhibitors and judges.

Supt. Rackham and his able assistant, Mr. Bailey, are entitled to unstinted praise for this part of the show.

It would be remiss on our part to give proper credit to the efforts of President Duffy, a fancier born and bred, and rare old Deacon Sparks. Both did all real fanciers could do and it is a great satisfaction to say that their work was appreciated at its full value.

But there were others in that fanciers tribe of New Jersey that merited recognition. Suffice it to say: The show was a model one.

As to the birds on exhibition we can briefly state that only good ones were in attendance, and some very much more than good.

The Barred Rock classes were fine and replete with surprises. First cock, an old winner, but a good even barred and colored bird; hens close first and second, both fine in color, but former strongest in barring; cockerels, a rather variegated lot, first being a very handsome bird in shape and color, nicely and evenly barred, second finely barred, but darker, with others following close up; pullets a really excellent lot, first being a star in color and strong well marked parallel barring, with others following close and similar in type; pens good, first winning in evenness of color of all inhabitants of pens, closely followed by second. The other pens contained many fine individual specimens.

White Rocks, a magnificent collection, combining some great winners at New York and elsewhere. First cock a beauty in tpye and color, can win in any old company, with several others very close to him; hens magnificent, first being a star and an old winner; white as the driven snow, fine, yellow legs and splendid shape; cockerels a wonderful array of high class specimens and we had a rather hard time to decide between the first and second, the former being very white fine shape with good legs; the latter being one of the grandest shaped birds we ever handled, with good plumage, fine comb and head, but having legs that were almost willow in color. And there were other good ones in line. First pullet, a wonder the Madison Square winner, with others close to her. First pen a beauty and winner of cup for best pen in the show. When we thought tre White Rocks were about the best we had seen, we came to the White Wyandottes and here is where the battle royal was fought.

With "Deacon" Sparks, "Major" Bates of Oceanside Poultry Farms and Mr. Purple fighting for the blue ribbons the judge had his hands full.

But the judge enjoyed the work because of the magnificent quality.

In cock birds, Oceanside's famous old Herald Square, (N. Y.,) Madison Square (N. Y.) and other show winners again captured the blue; he was fine as silk, grand in type and plumage; the rest were fine birds, but not in the same class. Hens a beautiful lot, first being a type in form, good in plumage and excellent in head points, her only defect being a pale eye; second, a corking good one in plumage, failing only a trifle in type to winner. Cockerels furnished a surprise in the winner of the blue, a beautifully finished bird, true in Wyandotte characteristics, good head points and fine plumage, excellent legs and beak and color, winner of best Wyandotte in show; second, a grand little bird, pure white in plumage, good head and shape and will prove a great cock bird in the future; the rest fine, but too young. Pullets, another beautiful class, the first being a dream in shape and absolutely pure in plumage, winning the Ivory Soap Cup against strong competition; second and third both far above the average. Pens furnished some grand ones, the first being headed by that fine cockerel; second at Herald Square and mated to some very even colored and well shaped females, with second and third pens hugging the first close. Buff Orpingtons teemed with quality, notably the first cockerel, first and second hens and first and second pullets. It was a treat to handle them.

Silver Wyandottes small, but fine classes. The first cock, and hen being "stars" of the first magnitude that have shown their worth at the two big New York shows; second cock a rather fine bird in many particulars, while first pullet was a new comer, a beautifully opened laced bird that will make her mark at all the big evenis in the future. The only pen shown was full of quality.

Buff Leghorns strong in quality, all along the line, the winning hens, pullets and pens being strictly first class, while the cock birds were in several instances above the average.

Andalusians small classes, but very good in quality.

Rhode Island Reds came up in quality, although lacking in quantity.

Silver Spangled Hamburgs exceedingly fine. Indian Games small classes, but teeming with quality.

Indian Games, although small classes, brought out some beautiful specimens, notably in type, size and bone. Dr. Wolfe judged the Indians in rare form. We thought first cock bird was far above the average shown in the last few years, being unusually broad across shoulders, deep breasted, heavy thighs set well apart, good color.

Game Bantams were not numerous, but the quality was of the very finest. Ornamental Bantams furnished some fine specimens, but we should have liked to have seen more of them. The rest of the classes are reported as follows:

JUDGE CASTNER'S REPORT.

Light Brahmas a small class, but there was quality to burn, especially in cockerels, pullets and pens. Cocks 1st, a fine bird, strong in shape, good head fine hackle and tail good enough to win in a strong class; 1st hen was a good one, with quality enough for any show; cockerels 1st, a grand bird, with true Brahma shape, good head, strong in hackle and tail nearly clean in saddle; 2d same type as 1st, with little to choose between them. 3d a good bird but a little on the cochin type. 4th, a nice bird, not quite developed yet. Pullets 1st, a fine one, strong in shape, good head, fine in hackle and tail; she had an over loaded crop, which gave her a baggy look in front. 2d, a fine one very much like 1st; she seemed to carry her tail a little to one side. 3d and 4th both nice birds.

Pens, 1st was a pen that it would be hard to find much fault with, the male was a grand cockerel, very strong in all points that goes to make a first class bird, mated to him were 4 pullets that looked as near alike as four peas; they had good shape, fine in hackle and tails; they were very clean, shown in fine condition. This pen made a strong bid for the best pen in the show, and came within one of getting that special. 2d and 3d was two fine pens with not much to choose between them, the male in 2d was a little the strongest, which landed that pen ahead, both pens were good enough to go in any company.

Buff Cochins, a very light class, but there were some nice birds shown. White Cochins also a light class, with a few good birds.

Silver Penciled Wyandottes only 1 cockerel and 1 pullet shown, but they were good ones.

Partridge Wyandottes, light class but the quality was high in all the birds especially 1st cockerel and 1st pen. They were as fine as silk, the lacing on the pullets in the pen was grand.

S. C. Brown Leghorns, not a large class, but there were some very nice birds in the lot and about the same can be said of the Rose Comb Browns.

Black Orpingtons, a few nice birds in the class, which was not large.

Jubilee Orpingtons, some nice birds shown. There was quite a string of birds in te A. O. V. Orpington class and some of them were good specimens.

F. H. CASTNER.

JUDGE HUYLER'S REPORT.

Partridge Cochins class very small, quality fine. Notable first cockerel, correct shape and lacing. Buff Plymouth Rocks. Most all the first went to one firm. A showing of correct type and color. The first pen containing the best in the class. Single Comb Black Minorca. First cock a wonder, an old winner. The first and second hens, showing grand type and color. First cockerel and first pullet grand in shape. A first pen containing some of the best variety. White Minorcas rather a small class, but notable the first cockerel and first hen the best we have seen out this season. Golden Seabright, good class. The first cockerel and hen carrying off the highest honors of this variety, showing grand type and lacing. Silver rather coarse laced, not showing in the best of condition. Buff Cochin Bantams, a grand class, notable a first pullet and first cockerel, showing the grand type of this breed.

FRED HUYLER.

A HALF-HOUR AT BOSTON.

I am tempted to jot down a few impressions of the Boston show; and this with due apologies to the reporters who do the show in a regular manner for The American Fancier's columns. However, the subject matter of my notes will probably not intrude upon the ground covered in their report.

The exhibition was large and fine in general, the most strongly contrasted breeds being well represented, but noticeably lacking in several others tolerably popular and often warmly shown locally. To illustrate, there were no White Indians, although the last exhibit of two years ago had brought out a string of 27, by five contestants. This variability is often a vexing problem. The Cornish were here to the number of 34, or above twice the number of the previous show here. I had especially wished to see a hot class of the white variety, having found them eminently useful in crossing upon other fowls. Again I had hoped to see a class of Rose Comb White Minorcas, which is my favorite variety. Having not reached the point where I cared to risk my best in the show room, still, others have had them at smaller shows, as reported in The American Fancier's columns. The first of the old time acquaintances I shook hands with upon entering Mechanics' Hall was Mr. Northup, and I inquired of him about the status of such specimens of the variety as have been recently shown. "The Rose Comb Whites," he replied, "seem to fail in bodily type as they mature from chicks into fowls, and grow to look less like Minorcas than Leghorns." For a fact, I was putting out a feeler about stock that would be suitable to feed the blood of my own strain. But such a reply from a source with so abundant opportunity to be posted discouraged me about finding the birds I want.

Another breed I had hoped to find represented here is the Black Orpington; but not a specimen to be seen. I had recently exhausted my powers of persuasion upon a neighbor who had captured the garlands at the local shows. But no, the dreaded competition was an insufferable objection. The Buffs, 40 in number, far surpassed the stock originally imported by Mr. Vass several years ago, and shown by him at the time in the Garden. The winning cock, shown by Miss Helen Sharp, is a wonder for size, color and general type. Jordan Farm's whites were of true white color and good type.

The most remarkable thing in poultry breeding within my knowledge of fancy matters, a period of some 20 years, is the development of the white colored varieties. I am speaking no less of numbers than of quality. A. A. Halladay, known as a breeder of Black Langshans in those early times, was here with a string of ten of the white variety which seemed very near the ideal for every fancy trait. Then as to the Wyandotte family. Castle Farm's stock was of such grandeur in type as to seem like despair of the competition in the variety. It was one of the natural surprises of a fancier who, like myself, had been deprived of visiting the show room for a five year stretch. I can see those castles of white yet whenever I shut my eyes.

Another source of wonder is the rapid growth manifested in the Single Comb Black Minorcas. For some years it has seemed to me remarkable that the white color, so popular in Leghorns, should stop short when it comes to the Minorca class. The Black Leghorn has been left so far behind as to be a rarity in most shows. Yet of the two colors, the Black has ever had the bulk of attention. And this, despite the trite saying that a black fowl is never popular. But the reason of this is manifest. The Minorca has undoubted economic qualities of a high order. They came originally in black color; and in that color their shape improvement has been most rapid. The Whites are as yet the children of to-morrow. And I confidently look forward to the day when the same ratio of interest that exists between the White Wyandottes and the Black, the White Leghorns and the Black, the White Rocks and the Black (Javas), will obtain as regards the Minorcas. We are not accustomed to the looks of a white shanked and skinned white fowl. The White Orpingtons are destined to be very popular yet. White Langshans, as well as White Orpingtons, are now shown of good quality. The eye will become accustomed to their appearance, and when the wheel of the fancy (which is always moving) reaches the right point, the patient workers with the White Minorcas will see their efforts appreciated.

I saw here for the first time the Faverolles. For the American people with their average tastes for plain and simple effects, they would seem destined to take second interest to such a breed as the Orpington, we will say, free from such nuisances as artificial appendages to breed for, and for vermin to work in. In spite of such fault, I am impressed with their utilitarian look; and the most taking color type in my mind is the darkest, suggesting the Dark Brahma in male color.

The Exhibition Games must have ceased to be modern—already out of date—judged by their entire absence. However, the Pit or Old English are the only ones deserving the name.

If there was any special feature that so won my eye as to remain a constant memory, it was Latham's display pen of Barred Rocks, a breeding pen of 5 chicks. The male matched the feception of the breed. Such a male as is among the possibilities to produce an occasional example of as to color, by the matings, that give the show type of female color. If the present fashion of show color for males is to stay by, I believe that show managements should also recognize one if not two additional classifications, namely: the male that matches winning females in color; and also the ideal pullet breeding male, somewhat lighter than female, and evenly pencilled.

In closing, I must not forget to record my meeting with Philander Williams, not aged more than 6 months in five years' time; and he remains as of old the most idealized type of the kind-hearted gentleman as well as expert fancier of our day and generation.

SILVER WYANDOTTES AT BOSTON

Owing to an oversight, two lines were left out of the awards of the Boston Show and the Silver Wyandottes appeared in same paragraph with the Buff Rocks. We give below the complete and correct winning in the Silver Wyandotte classes:

SILVER WYANDOTES.—Cock 1-3 John Jodrey, 2 Wood & Freeman, 4 R. G. Williams, 5 H. F. Chase, c Terry & Ladd; hen 1-2-3-4 Wood & Freeman, 5-c Jodrey; ckl 1 Jodrey, 2 Williams, 3-4 Wood & Freeman, 5 C. O. Barrett, c H. F. Chase; pul 1-c Jodrey, 2-3-4-5 Wood & Freeman; pen 1 Jodrey, 2 Chase. Novice class—hen 1-2 E. J. Robinson, 3 A. C. Allen, 4 Frank Sawyer; pul 1-2 Robinson, 3 Allen, 4-5 Sawyer.

Breed close. A good plan is to have about 5 very select females and learn which ones lay the eggs. A little careful observation will tell you. Even if you have to spare the best part of a couple days to learn the fact; it will be a wise investment.

Some of the best results ever secured has been on lines as above advised. It's the only near way to pedigree results, next to mating in pairs.

Another good way is to have small pens, and keep one hen in each pen. Use the best male, leaving him an hour or so each day with each hen.

Take lessons from experience. Make your experience such that they will be real result lessons. The specialists who reach the top round of the success ladder know every mothers son and daughters in their chicken yards.

The aim in breeding all breeds of poultry should be to produce by single mating standard results. Double mating, results in too many culls. Visitors do not understand why there are so many "off" specimens. When told the necessity of double mating, many prospective purchasers decline, and want to buy some other breed.

Many "exhibition pens" have been sold to wealthy people at the "big" shows. The "results" bred from them have disgusted the buyers so that they dropped out of the fancy arena at once. Had the "results" been what they expected these men would still be liberally buying good birds.

It has been—still is—a most unusually severe winter on poultry. Plenty of clean dry litter so as to keep the flock scratching, and removing the roosts so as to make them huddle in deep beds of dry litter, has prevented the combs and feet from being frosted.

Don't be skimpy with the litter. Have it four or five inches deep. Use a four tined fork or a wooden rake to loosen it up before scattering the cracked corn or small grain among it. Use a littleat a time and keep the hens on the go all day. Feed liberally at suppertime, and warm the corn, and if some of the grains get scorched all the better.

HIGHEST AWARD.

Hugo Freese Rochester, N. Y., manufacturer of "Sure" Poultry Remedies, received the highest award on his "Sure Roup Cure" at the last Boston show, Jan. 17th to 21st, for completely curing 14 fowls and 25 Pigeons, which were afflicted with roup, colds, canker or pip at that show. His "Sure Roup Cure" proves to be a sure cure wherever it is used. He guarantees it or he refunds the money, for he knows it cannot be beaten. Your name plainly written on a postal card and mailed to him will bring to you the most complete book on poultry diseases and poultry remedies, if you mention this paper.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1905.

Last week three great shows were successfully held, viz.: At Newark, N. J., Keene, N. H., and Schenectady, N. Y.

Reports of two of these appear in this issue of The American Fancier, the awards from Keene not having been received at time of going to press.

We had the pleasure of attending both the Newark and Schenectady shows, and if there are any better conducted, well managed, up-to-date exhibitions in this country, we have not seen them. Fine cooping and feeding, perfect classification, quick judging and prompt catalogs are what exhibitors and visitors want. And they got both at these shows.

The United States government has found the so-called beef trust guilty of restricting trade by throttling competition and in doing this found it convenient to raise or lower prices ad libitum. The attorney for the trust denies that the beef and pork pool interfered with independent competitors or that it in any manner crushed dealers that did not buy meat of the trust. This, of course, is a lie with a big L. The facts in the Reading, (Pa.) butcher's case are still fresh in the memories of close readers of newspapers. This same beef trust has reached out to monopolize the poultry and egg products. That is why we devote a few paragraphs to what is a matter of grave importance to the poultry raisers of the United States.

An honest man hates a grafter as heartily as he does the overfed human hog that believes money rules all men. The power of gold is, unfortunately, too great to be overcome in an easy fashion. It will require the nerve of several Andrew Jacksons to bring the "lawless rich" to account. The latest egg deal is a fine example of what the Beef Trust is capable of.

And here is what appeared in the New York World, dated February 7, regarding that deal:

"The Beef Trust yesterday put up the price of cold-storage eggs in New York two cents a dozen. This it was enabled to do because the agents of the trust had already bought up—or "cornered"—the supply of cold-storage eggs in New York and Jersey City.

"According to Expert F. H. Wickware, of the Daily Price Current, there are now about 80,000 cases of cold-storage eggs in this vicinity. There is no scarcity of cold-storage eggs, he says.

"Each case contains thirty dozen eggs, and in 80,000 cases there are 28,800,000 eggs. The raise in price of two cents a dozen means that the Beef Trust will extract $48,000 from New Yorkers for stale eggs.

"The Beef Trust's eggs are stale because a large proportion of them have been in storage since April and May, 1904. They were bought at that time, according to Expert Wickware, for seventeen to eighteen cents a dozen. This is equivalent to a profit at the present price—twenty-eight cents a dozen—of $3 a crate, or $240,000 on the 80,000 crates."

It seems the time is ripe for the government of the United States to institute a stamp law in this cold storage egg business. All eggs placed in licensed cold storage plants should be stamped with the date on which they were stored. This will in some way restrict the sale of poor eggs and prevent cornering of food products that are the necessities of life. If the producer could be benefited in such deals, there might be less complaint from the consumers. As it stands to-day, it is an outrage to allow gambling in perishable food products. As a wind-up to its article, the World states:

The price of the western eggs which the Beef Trust hauls here in its meat refrigerator cars was yesterday advanced three cents a dozen.

Did the producer get that three cents?

Dr. A. T. Beckett of Salem, N. J., a little over a decade ago was the star performer on the Silver Wyandotte stage. His remarkable success in breeding America's handsomest fowl is still fresh in the memories of the old time "Silverites." For many moons since the doctor has not been actively engaged in breeding or exhibiting Silver Wyandottes, owing to professional duties that demanded his time. But the old love for the fine old breed was too strong and he started in again last fall and his sweep at Herald Square, N. Y., Madison Square, N. Y., and Newark, N. J., this season, indicates that he is once more in the thickest of the fight. His blue ribbon successes this season will spur him on to make the Silver Wyandotte alley at the big eastern shows next year the warmest that ever came down the new barge canal. We are glad the doctor is back in the ranks, and especially glad that the Silver Wyandottes will have the center of the stage in the future. With such men as Samson, Jodrey, Millspaugh, Williams, Chase, Van Alstyne, Craig, Wood & Freeman, Cothran, Barrett, Beckett and others in the east to stand by the old favorites, we can see but success ahead. And why not have the old veteran, Fred Mattison, join the ranks? or Mr. Houdlette? or many others in the east? Why not start an Eastern Silver Wyandotte club?

The publication committee of the new standard will meet at Buffalo, Monday, February 13, 1905.

There will be red-hot times over Rhode Island Red, American Red, Rose Comb Red, Buckey Red business at Hagerstown, Md., next October.

"Uncle George" Harding of Binghamton, N. Y., is enjoying a big trade in his famous products, Harding Chick Food, and his now celebrated Granulated Milk Food, the latter being a "big hit." The sales of Harding's goods in this vicinity have increased greatly and the poultry raisers here seem to think "Uncle George" about right.

A new practical writer on artificial incubation and rearing of chicks will begin a series of articles next month, over the name "Uncle Dudley." He is a rare old bird and knows what he is writing about. That's all.

AN EXHIBITOR AT NEWARK.

Editor American Fancier:

The ninth annual show of The Fanciers' Poultry Association of New Jersey, closed last evening with an attendance estimated to be 20,000 or more visitors on Saturday. All the elevators to the poultry show were run to their utmost capacity, in loads and time, while stairways were thronged continually throughout the entire day and evening, the elevators not being able to carry the crowds. For the five days preceding Saturday, a careful estimate placed the five days' attendance as aggregating over 50,000. This would indicate a total attendance of 70,000 or more. Is it not probable that the attendance from good advertising and free admission has given to the patrons space exhibitors and exhibitors in the various classes, more for their entries than ever received elsewhere? Thousands of people who never visited a poultry show before, some of whom were evidently interested, by their attention shown. One exhibitor placed 4,000 cards in cups. Cups were empty more than half the time. It is probable that possibly 8,000 or more cards would have carried away advertising this exhibitor's exhibits. Such interest was general. Observers are quite positive of the value of this show as an educator. While the aggregate exhibits (entries) were not large, about 700 covering quite all varieties, it was generally remarked by the great number of prominent breeders who were present, that quality of all exhibits was of the highest. Management splendid. No mishaps. Little or no reflections or criticisms of judges' awards. The Newark show, 1905, brought out some innovations. First, a free admission bringing the public to enquire as to poultry and supplies, a $2.00 entrance fee for poultry, with $5.00 first, $2.00 second, for poultry and water fowl. $1.00 for entries in pigeons and pet stock, $2.00 1st, $1.00 2nd. Nothing especially novel in this, but presumably the only show outside New York and Boston charging such entries, but Newark goes further. No 2nd money was paid in any class unless there was competition. The experiment was successful, not only financially but as a show. The higher entry brought entries of the best stock, fit to show in any show in the world, perhaps. The show succeeds by reason of the equitable business as between show and patrons—fair to both alike. Add to this the bringing of 70,000 people to view the show. This is stated by those well informed that such an occurrence has never heretofore happened at any show in this country. These 70,000 people came solely and purposely to see a poultry show, not drawn by the thousand and one other attractions, as at Trenton, Hagerstown and other popular fairs. A part of the credit is due to the determination of the Fanciers' Poultry Association of Newark to advance to the front, close up to the top.

An energetic association, with ability in connection with the liberal business transactions upon the part of the Messrs. Bamburger & Co., who placed their Auditorium at the disposal of the Association, who were quick to avail themselves of the opportunity to aid in this great educational movement. Some one suggests that exhibitors who showed at Newark had greater advertising at this show than they would have received at the three largest shows held this season, at Herald Square, Madison Square and Boston.

We are informed that quite a balance, being a profit, will accrue to the association. Checks will be mailed on or before date named, Feb. 10-15.

AN EXHIBITOR.

Newark, N. J., Feb. 5, 1905.

N. Y. S. ORPINGTON CLUB.

The New York State Orpington club held its annual meeting at Auburn, N. Y., Jan. 21, 1905, Irving Crocker, president, in the chair. Minutes of the last meeting read and accepted. The president congratulated the club on the great advance made by the Orpingtons this year, 96 birds being shown, against 35 last year. The Dryden Agricultural society at their annual fair at Dryden, N. Y., next September will offer a silver cup to be competed for by club members only. The club will also offer some specials for competition by the members. The following officers were duly elected: Irving Crocker, Seneca Falls, N.Y., president; sec-treas., Mrs. J. G. Osborne, Fabius, N. Y.; executive committee C. A. Watling, Seneca Falls, N. Y., F. M. Andrews, Camillus, N. Y. Mrs. Arthur Pierce, Auburn, N. Y., Mrs. J. J. Cummings, Apulia, N. Y. All Orpington breeders in the state are urgently requested to join, which they can do by sending one dollar to Mrs. J. G. Osborne, Sec.-Treas.

Fabius, N. Y., Feb. 1, 1905.

"ZIM'S" PROTEST RECEIVED BUT NOT SUSTAINED.

Editor American Fancier:

Now is the time for some public-spirited citizen of Gloversville to ask Zim to wake up and hear the birds sing. He says that "lacks in length of body" means that the bird is too short in body. If I had said "lacks length of body," it might have been different.

I conveyed the idea that the 1st B. B. R. Game Bantam pullet at Rochester was too long in body and as usual furnished no "key" or translation.

Look out for prepositions and lightning-rod agents! Say, Zim, "Let's jump off!"

THE WHITE SKINNED BREEDS.

In the American Fancier of Jan. 21, Mr. Rumbold accounts for the unpopularity of the old European breeds,by saying their white skins prevented their ever being first class market poultry in America, and on this account they have never spread. If this is so, will he not tell us how he accounts for the great and still growing hold the Orpingtons have got? I do not at present possess any, so I am not trying to boom them. I am surprised at his recommending Asiatics as table fowl. Handsome, docile and hardy and good winter layers, it has always seemed to me, their decline, both here and especially in England, was entirely due to their thick skins and coarse flesh on the table. Especially is this the case with birds over a year old. It has been said and I believe truly, that a fine race of table fowl might be produced from Light Brahmas, by carefully selecting the thinnest skinned and fullest breasted fowls for some years, but I believe no one has as yet ever tried the experiment. The average Asiatic would have to change a great deal from what it is now, however. At present it carries most of its flesh on its legs, the breast is both shallow and short. There are several reasons why Dorkings are not kept more. Until recent years, most of the birds one got, were high on their legs and narrow breasted,which were signs in this breed of inbreeding and weakly constitution. Now more cocks have been imported from England, and there is a marked improvement in size and also in constitution. There was and still is an idea, that they hardly ever laid, and even in American poultry books, I have seen it stated, that they only laid well under the most favorable circumstances. This winter again my Red Dorkings are laying well, leaving the American breed I keep far behind. If a hen will lay in a Montana winter, it will lay in any climate. Even the emigration agents can find nothing to praise in our winter weather; though one of them whose circulars declared you did not feel the cold, when I saw him, was wrapped up just like everybody else. As regards warm houses, if it is 30 or 40 below zero, more especially if there is the slightest wind, how are they to be built so that they will be warm? Water freezes solid in my Dorkings' house, in spite of double walls, with a food of earth between, which, however, keeps out all draft, but they lay well and sit early, nor have I found any difficulty in raising the young, though last spring a storm broke the backs and wings of half my chickens, which then weighed about two pounds each. I believe they are rather more kept now, than they were a few years ago, and those who have them, do not seem to give them up, a sure sign of merit in any breed.

I do not think the English or the Americans ever produced a breed half as good as the Houdans were when they first came from France. The chicks grew with extraordinary rapidity and the pullets began laying before those of other breeds had ever dreamt of it, and with all this, they were a really first class table fowl, heavy breasted and with flesh of first class quality. Both nations, however, made size of crest a point, and soon they became almost like Polish. The original French birds had large combs and small crests. Their breeders tell me, and it may be true enough, that the large crested birds lay just as well as their smaller crested ancestors. There are, however, so many situations where fowls with large crests cannot be kept and also so many people would not care for the trouble of cutting their crests, or as some of the Polish fanciers do, putting elastic bands round the crest, to keep it out of their eyes, that this alone would account for their not being more generally kept. Black Minorcas, judging by the amount of advertisements of them show at present no signs of falling by the wayside. Another reason, I believe,that has prevented the spread of these breeds, is, that most of the people who keep them, do so because they fancy that particular breed of fowl, and though willing enough to make a profit from them, money is not the first object with them. Mr. Rumbold makes a slip of the pen. I suppose, in classing Andalusians as yellow skinned, though I have often wondered that where a large quantity of big white eggs, this breed, which is really a great layer and quite hardy,is not more kept. It may be true that they will produce both white and black chickens as well as the desired blue, but where is the breed that produces no culls? Even Barred Rock breeders have to put up with a certain amount of culls, though in spite of this we are always hearing of the merits of Rocks.

Some time ago I happened to get hold of an article by, I presume, a very old fancier, comparing the poultry shown now, with that of 1850. It was in England the show was held. Dorkings were then smaller, but much squarer, he said, and were better table fowls. Polish, which were then largely shown, were big fowls. Games were something like what we now call Old English, but were rather smaller and harder feathered. The more modern breeds were unknown. We unquestionably alter breeds of fowls, whether we have improved them might be another affair, though turkeys, ducks and geese have improved without any doubt.

KINGSTON, N. Y.

The fourth annual exhibition of the Ulster County Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock association, was held at Cooney's Hall, Kingston, N. Y., January 25-26-27, 1905. The association was unfortunate in the selection of dates, as the first day of the show came in company with one of the worst snow storms that ever visited this part of the world. As a result, many of the exhibits were snow-bound enroute and some came in during the last day of the show, while many failed to come at all.

There was nothing done during the first day and the judging did not begin until the second day. J. H. Drevenstedt judged the birds, and as usual all of the exhibitors were well satisfied.

The show was not so large as in former years, but still it was a good show. The officers and members of this association are a wide-awake lot of fanciers and they take pride in treating all exhibitors and visitors in the best possible manner.

They intend to hold another show next year and it may not be amiss to state that a win at Kingston is no mean honor and all are cordially invited to make the next show the best ever held by the association. If hard work, fair treatment and good management make a successful poultry show, Kingston will surely be among the leaders, for the association is worthy of the support of all up-to-date and progressive fanciers. Let us all do a little to help the Kingston show next year.

Barred Rocks were the largest class and some of the winners were strictly first class birds. Cock 1, large in size, good shape, good comb and eye. Color and barring first class. A fine bird all through. 2, another large bird, about as good as the winner in all ways. He has size, shape and barring and a good head also. 3, a good bird to look at,as his surface color and barring are good, but he runs too light in undercolor. Has good shape and size and a nice head.

Hens. 1, a very fine, large hen. Has good color and is finely barred right down to the skin. Has nice Rock shape, but her comb is poor. 2, very much like first in size and shape. Better comb than first. Just as good in color and barring. A very nice hen and could have been placed first. 3, not so large as first and second, but about the same in color and shape,and almost as good a hen as first.

Cockerels. 1, a beauty, as he has nice surface color and barring and he holds out well in wing, tail and undercolor. His shape and head points are first class. 2, another fine bird, lighter in color than first, has elegant surface color, but does not nold out in under-color with first. Fine shape and head points. 3, about as good in size, shape and color as first. Has a good head and a very neat, well-shaped comb. Has nice clean color and clean cut barring. A little smoky in wing.

Pullets. 1, a fine colored bird with narrow, clean cut barring, and she holds out well in wing, tail and under-color. Good shape, small, neat comb, good eyes and good legs. 2, for color, shape and barring, is the best pullet in the class, but she is small and immature and not yet in full feather, so loses first place. 3, a fairly good pullet in color and barring, but shows some light in undercolor. Has a nice head and fine, clean, yellow legs.

Pens, old. 1 and 2 were all large birds, good in shape and color and not much to choose between them. Pens chicks. 1 and 2 were also fairly good with first an easy winner.

Buff Rocks. Small class, and only fair quality. White Rocks, a fair class and some of the winners were good. First cock, first pen of old and first pen of young were the best of the White Rocks.

White Wyandottes, a small class of fair birds. First cock and first cockerel were good birds of about the right type. Partridge and Black Wyandottes were represented by some good birds. Buff Wyandottes were good, the winning birds all good ones. Silver Wyandottes brought out a very nice shaped, good colored cock bird and a fine cockerel and pullet in the winning birds.

Brahmas and Cochins were scarce, but what Light Brahmas were shown were good ones. R. I. Reds, a good class of Rose Combs with the winning cockerel and pullet the best in the lot. Leghorns were small classes,with S. C. Whites leading. Some good birds in the lot. S. C. Black Minorcas brought out a fine large cock and hen and a fine pen of young birds in the winners.

A few good Buff Orpingtons showed up. First pen of chicks and first pullet were the best in this class. Black Orpingtons were represented by some really first class birds. First pen of chicks and first cockerel and first pullet being especially nice birds.

Houdans were represented by some good birds. An extra good hen winning first and second hen was first at St. Louis.

Quite a number of Bantams of different varieties were shown. Buff, Black and White Cochins were the largest classes. The winners in these classes were all good birds. Golden Sebrights were quite numerous and the quality good. First pen of chicks were about the best of the lot. There were some good Red Pyles and Black Breasted Reds also. There were also quite a lot of Pigeons of different varieties and some Belgian Hares, Pekin Ducks, Cavies and Turkeys.

THE CHICAGO SHOW, 1905.

(Reported by Thos. F. Rigg in the American Poultry Journal.)

Again have the exhibiting fanciers and breeders placed their seal of approval upon the management of the Chicago show.

The ninth annual exhibition of the National Fanciers' and Breeders' association, January 23-28, was an unqualified success.

The Chicago show means the Chicago show.

The exhibition was held in the Coliseum building. The great building was none too large to accommodate the entries tendered.

It was necessary to place the cat exhibit—more than 200 entries—upon the second floor in the Annex.

The show was splendidly cooped. The arrangement was most pleasing alike to exhibitors and visitors. The classification of the breeds and varieties was thoroughly systematized. The appearance presented was beautiful, and the unanimous verdict is that it was the best show, all things considered, ever held in Chicago.

The management of the detail in which the exhibitors are so much interested was warmly commended by all the exhibitors. There were no annoying delays in cooping specimens. Everything worked like clockwork. and this was a very pleasing feature to the men and women who were contestants.

Judging began promptly Tuesday forenoon, and the efficient corps of judges placed the awards satisfactorily upon the whole.

The quality of the stock shown was of the best, the leading fanciers of the nation here contesting for the high honors which winning at the Chicago show affords.

As a social function the exhibition was a pleasing success. Chicago show week is the holiday time for hundreds of fanciers who here annually meet and greatly enjoy themselves.

The display of pigeons was large, the noted lofts of the country being well represented.

The cat show, in the spacious room on the second floor, was a feature. The Beresford Cat Club and a Columbian Cat Club pooled their issues and gave one of the largest and best shows ever held in America.

Within view of all hung a banner, "Chicago Show, January 24-29, 1906."

Every exhibitor and visiting fancier read that notice with pleasure and each was glad to say, "I will be there."

The attendance, although large, was cut short somewhat by reason of the severe weather of the early days of the week.

Barred P. Rocks.—One of the largest classes ever shown at Chicago, there being 120 specimens in the contest. In quality the classes were exceptionally good. In cockerels it was a close fight, and Judge Lambert found the placing of awards a very close matter so far as one, two and three were concerned. Here were cockerels that every Rock breeder present pronounced of rare merit. They were indeed marvels of beauty in color and form. In pullets the competition was of the very strongest character. The winner of first is a very near approach to a perfect gem. He was closely followed by several others. In cocks and hens there was abundance of quality, and the winners were specimens of great worth. There were birds in each class, while not winning, are worthy to stand in the front rank in any Barred Rock show.

Buff Plymouth Rocks.—A showing of 121 Buff Rocks! That means there "is something doing." It was a strong showing and one which will do the Buff Rocks and their breeders a great deal of good. In every class there was quality along way down the line. The cockerel class was strong in its entirety. There were some wonderful productions shown in the pullet class. Hens and cocks were strong throughout.

White P. Rocks.—Forty-six White Rocks faced the judge. There were a number of birds of exceptional merit, chief among them being the first hen and first cockerel. An offer of $100 was refused for this cockerel. Pullets and cocks were strong classes.

Silver Laced Wyandottes.—It has become a settled fact that the Silver Laced Wyandotte exhibit at the Chicago show is the largest and best in America. This year there was no exception to the rule. Eighty-five silver beauties, many of them noted show birds of winning records and of great merit, were cooped here. It is but stating the truth when we say that the best S. L. Wyandottes now shown in America as a whole were found here. The first cockerel was the winning cockerel at the World's Fair show. He is a magnificent bird as to color and shape. First and second cocks are the kind so much desired, but so seldom produced. In hens and pullets the judge found a problem in award making. Here were females of the correct color markings, being free from any brass and smut, and with the clear, pure white and black so much sought by all breeders of this variety. Many specimens of exceptional worth were, necessarily, outside the winning.

Golden Wyandottes.—Another large class, there being 74 head cooped. Several of the most prominent breeders of the variety contested for the prizes. In each class the quality was of the best. Golden Wyandotte breeders have made a great deal of progress in color breeding during the past two years. They are, too, annually improving in the shape of their birds,the game characteristics as to shape being nearly done away with.

White Wyandottes.—Here, as they are in every show, the White Wyandottes were out in force, there being 117 head cooped. In each class the competition was very strong and the quality of the highest. A number of specimens changed hands at what would once have been called fabulous prices. It was a splendid showing of this very popular variety.

Buff Wyandottes.—The largest class of Buff Wyandottes shown in Chicago for years, and of good quality throughout. It was conceded by all judges and breeders present who looked over the classes that the winning cockerel is the best Buff Wyandotte cockerel ever shown in America. He is buff of one even color from beak to feet. He is also of true Wyandotte shape. There were several other extra choice birds shown, among them being hens and pullets. The cock birds were very fine. It is such a showing of Buff Wyandottes as this that does the variety good.

Partridge Wyandottes.—Fifty-eight Partridge Wyandottes made up one of the best displays of this variety ever cooped. In pullets were found some specimens which were marvels of beauty. In each of the classes birds of the highest type were plentiful, the plumage color in many cases being equal to that found on the best Partridge Cochins.

Light Brahmas.—Some people have been saying that the Light Brahmas were "going out." Not so at the Chicago show. There were fifty-three in the classes, and among them some of the best ever shown in America.

Nine Dark Brahmas were shown. It is unfortunate this beautiful and useful breed is not given better attention by fanciers and breeders.

The Cochins.—Forty-two Buff Cochins received the attention of all visitors. It was a strong class throughout. The winning hen is a wonderful specimen as to shape, and was the admiration of all Cochin lovers.

There was a small but beautiful showing of Partridge Cochins. A number of World's Fair winning specimens were shown.

White Cochins few in number,but of good quality.

The Leghorns.—S. C. White, 65; S. C. Brown, 52; R. C. White, 44; R. C. Brown, 20; S. C. Buff, 20, and R. C. Buff 3.

It was a strong showing of Leghorns, and several of the noted birds of the country were cooped. Messrs. Butterfield and Burgott, judges, informed us that the quality in all classes was very good.

The Minorcas.—In S. C. Black Minorcas there was a battle royal. The quality averaged high and some extra choice specimens were shown.

The fifty White Minorcas presented a very pretty sight and were the cause of a number of people becoming White Minorca fanciers. They were one of the most attractive classes in the exhibition. In all that goes to make up a Minorca they were more than good.

The Orpingtons.—As usual, the Orpingtons were out in full force, the S. C. Buffs leading in numbers. The Buffs are becoming better every year in color and there were a number of solid buff birds. They seem to be on the gain in public favor and are among our most popular show birds. The showing of R. C. Buffs, Whites and Blacks was small, but the quality was good.

Games—Various.—There is not the showing in Standard games in the west that there used to be. Once upon a time Chicago was famous for its game entries, both in number and quality. The classes here were fairly well filled with several specimens of great worth.

Twenty-two Cornish Indians were cooped and among them were some of the best ever shown at Chicago.

Other Breeds and Varieties.—Where are the Black Langshan breeders who used to come to Chicago in force? Just eleven of the stately black beauties graced the show pens. Seven Whites were their near neighbors.

Only seven Houdans were shown.

There was a fair showing of S. C. R. I. Reds. Many specimens were of the kind Red breeders are seeking.

Polish and Black Spanish were fairly well represented in numbers. Some of the best W. C. B. Polish ever shown in Chicago were among the lot.

Hamburgs were small in number but of good quality.

Columbian Wyandottes attracted no little attention. There is a boom ahead for this variety.

The Partridge Plymouth Rocks held a reception continually. They seem to have made a decided hit.

There were some magnificent Blue Andalusians shown—not as many as there should have been. It is a beautiful and useful breed.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.

I must admit that less that one week ago the electric city to me was an unknown quantity, and as I had made a small entry I concluded I would see how they conducted a show in this old city. After finding the armory the first official that I met was Supt. Witbeck, who, with his two assistants, were caging the birds upon their arrival, with a business dispatch that showed this was not their first show by any means. And I wish to speak here for the whole official staff and members as well, that no trouble seemed too great for them, to further the comfort of both visitors and birds. Secretary Duryee and his assistant, Reuter, were ever on hand to do every thing possible, while President Sisterly semed quite brotherly in his efforts to be pleasant.

Treasurer White ever smiling and cheerful would mount the raised platform each evening to demonstrate to the large crowd that there was considerable excitement in cock fighting, though huge muffs were used instead of steel gaffs, in fact I heard one Rev. gentleman asking if they (the games) were good layers. Thinking that perhaps he would get a few just for their laying qualities.

The hall is simply grand, and large enough with crowding to hold between 3,000 and 4,000 birds. The show was nicely cooped, how else could it be? When the Empire Cooping Co. had the the handling of it. This report would not be complete without mentioning that prince of good fellows, Lyman W. Clute, whom after several years I again had the pleasure of meeting. A visit to Schenectady would not be complete without meeting him and seeing the magnificent furniture store in which he is interested.

The board of judges, (whom by the way makes one think of the number 1,000. Denny would do very well for the one, then Bycknell, Stanton and Zimmer, each about 5 feet high and 4 feet wide, would do for the three 000) got through with their work promptly and had the ribbons up the first day; it was a case of attend to your business till business is done, and visit afterward.

The birds— Barred Rocks, were a large class of good birds, in many cases there being but very little choice between the winners of 1st and 5th prize. Whites, were small classes. Buffs were perhaps the best lot in the show, more especially in young birds. The winning cockerels were grand in shaps and color while the pullets were still better, if that could be possible.

Wyandottes—All eight varieties were represented by good specimens. Brahmas, while few in numbers, were good in quality in both light and dark. Cochins the same.

Leghorns in White, Browns and Buff were in good numbers and lots of quality.

Minorcas were a nice lot, with a little better than the usual display of Hamburgs and Houdans, Orpingtons were a nice lot and well shown. Bantams were out in numbers with one pair of ducks and no turkeys. The awards are as follows:

Most readers will recall the several opinions expressed in these columns on the table qualities of the White Leghorn chick at three months of age, by myself and several breeders, notably the manager of the Lakewood Farm Company, who dwelled upon the great breast development they had succeeded in getting on their Leghorns at that age. I was a little skeptical of Mr. Brown's statement at the time, and said so. I am now free to confess I was on the wrong side of the argument, for I have seen such stock, handled it and sold it, little fellows with breasts on them like Reed birds, sell at a good price per pound, but only to a certain class of customers. Would be out of place on the table of the workingman, whose family does not bear out the theory of race suicide.

As I have said before, the production of these delicacies must be confined to the grower who has the customer for them, the time and feed necessary to enable the average grower to produce them, will grow a four pound chicken of some of the heavier breeds.

A few more lessons from Dame Experience's book have been given to those trying to produce winter eggs.

Take the last two weeks, for instance. Where the weather has been so steadily at near the zero mark throughout the whole country, that human beings could not be made comfortable unless hovering near a big fire, it is a miracle if hens were induced to lay even an egg, much less steady production.

We are all more or less familiar with the methods of feeding for eggs, and the routine work of caring for them in a way conducive to egg production.

Having ever been a close student of this subject, and never neglecting an opportunity to investigate the methods of those who have been successful, I believe I state the fact when I say outside of the two points mentioned, the poultry house must solve the problem of winter eggs.

I notice the location has nothing to do with success, the extreme cold latitudes, when confined in a warm, roomy house and not allowed to leave the house, are more successful than in the milder climates, where allowed to run out and in at will.

Therefore, we must conclude the only thing to do is to build with the idea of total confinement from fall to spring, and in so doing many of the ideas embodied in the description of Mr.Haythe's buildings last week could be utilized.

One of the objects to be attained is to get floor space enough to admit of sufficient exercise, without providing a roof that would accommodate a winter circus. The roosting poles and platform are raised, the nest boxes, shell and feed troughs can be the same. This allows every square foot of space to be converted to the use of the fowls. Pens 16 feet square, divided as described last week, with the curtain to the front of the scratching pen, comes very near meeting all the requirements of such a winter house, but the method of opening the door of each pen from the platform, running along the front of the building, every time an attendant has occasion to go in the house, is open to discussion. I should imagine too much of the warm air would escape, and too much cold weather would rush in to maintain an even temperature. For this reason a door leading from one pen to the next would be as necessary as the one leading to the platform.

Further, where the buildings run east and west, an arrangement of glass in the roof as described in this column some time ago, at intervals of every third pen, would add greatly to the health and comfort of the flock.

Let any reader talk out. I don't care to form a trust on this subject.

A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO

Thoroughbred Poultry Culture.

VOL. XXIII. NO. 598 JOHNSTOWN, NEW YORK, FEBRUARY 18, 1905. PRICE FIVE CENTS

THE BLACK LANGSHAN

A Great All-Purpose Fowl

By John Hettich.

Every known variety of fowls, from the most diminutive bantam to the largest Light Brahma, or Mammoth Bronze Turkey that we see exhibited at our poultry shows, has its admirers. Every one has a place to fill, and every one is being bred, not for pleasure alone, but for the profit there is in it. Good specimens of any or all varieties command big prices. A few years ago I saw a Buff Cochin cockerel at the St. Louis fair, that cost the owner $50, and he did not get a place at a Missouri state show. A leading poul try judge offered $25 for a Plymouth Rock cock that was then three years old, and the owner laughed at the offer. At another St. Louis show I saw a Missouri Partridge Cochin breeder sell a cockerel for $25, and it was not one of his best. $200 would not have bought a pen of Indian Game bantams that were exhibited. $30 was refused for the first prize Langshan cockerel, and the same amount would not buy the first prize Brown Leghorn, nor the Buff Rock cockerel, and while they all bring good prices(they can not all be classed as all purpose fowls. Some of them are good, but others are better. I have had experience with some of them, and after carefully studying their good qualities, I am convinced that the Langshan is certainly one of, if not the very best all purpose fowls that we have to-day, and why? They are one of the hardiest breeds known, are rapid growers, large size, full breasted, are good but not persistent setters, splendid mothers, they bear confinement well, are not high fliers, (a four foot fence will turn them) they are good foragers, on the farm where they can have free range they will hustle for themselves as well as any of the American class, while the other Asiatics are rather lazy, some more so than others, it is certainly not so with the Langshan. As a table fowl they have no equal, their flesh is white, juicy, tender, very fine grain and possesses a delicious flavor. I regard a full grown Langshan cockerel, properly cooked, as good as any turkey that was ever served. Their bodies are plump and their skin is pure white. The only objection ever offered to the Black Langshan is that they are black, that they are hard to pick, but I venture this assertion that no one who has ever tried to pick a pure Langshan will make this objection. The Langshan is a rather loose feathered fowl and therefore easily picked. They show few pin feathers, except in molting season, when the new feathers are coming in, and then any other fowl will show pin feathers, I care not what the breed or color may be. A great many people have an idea that a good table fowl must have yellow legs or yellow skin. This however, is not true. The very best table fowl in this, as well as in the old country, have white skin. In France the best table fowls have white skin. This is required, hence they breed the Houdan and La-Fleche. The old English Dorking, another white skinned fowl, is one of the favorites as a table fowl, both in England and France. When I speak of white skin, I do not mean a dark nor a bluish white, but a pure clear white, and this the Langshan possesses above all others. As an egg producer they take front rank, as there is no variety that will lay more eggs during the whole year, except, perhaps, the Leghorn or Minorca, and during winter, when eggs are scarce and command the best prices, none will lay as many. This one good point alone goes far to help make one of the best all round fowls. A short time ago I received a letter from a lady in Kansas in which she said, "I have been raising chickens for sometime, but always managed to keep a few large, greenish black hens, as on these I depend for my winter eggs. They always begin laying not later than December first, while the others never began until spring, and I have just found out that they are of the Langshan breed, and I am going to raise them exclusively hereafter." This is only one case out of many of their adoption after a practical test of the many good qualities. In talking to a farmer who has taken up the Langshan, he said, "They are the chickens for the farmer. We are getting more eggs this winter than we ever did before, and when we take these big fellows to market their weight counts for something." And he is right; they are large, they lay lots of eggs, they are fine for table use, and when it comes to exhibition, there never was a grander show fowl, nor one that attracts more attention than the proud anl lordly Langshan. What other variety can show more good points.

WEBSTER CITY, IOWA.

Lincoln Orr, Orr's Mills, N. Y.; W. E. Loudon, Riverside, Conn.; A. C. Hawkins, Lancaster, Mass., and the president and secretary.

Minutes of the previous meeting were approved as read.

It was moved and carried that a committee of seven, including the president and secretary, be appointed to make necessary arrangements for establishing state organizations, and that this committee suggest the changes that will be necessary in the by-laws and present the same to the club for action in the proper manner.

The secretary was instructed to get propositions from the large Western shows for holding the next annual meeting with them, and to leave the place of meeting to a vote of all members of the club. Such vote to be taken before October 1, 1905.

The secretary was instructed to send out the proceedings of this meeting, with the new club catalogue.

On motion,the matter of who should judge the White Wyandotte class at the next annual meeting, was left to the executive committee.

The secretary read a letter from the officers of the Kansas White Wyandotte Club showing what is being done by the White Wyandotte Club of that state. Also, a letter from the secretary of the Brockton, Mass., show, asking the club to hold a state meeting there in connection with their show, December 13-16, 1905.

The treasurer read his report, showing a cash balance of $262.55. The report was accepted and ordered filed.

The election of officers for 1905 was then held.

SPECIAL REPORT OF S. C. BLACK MINORCAS AT CHICAGO.

Cocks. 1st, a good type of bird, fair comb and wattles, poor in lobes, away off in color of eyes and legs; 2nd,comb frozen very badly, no signs of serrations; fair in body, poor in color of eyes and legs. 3rd, good type, grand color, lobes tinged with red; comb fair, much too narrow between legs. lacks in breast, legs away off in color. 4th, a good bird, comb slightly turned over to one side, lobes largest and best in class; grand color throughout; should have been an easy 2nd. Cockerels. 1st, only a fair bird, good comb and wattles, lobes small,short in back; good color throughout; has tail more like an Exhibition Game. 2nd, a good one, good comb and wattles; good lobes; pure white and free from wrinkles; grand color throughout, lacks trifle in breast, rather short in back, good eye and legs, carries tail too high. 3rd, good type of Minorca; lobes very small, good comb and wattles; nice long back; carries tail too high and not quite ready. 4th, by far the best bird in the class, an easy winner; one of the kind such breeders as Trethaway, Sauter, Doane, Andruss and others are always talking about. 5th, a bird of good merit, but carries tail too high and lacks in length of back. No. 606, unplaced through being sick, a far better bird than the 1st. Hens. 1st, one of the most ordinary looking hens I ever saw for a winner, not entitled to any place at all; 2nd, a good one in shape and color and fair size; 3rd, a good one, could be a trifle higher on legs. She carries a very heavy, drooping comb, entirely shutting out the sight from one eye; legs very poor in color. 4th, the best in the class, an easy winner; for the life of me I cannot understand how such a good one was placed so low. 5th, not a bad one, carries tail too high and fails in head points. No. 577, unplaced, a good one and should have been up in the ribbons. No. 602, unplaced, the 2nd best hen in the class, and should have had that place easily. No. 580, unplaced, another good one. No. 599, unplaced, and would have beaten some of the ones higher up easily. Pullets. This was the strongest class in Blacks, brimful of quality. 1st, a dandy, good shape and color; good head points, nice length of back. 2nd, a gem, very much like 1st,but larger and in better condition; an easy winner. 3rd, grand shape except head points, had she better head would have been an easy 1st. 4th, only a fair; in fact I do not see how she came in for a place at all, with so many better ones here. 5th, a dandy, same type as 1st and 2nd, and she should have been placed 3rd. No. 608 and 607, both unplaced, but full of quality. In fact I think the Minorca classes in both Black and White, were the worst judged of any I ever say. The judge certainly could not have known the difference between a Minorca and a Brahma to have placed his awards where he did. FRED MAUNDER.

KEEPING UP THE ENTHUSIASM.

To keep up interest and enthusiasm in the poultry business, judicious feeding is as necessary as it is to keep our flocks healthy and in good condition.

Our enthusiasm grows upon what it is fed. A good stimulant is the reading of good poultry journals, although stimulants and tonics are to arouse and build up the system, and get it into working order; poultry literature, like fresh air, is life-giving and needs to be taken in season and out of season. But to keep up a good healthy interest and zeal, nothing so buoys us up and gives us the courage of our convictions as raising pure bred birds. We found this out two years ago and could not be tempted to go back to our careless ways, when anything that could crow or cackle satisfied.

It is astonishing how critical we become closely studying the good points and noticing the defects.

What is obtained without effort is of little value. Successful poultry culture means unlimited caretaking and hard work every day, and plenty of earnest thinking nights. Our improvement is slow, but we are in the business for keeps, as we realized at our poultry show last week by the indignation we felt, when an agent for a bone-cutter advised us "to purchase a large machine so as to have something to sell when we went out of the business."

We do not mean to go out, but to possess our souls in patience. "Be up and doing, learn to labor and to wait—for results. S. B. BOWERMAN, 1550 Lake Ave.,Y Rochester, N. Y.

WHAT THE AMERICAN POULTRY ASSOCIATION MIGHT DO.

Editor American Fancier:—It is an undisputed for that the American Poultry Association has accomplished some important results during its existence, but there still remains unsettled the important question: that poultry exhibitors are neither protected nor adequately compensated for gross negligence on the part of express companies' employees, and these companies are directly responsible for such losses when their employees place valuable birds next to steam pipes in the express cars and then heap quantities of other express matter around them—as a result of which the owner receives dead instead of live birds on their return from an exhibition.

It seems to me that such a wholesale loss of valuable birds, as has been lately reported, is entirely unnecessary, and the time is now ripe for some organized effort to be made to better conditions and to protect the poultryman against this malicious negligence which has been the cause in the majority of cases. here is no doubt that in some cases, the owners themselves are to blame in not providing roomy enough coops for their birds, but in the great majority of instances birds which have had ample air space in their shipping coops,have fallen victims to the carelessness and lack of humanity on the part of expressmen.

The American Poultry Association is the proper lever to adjust these matters and to ameliorate present conditions and this association might well dispense with their numerous mutual-admiration meetings and accomplish something which would be a permanent benefit to every poultryman who ships poultry either to exhibitions or to market.

Not but a few years ago,the nurserymen of this country were in exactly the same position as are the poultrymen to-day, but by determined and organized effort they were rewarded by a rate for perishable plants, etc., of 20 per cent. less than merchandise rate.

Some will undoubtedly say that it would be useless to attempt such an undertaking in view of the vast amount of capital and influence which the express companies have at their disposal, but patience, perseverance and a little elbow grease,backed up by a little determination and stability of purpose, will produce results, and certainly nothing can be worse than the present state of affairs. In many instances, it isn't a question of getting a money compensation for the loss of valuable birds (even if the express companies were eager to settle) but it is the loss of birds which money could not buy that generally represent the victims.

It is therefore "up to" the American Poultry Association to confer with the heads of the several express companies, and should success crown its efforts, it would establish for itself an enduring monument to its usefulness to the poultrymen of these United States and Canada.

MERIDEN, CONN.

At the annual meeting of the Meriden Poultry association held in the banquet room of City Mission block, Wednesday evening. February 1, practically all last year's officers were reelected. B. W. Collins was elected to serve a second term as president of the association.

The meeting was largely attended and the members were enthusiastic over the reports made by the various officers. It was decided to hold a poultry show next fall.

The reports made by Secretary W. H. Baldwin and Treasurer Joshua Shute showed that the association had cleared between $40 and $50 on the exhibition given in January. The members feel highly elated over their success and when it was proposed that a show be given next fall, the motion was caried unanimously.

The following officers were elected:
President, B. W. Collins.
Vice-President, Frank E. Fowler.
Second Vice-President, L. G. Birdsey, W. L. Moses, A. H. Currier, George W. Miller and George N. Morse.
Secretary, William H. Baldwin.
Assistant Secretary, W. H. Gough.
Treasurer, Joshua Shute.
Executive Committee, Charles Frier, Harvey Birdsey, Henry Lietz, W. W. Sleeter, George Currier, Charles Kashub.
Auditing Committe, Lester Birdsey, E. E. Hall, Philip E. Morgan.

NEW ENGLAND PLYMOUTH ROCK CLUB.

The annual meeting of the New England Plymouth Rock Club was held during the Boston show and the following officers elected for the ensuing year: President, A. C. Hawkins; vice-presidents, P. G. Dingley, F. E. Colby, D. J. Lambert, F. O. Groesbeck, N. L. Divoll, C. E. Hodgkins; secretary-treasurer, W. B. Atherton; board of directors, H. B. May, W. B. Davis, G. T. Nash, W. E. Bright, E. H. George, J. F. Watson. It was voted to request the Boston Poultry Association to abolish the novice classes, and that the matter of offering special ribbons at local shows be left with the board of directors.

AMERICAN HOUDAN CLUB.

The annual meeting of the American Houdan Club was held at Boston, Jan. 20th, and elected the following officers: Pres., Rev. C. E. Peterson, Franklin, Me.; vice president, F. W. McKenzie, Concord, Mich.; sec-treas., D. P. Shove, Fall River, Mass.; ex-committee T. F. Rigg, Iowa Falls, Iowa; B. Bement, Lockport, N. Y.; W. E.Smith, Springfield, Mass.; L. W. Borden, Fall River, Mass.; S. D. Lance, Troy Ohio. It was voted to offer special club ribbons at all the leading exhibitions. The officers hope by offering special prizes, and by having the breeders and all others who are interested in the Houdans, to co-operate by joining the Club, and by so doing there will be better Houdans and more of them at all of our poultry shows. Send one dollar to the sec'y, and help bring out more of these beautiful birds.

NOTICE.

To avoid delay, all advertising intended for our March 4 issue should be sent to 714 12th St., N. W.; Washington, D. C. Forms for this issue close Tuesday noon, Feb. 28, but advertisers will confer a favor by sending copy before that date, if possible. Beginning with March 1, all business will be handled at the Washington office and all correspondence should be addressed there. Communications intended for the editor should be addressed to Johnstown, N. Y., as before.

Mr. C. R. Spalding, Keene, N. H., has sold his Cloverdale Farm and Poultry Yards and is now located in the Quaker City. His retirement from the fancy is but temporary.

Mr. F. H. Castner, Changewater, N. J., was unable to get his Barred Rocks to the Newark show, owing to a heavy snow storm in his section, completely isolating him for a day or two from the outside world. But Castner got to the show all the same and judged some of the classes in first class style.

Fine poultry pays. Even for the table. There are quite large and growing numbers of people in the big cities that love a "good bite to eat," and will pay the price for the choice products always. In a recent issue of the New York Sun, in an interesting article on "Costly Foods from France," we find the following regarding choice specimens of fowldom:

"The clubs get the lion's share of all the finer and most expensive articles, but the high priced restaurants have a steady, and, within the past four or five years, a rapidly growing demand for these products. The importation of poulardes du Mans, canards do Rouen and the most expensive European fruits has grown steadily of late and has become no inconsiderable item in New York's bill of fare.

A poularde du Mans, or fat hen of Le Mans, is a bird which, like the Straasburg goose, spends the last three or four months of her life in a box which barely permits her to move. Her only consolation during this season of retirement is that she has limitless quantities of all the varieties of food she likes best and which are most calculated to make her flesh white and tender and saturated with fat. Six dollars apiece is about what the poulardes cost, and some of them weigh almost as much as a small turkey.

The Rouen ducks are also extremely popular here in New York and are being imported in rapidly increasing numbers. They are particularly fat and tender and they cost just about the same as the poulards, sometimes running up as high as $7 for a particularly fine one.

From both France and England come pheasants in large quantities. The imported pheasant, properly served with truffles, will cost about $10.

"We don't import plover eggs any more," said J. B. Martin of the Cafe Martin. "It's against the law—has been for some time back. But we used to get a great many of them, and we sold them for from 60 cents to a dollar apiece.

"You could easily eat a dozen of them, and that is just what a gentleman in my place did one time. I am sure he did not realize what he was doing until he got his bill of $12 for plovers' eggs. He paid the bill without a murmur, but he seemed rather absent minded and dispirited afterward."

We remember selling Rouen ducks at extra high prices as far back as the eighties. When the real fine qualities of the Rouen for the market are thoroughly appreciated, there will be great demand for them. But like all products that go to people with finely educated palates, they must be raised, fed and prepared right to command the big prices we read about. The big-apple-on-top and small-apple-on-bottom game never works in the above business.

The Buckeyes and American Reds were admitted to the American Standard of Perfection at the Minneapolis meeting of the American Poultry Association, held January 13. The standards for these breeds were referred to the committee of five for proper adjustment and preparation to conform with the description of other standard varieties in the book.

This committee met one month after, on February 13, at Buffalo, N. Y., and completed its work as far as possible, but the action taken at Minneapolis by the A. P. A. has been a clear set-back to the early publication of the Standard. The fact that the first forms were in type and some electrotyped, made a complete readjustment necessary, as the added varieties are in the American class and the latter is in type on first forms.

We think it would have been far better to have postponed the printing of the Standards of these new breeds until after the first edition of the Standard had been off the press and sold out. The committee of five were under instructions from the rulings at the annual meeting held at Rochester, February, 1904. The added matter to be incorporated in the book must pass through proper channels to be revised and this takes time and causes delay.

The admittance of the American Reds to the Standard at the Minneapolis meeting will cause more trouble, create bitterer feeling and reflect seriously on the good judgment of the American Poultry Association than anything that has ever occurred in the poultry fancy of America. There is no use in disguising the fact. We publish a letter from Mr. Prickett in this issue that indicates the feeling abroad, and this is not all. Steps are being taken to investigate the claims of the two rival breeds, the American Reds and the Rose Combed Rhode Island Reds, for admission to the Standard.

The American Reds have been admitted to the Standard, although never exhibited as such, except once at Minneapolis. Even now they are acknowledged to have been shown as Rose Comb Rhode Island Reds at past A. P. A. meetings, in order to conform to the rule requiring so many years' showing before they can gain admittance to the Standard.

The Rose Combed Rhode Island Red breeders were not represented at Minneapolis, as they should have been; consequently the champions of the American Reds, thanks to the efforts of their representative at Minneapolis, stole a march on them and succeeded in getting a comparatively unknown variety recognized, while the old Rose Comb fell by the wayside. It was a sharp move, but it will result in one of the greatest upheavals in poultrydom this country has ever known. The Rhode Island Red fanciers are thoroughly alive to a very vital issue, and it is safe to say the whole matter will be thoroughly sifted and some great history will be made.

The American Poultry Association is likely to be confronted with the following fine dilemma: If the American Reds are in the Standard, and the Rose Comb Rhode Island Reds get in next year, what good guardian angel of a judge is going to distinguish between them, albeit, the American Red Standard calls for a heavier bird and somewhat different shaped one. But comb and color are alike, so size and shape can be the only distinguishing features. And two such very closely allied varieties of the same blood even, to be granted separate classification in a book that demands absolutely marked characteristics in each variety admitted. This is a serious and dangerous condition of things and it is "up to" the good sense of the American Poultry Association to meet it in an unflinching manner.

AMERICAN LIGHT BRAHMA CLUB.

The club held its annual meeting at Madison Square Garden, N. Y., Jan. 4th, 1905. Vice President Williams in the chair. The secretary-treasurer's report was read and approved. $281.50 was collected during the year, and $277.34 expended. The following officers were elected for 1905: Pres., C. P. Nettleton, Shelton, Conn.; vice presidents, Gibson T. Williams, Buffalo, N. Y.; Chas. I. Balch, Manchester, Conn.; Henry T. Reed, Camp Point, Ill.; Wm. C.Parker, Berwyn, Md.; Wm. Clowes, Paterson, N. J.; sec-treas., John Rumbold, Baltimore, Md.; assistant sec. Walter S. Gladney Jr., Somers Point, N. J.; executive committee, John L. Cost, Hagerstown, Md.; J. H. Drevenstedt, Johnstown, N. Y.; H. M. Rollins, Westboro, Mass.; C. A. Snyder, Waynetown, Ind., Dr. J. J. Brinckerhoff, Minooka, Ill.

Two silver cups were offered during the year, two to St. Louis, two to Madison Square Garden and one to Peoria, Ill.

Thirteen new members were taken into membership since the last annual meeting, and the club now consists of nearly all the prominent Light Brahma breeders in the country. Club ribbons were sent to several shows, and were pronounced the handsomest ribbons ever seen.

Financially, the club is in good shape. Nearly 1,000 catalogs were sent out, going so far away as British India.

The club is in good shape to extend the interest in the more extensive breeding of this noble fowl, and every effort will be put forth during the coming year to create a greater interest in breeding and showing than has been done for some years past. And we are ready to clasp hands with every one who is interested in the good old breed. Every lover of Light Brahmas should see they again occupy the position they are entitled to—head of the list.

JOHN RUMBOLD, Sec-treas.
American Light Brahma Club.

ROAST SERVED UP BY COOK.

Editor American Fancier:

Mr. R. H. Thomas of the Hazleton show has tried to mislead people in his assertions as to secretary asking for my proof and authority of what I said. My information was given before witness and by none other than W. N. Watson, who told me Mr. Thomas had said to him Castner had the habit of handling birds in the show and he (Thomas) was going to do likewise; then the secretary never sent me a clipping about handling. He did send me one on their responsibility which I have in my possession. They tried to shirk responsibility (and underscored in red ink from "fire or otherwise." I have two letters in my possession; one says members did cooping, and the other says Castner; which convinces me of what I heard at Harrisburg show, that the secretary was only at the show nights. As to my birds being dirty, I can say they were not washed, as something turned up to prevent my doing it. Mr. Thomas says they would never be heard of or get a premium. I must ask him how his one pen was beaten by my pen of unwashed ones. I am not doing any kicking on account of not winning a premium, but on account of having my birds strayed or stolen. As to Mr. Thomas, he did not breed what he showed. Hazleton Poultry Yards exist in anyone's yard for whom Mr. Thomas is agent for the sale of eggs and stock; probable he has one pen himself; of that I am not sure. The two birds which were exchanged for mine were washed, which attracted my attention first.

The poultry keeper should prepare himself for the sudden thaws that presage the approach of spring, by removing the snow from the yards and around the houses, and perfecting the drainage. Dry ground, which adds so much to the comfort of the fowls, will be a reality much sooner for a moment's attention to these small details.

Last week I spoke of being disappointed in not securing the description of an egg farm that is a novelty this winter, in the fact of its getting eggs to back up its claim to the name.

Upon receiving the description of this egg farm, I find I also have a convincing argument in favor of the muslin front house. I refer to the plant of Mr. T. J. Fitzgerald, a merchant of Amsterdam, N. Y., one of the coldest places in northern New York, a locality where the climate will try the effectiveness of any kind of shelter, and the mercury runs down pretty close to the bottom of the thermometer.

This plant, with a capacity of 600 laying hens, is situated just north of the city. The buildings are 200 feet long and 16 feet wide. Another house of the same dimensions is contemplated. The roof is flat, 5 feet at rear and 8 feet in front, each pen is 8 feet wide. The rear part, which contains the roosts and nests, is 6 by 8 feet, and closed at night by means of a muslin door on hinge. The remainder of the pen, 10 by 8 feet, is used as a scratching and exercising pen through the day, also has a muslin door at the front, which is closed on cold and stormy days, it being conveniently hinged to the roof for this purpose.

It will be seen no glass is used, the only protection the fowls have from weather below the zero mark, being two thicknesses of muslin. Each pen is stocked with 25 layers. At this writing I am assured there is not a frozen comb or sick hen in the lot.

The morning feed consists of 2 qts. of wheat for each 25 hens, which is buried in the litter the night before, keeping them busy most of the forenoon.

About the middle of the afternoon a mash is fed, all they will eat. This mash is prepared by boiling a mixture of whole oats and meat scrap, wet with either milk or water, milk being given the preference, and boiled until all the liquid is absorbed by the oats, and fed hot. They are given lukewarm water twice daily, and hoppers containing oyster shells, cut clover and meat scraps, are kept before them at all times.

Aside from supplying his trade in his home city, Mr. Fitzgerald has shipped me as high as four 30 dozen crates in a week, of these white eggs —only a few hours old.

His idea of poultry keeping is, that nothing is too good for his fowls from the time they leave the shell, and his success proves his theory to be the correct one.

During January each pen averaged 434 eggs to the pen of 25 layers each.

I am indebted to Mr. E. Teller DeGraff, one of Amsterdam's poultrymen, for the above description, who describes the workings of his plant thus:

Each pen is supplied with running spring water, which is heated by a lamp if wanted, the water from one pen not being able to run to the next, preventing a spread of disease, should it exist.

A lever opens all pens at once, roost poles not fastened to the side of the house to harbor vermin, nests filled with tobacco stems, dust bath made of ground South Carolina rock."

I notice our editor's outburst of righteous indignation on the egg question and don't blame him. There is no doubt the shipper did not profit from that first three cent advance, as it is an old trick on the part of the manipulators to depress the market on the first fairly heavy receipts of fresh eggs, then suddenly advance the price and put the profit in their pockets, but every shipper to a market like New York gets the advance on the succeeding shipments prior to another change.

But here is a little express problem for his majesty, that is being enacted daily not far from Johnstown.

The American Express Co. charges Mr. Fitzgerald fifty-five cents a crate for carrying eggs from Amsterdam to New York. From Fort Plain, a town on the same line of railroad, easily reached from Amsterdam by wagon, they charge forty-one cents a crate.

I know this to be a fact, for I saw the express charge from the last named point marked on a crate of eggs I graded for a brother receiver.

If such a practice is not plain robbery, then what is it?

NATIONAL BANTAM ASSOCIATION

The 12th annual meeting of the National Bantam Association assembled in the Press Room of the Madison Square Garden at 7:30 o'clock Wednesday evening, January 4th, 1905, with twenty members present, with President R. J. Ruliffson in the chair.

The minutes of Secretary Jehl, reporting the 11th annual meeting, were read, and upon motion accepted and ordered placed on file.

The report of Treasurer A. A. Parker showed a balance of $46.00 on hand; it was moved and seconded that the report be accepted and placed on file.

Mr. C. T. Cornman, chairman of the committee on the Glasgow Memorial reported that there have been 500 applications circulated and as a result had received $45.00 to date for his efforts.

Mr. Jehl was of the opinion that the amount should be divided between the National Bantam Association and the Game Club and purchase two cups; Mr. Cornman informed him that provisions had previously been made to obtain medals. Mr. Cornman also thought it policy to delay matters until another year or until we could raise $100.00 or more. Mr. Jehl was of the opinion that all that could be solicited had already been accomplished.

Upon motion of Mr. Jehl, seconded by Mr. Collins, and approved, that the committee be instructed to purchase a die for the medal and the deficiency, if any, be made up by the National Bantam Association.

Upon motion of Mr. Jehl, seconded by Mr. Cornman and approved, that Mr. T. F. McGrew, as a committee to meet the American Poultry Association and protest against the change of name Black Rose Comb Bantam to African Bantam, be discharged with thanks for valuable services rendered.

There was a report on resignations by the secretary.

Upon motion of Mr. Oke, seconded by Mr. Hoitt, that the resignations of the members be accepted, provided their dues are paid to date.

Mr. Latham made an amendment to Mr. Oke's motion, that the secretary write the various members and prevail on them to continue with the association as members. The amendment carried.

Mr. McGrew was of the opinion that the association should adhere to its constitution, viz: Art. 3, Sec. 2, viz: "Any member whose dues shall be unpaid for six months after receiving due notice of same shall cease to be a member and shall forfeit all claims he may have had as a member."

The Association proceeded to the election of officers. The president called upon Mr. Hoitt to preside as chairman.

Mr. Oke moved, seconded by Mr. Young, that Mr. R. J. Ruliffson be re-elected president of the association.

Upon motion of Mr. Theim, seconded by Mr. Jehl, that Mr. Ruliffson be elected by acclamation. Accordingly Mr. Ruliffson was unanimously elected.

Mr. Jehl moved, seconded by Mr. Oke, that Mr. A. A. Parker be re-elected treasurer. Mr. Parker was therefore duly re-elected by acclamation.

Secretary H. J. Quilhot, appointed to fill vacancy caused by the illness of Mr. Jehl, was prevailed upon to accept the nomination for secretary, but declined the sentiments of the meeting with thanks, stating that owing to other business he could not possibly devote the time necessary to the office.

HON. JAS. P. HILLDORFER.

The Black Minorca King.

Mr. Quilhot then placed in nomination the name of Mr. George Young of Brooklyn, N. Y., for secretary, and moved that his election be made by acclamation. Mr. Young was therefore unanimously elected secretary.

The president appointed as a committee to select vice presidents and board of directors, Messrs. Oke, McGrew and Jehl.

The committee reported the selection of the following:

Vice Presidents:—Hon. C. W. Hoitt, Nashua, N. H.; T.A. Havemeyer, Mahwah, N. J.; E. Latham, Flatbush, L. I.; Wm. McNeil, London, Canada; Chas. T. Cornman, Carlisle, Pa.; Ira C. Kellar, Prospect, Ohio; Chas. Jehl, Long Branch, N. J.; Wm. Y. Fox, Taunton, Mass.; E. H. Galusha, Ensley, Ala.

Board of Directors:—Miss Selma Wieners, College Point, N. Y.; J. F. Kirkpatrick, Easton, Pa.; H. J. Quilhot, Johnstown, N. Y.; Richard Oke, London, Canada; P. Williams, Taunton Mass.; Wm. Barber, Toronto, Canada; R. J. Ruliffson, Rochester, N. Y.; A. A. Parker, Dunellen, N. J.; George L. Young, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Fifteen applications for membership were favorably acted upon and the following elected to membership: Arthur Schilling, Rochester, N. Y.; Wallace E. J. Collins, Brooklyn, N. Y.; J. H. Drevenstedt, Johnstown, N. Y.; Doige & McNeil, London, Canada; Maxwell Warren, Rochester, N. Y.; Marie M. Hildorfer, Allegheny City, Pa.; F. D. E. Stowe, Brattleboro, Vt.; Hanson R. Duval, East Islip, L. I.; John C. Blunck, Johnstown, N. Y.; Herbert Drechsler, Rochester, N. Y.; D. G. Witmyer, Lititz, Pa.; Chas. Mager, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Walter S. Orr, Orr's Mills, N. Y.; Walter H. Gerow, Washingtonville, N. Y.; Warren Hayden, Hartford, Conn.

Mr. Latham made a few remarks in relation to delinquent dues, and considered it good policy to be lenient and to exercise good judgment in collecting same.

Mr. Hoitt moved that the matter of extending the time as proposed at the 1904 meeting be taken from the table, and also moved that the matter be disposed of indefinitely; and same was favorably approved of by all members present.

Mr. Oke moved that all delinquents in arrears one year or over be stricken from the list of membership. Mr. Jehl was also of the same opinion. The matter was finally concluded to adhere strictly to the constitution.

Upon motion of Mr. Jehl the secretary was instructed to have published a list of specials and mail ten copies to each member of the association.

Upon motion of Mr. Latham the secretary was empowered to conduct the business of the office according to his discretion; it was also moved and seconded that the secretary have printed copies of the Constitution and By-Laws with the names of all members in good standing in same.

The following were selected candidates to judge at the next show at Madison Square Garden: H. J. Quilhot, Johnstown, N. Y.; Chas. Jehl,Long Branch, N. J.; C. M. Smith, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Upon motion the meeting then adjourned.

RHODE ISLAND RED BREEDERS AROUSED.

Editor American Fancier:

I have read Mr. Baerman's letter regarding Amer. Reds with considerable interest, and while I can see no objection to a R. C. R. I. Red club being formed to promote the variety, I see absolutely no need of the course that has been taken to make a different standard for the R. C. Reds and having them admitted to standard under a different name.

How absurd it would look for R. C. Brown, White and Buff Leghorns and R. C. Minorcas to have standards entirely different from S. C. varieties. Might just as well have a different standard type for varieties of Rocks and Dottes.

Baerman has made the statement that the type of the two varieties of Reds are different, the S. C. conforming more towards Plymouth Rocks, while R. C. are more like Wyandottes. That is no excuse why the ideal standards of each should be different. There are Rock, Dotte and Leghorn types in each variety (same might be said of other breeds) but make an ideal standard for the breed and let each variety aim for that standard.

Mr. Baerman says the S. C. breeders or breeders of both varieties should have no voice in the matter of the standard for R. C.; in fact they not only are not asked to join the movement, but it is openly hinted that their company is not desirable. We would like to ask who it is that has made the R. C. variety what it is except the breeders of both varieties. Why Mr. Baerman insists in calling the R. I. Red Club the S. C. R. I. Red Club is a puzzle.

It is a fact that during the season of 1904 the majority of the New England (I can't speak for western) breeders of both varieties were having more calls for R. C. stock than for S. C.

That being the case, is it reasonable to suppose that such breeders as Bryant, Drisko, Park, Stafford, Tompkins, Gunston, Todd, Bean, Shove, Crowther, Coffin, Perkins, Case, Delano, Caswell, Chapin, Hollis, Kingsbury, Davis, Spaulding, Richardson and a host of others who breed both varieties are going to sit idly by while their birthright is taken from them? It is such men who make our shows either with their own exhibits or birds they sell and they have got to have some voice in the matter.

It is claimed that the objection to admitting breeders of both varieties to Amer. Red Club is that some breeders use S. C. & R. C. in same pen, and yet a man who breeds both Buff Wyandottes and R. C. Reds would be accepted with open arms. Consistent, isn't it?

No doubt this action will do some good, for certainly the R. I. Red club need punching up to allow such a state of affairs.

Personally the writer does not know of a single breeder, either R. C. or S. C., or both varieties, who approves of the action taken at Minneapolis.

We would like to know how many show specimens come up to the proposed weights? As it is to be, any old sorrel rooster that has weight, no matter what his type or color, will win over a valuable bird that is undersized, at least in score card show.

Now there is no cause for alarm in R. I. Red camp. The club is large enough to look out for itself. It is the breeders and exhibitors who make our shows and the shows must cater to the demands of exhibitors. The R. C. variety can still thrive as a non-standard variety and be entered as such as heretofore. The Amer. Reds can be entered as such provided there are enough to make a respectable entry.

There is no reason why we breeders of R. C. Reds should feel alarmed over the situation, unpleasant though it is. We can continue to breed the real article and let American Red Club breed American Reds.

The annual show of the Wisconsin Poultry Fanciers' association was one of the most successful ever held under the auspices of the organization, and that a larger hall must be obtained for the next annual show was evident. There were 1,500 fowls and 500 pigeons on exhibition at the armory during the week.

The silver cup offered by the Ivory Soap company for the whitest fowl exhibited at the show was won by J. A. Gargen of this city. Other specials have not been listed, and an announcement of the distribution will be made later. Awards for the poultry exhibit follow:

WINSTED'S POULTRY SHOW.

Poultry fanciers will be pleased to learn that the old Western Connecticut Poultry Association of Winsted, which was organized in 1885, has been revived and a score card exhibit will be given at the armory Dec.19-22, 1905. A meeting of the members and others was held at the town hall recently and officers elected as follows: G. L. Foskett, president; A. P. White, Dr. G. W. Brown, S. V. Beckwith, E. B. Parsons, Winsted, J. D. Bishop, Torrington, vice presidents; L. C. Capewell, secretary; F. D. Hallett, treas.; R. S. Seymour, H. M. Sweet, J. H. Holbrook, F. B. Catlin, William Aukland, executive committee.

This association has probably given some of the largest and best poultry shows ever held in the state. Each exhibitor was given a square deal in the awarding of premiums and the reputation that this organization obtained through their hospitality is fresh in the minds of many breeders to-day.

Enthusiasm among poultrymen in this section has been aroused to a high pitch, and already breeding pens have been mated in anticipation of exhibiting at Winsted's score card show next December.

Liberal premiums in both regular and specials, which will be open to the competition of the world, will be offered, and every member has gone to work with only one end in view—to make it the leading show of the state.

Winsted is the terminus of the Naugatuck division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad system and is on the line of the Central New England railroad, which connects the Hudson river at Poughkeepsie and Rhinecliff from the west and Hartford from the east. It is the largest and most important place on the line with the exception of Poughkeepsie and Hartford.

The armory is only about two minutes' walk from either station. It is roomy and well lighted and ventilated, in fact an ideal hall for a poultry exhibition.

A very cordial invitation is extended to all exhibitors to show at Winsted next December.

L. C. CAPEWELL.

Secretary of the Western Connecticut Poultry Association of Winsted, Conn.

RIGHT OFF THE REEL.

Editor American Fancier:

Great was my surprise and greater my delight last evening when I returned home from my daily toils in the city, and my mother-in-law's daughter handed me the Fancier, with the announcement that Mr. Geo. E. Howard of Feather fame and J. H. Drevenstedt had laid their editorial pens on the same rack. Congratulations, Drev! Same to you, George!

Don't think, dear boys, because I am at present actively out of the supply business, and am not attending shows, that I am a "dead one." No, sir! I am with you in the spirit with the same enthusiasm as of the fondly remembered past, and I cannot refrain from making an expression of my thoughts at this time, and that is this—that two of the best sheets that treat on the feathered and hairy tribes have joined hands. Who is there that dares to say that either of these publications have not always dealt fairly and fearlessly with any and all subjects that have come before them, and has not everything been clean from the show reports down to the one line ads.? Nothing could have given me greater pleasure (and I know I voice the sentiments of many when I say this) than this Feather-Fancier combination—and mark you, gentlemen, this is going to be a hard combination to beat. When that cool, clear head of that little Washington "Hen Crank" (please allow this expression, George will stand for it) and that brain of that old Johnstown Warhorse get busy together, there will be "something doing in "Denmark," boys, and then remember just the same as you add cream to your pudding, you have here the finest kind of dressing in the Associates Mr. Brown and the always up-to-date Bantam McGrew, and the others. Good things coming, boys, I can see them.

MODEL

Incubators and Brooders

The Machines That Are Supplanting Other Makes on the Large Utility Farms

Making a Front by extravagant and false claims and Making Good are two very different things. The Model Makes Good on every point claimed for it.

The chief claims made for the Model Incubator are a perfect ventilating system, and a regulating device many times more active and accurate than any other on the market. These two features, together with minor ones that go to make up a harmonious whole, render the Model Incubator the most efficient hatching device of those now offered the public.

New Thermostat for 1905

Patent applied for.

There can be no stronger evidence in support of my claim for the superiority of the Model over all others than is in the fact of its adoption by the market poultrymen, whose profits are regulated by the percentage of eggs hatched, and who are using it exclusively, replacing other makes at great expense.

Is not the incubator that is actually doing this "Making Good?"

One of the large farms changing over this month is that of Messrs. W. H. & John C. McCormick, Yardley, Penn. Here sixty-seven Cyphers incubators will be replaced with Models.

Mr. William H. Truslow purchased six large Models last season. Now he is replacing his forty-five Cyphers Incubators with the Model Special Duck No. 4.

The Crystal Springs Duck Farm operated twenty-six Models last year. This season fifty-five old Cyphers are being replaced with Models.

The Pine Tree Chicken Hatchery is now changing to use the Model exclusively. More than twice as many chicks are hatched on this farm every year as on any other two farms in this country where the largest in the world are to be found. Mr. Wilson tells his own story as follows:—

PINE TREE CHICKEN HATCHERY

NEWLY HATCHED CHICKS FOR SALE FROM ABOVE BREEDS

Mr. Chas. A. Cyphers, Buffalo, N. Y. Stockton, N. J., Jan. 5th, 1905.

Dear Sir:—I now enclose you my check for twenty-five more of the new 360-Egg Model Incubators. This lot will make me altogether seventy-two machines. I shall discard the forty-seven old Cyphers as I find that the Model requires less oil to run it than the old Cyphers does, the thermostat is more sensitive, and therefore I can get more and stronger chicks I have followed hatching as a business for the last eighteen years, have used many different makes. Am using some of my own make now, but find that your machines do better work with less watching than any I have ever operated. It does not take much of a mathematician to figure out that the best incubators and brooders are cheapest in the end. I am well aware that there are a great many makes of incubators that are widely advertised and big inducements given to buy. If those who are inexperienced and intending to buy a machine would note that the Cyphers Incubators have been used by most of the largest poultry plants and experiment stations, and that the Model is now rapidly supplanting the Cyphers in these large plants, and that Chas. A. Cyphers is the inventor of both these machines they would take the advice of those that have tested them and profit by their experience, rather than listen to some incubator manufacturer who sends out a glaring claim that his machine will give a 99 per cent hatch, or something similar. With best wishes that your business will continue to increase, I remain, Yours respectfully, JOS. D. WILSON.

ZIM. NOT READY JUST YET TO "JUMP OFF."

Editor American Fancier:

Mr. Ruliffson, it seems by "call down" in last issue of your good paper, was the man who wrote the Game Bantam criticisms I referred to in previous number. I did not know the author, as there are several people in America who might sign "R." However, I claim that in describing a fowl, dog or horse, to say "lacks in length of body" means nothing definite and is just as apt to mean, or be taken by us common, country-bred people,as meaning "too short" as to mean "too long." "Lacks length of body" would certainly imply the specimen written about was too short. He insinuates that I do not know enough to listen to the birds, and that I had better go drown myself, etc. There are a very few things, however, that I am quite positive I do know, but will not bother your readers with them. Next time you pose as an authority on Game Bantams, please "break up" your chunks of knowledge into smaller parcels. Say "too long in body" for all of us "Yaps" are not good guessers, and "lacks in length of body" means "any old thing." Come again if you want to. I'll probably have "jumped" by that time. At any rate, you can have the last "say."

CORRECTION.

Editor American Fancier:

I noticed an error in your Feb. 4th issue, which I wish to have corrected in your next issue. In regard to Black Hamburgs, I won first on cock instead of second, as you have it, at the Hazleton show. H. E. LAPP.
Fullerton, Pa.

Editor of American Fancier:

I read in your paper, edition Feb. 4th, in regard to the Middletown Poultry show, that Smith took second prize on Barred Rock pullet. This is denied by me, as I received notice from Treas. Smith, Middletown, that I received that prize, including ribbon, entry fee 75c., etc.

J. R. KING.
Meriden, Conn., Feb. 9, 1905.

Editor American Fancier:

I notice in your issue of Feb. 4th a correction signed by Warner Poultry Yards, Painesville, O., asking you to "please correct Warner Poultry Yds. for winning first on S. S. White Leghorns at Erie, Pa., show." This would indicate that they won first on all classes, which is not so. They entered one bird only, a cock, which won first prize.

F. E. THOMPSON, Sec.
Erie, Pa., Feb. 6, 1905.

THE AMERICAN FANCIER

A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO

Thoroughbred Poultry Culture.

VOL. XXIII. NO. 599. JOHNSTOWN, NEW YORK, FEBRUARY 25, 1905. PRICE FIVE CENTS

THE TACOMA SHOW

Was One of the Finest Held on the Pacific Coast.

As the 11th annual exhibition of the Tacoma Poultry association has passed upon record as one of the most successful exhibitions not only of the Tacoma association, but one of the most successful exhibitions ever held on the Pacific coast, sucessful both financially and in the way of education and advertising and I will say here that in all of my experience I never entered a poultry show where such complete harmony existed during my four days' attendance and handling the classes, to be passed upon by me, I never heard an unkind word. This speaks volumes and is an example from which all associations should take heed. Beyond doubt the poultry show in general is the one place where all the petty jealousies and prejudices of the human character arise and come to the surface.

Genial Fred Ilton was superintendent and this large exhibition was handled with a system which gave satisfaction to every exhibitor, and another year they will all return; bring their friends and all their neighbors with them. All of the assistants were courteous and accommodating, and every visitor was made welcome.

The curious were on hand at all times and many were the questions asked in regard to the various exhibits and were always answered by those in charge with the greatest courtesy.

From the very beginning to the end the exhibition was conducted to the great satisfaction of all. I feel that after passing judgment upon half of the classes at the show, it is rather a delicate matter to make any report upon them, yet looking at it from an unprejudiced standpoint, the party who has passed upon them carefully section by section ought to be qualified to make a few remarks without fear or favor to one or detriment to another.

The American class was well represented in Plymouth Rocks. In many instances unplaced birds were so surpassingly good that we should have liked to have seen them honored with a V. H. C., H. C. or C. ribbon.

Nobody made a clean sweep, for that nowadays has become one of the impossibilities. But the exhibitor that received only a piece of the pudding was certainly fortunate. In the Barred the male line strongly representd. The 1st cock, a good bird that has been in the winnings, both as cockerel and cock, a good shaped bird with fairly good color, making him average well; 2nd cock, a large massive bird that will go into any show and crowd the winners; in hens, 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th so close that a man can almost shut his eyes and make a choice and be satisfied, 2nd hen having the advantage of being younger and a grand bird, fine color, beautifully barred and excellent in shape, but failing a trifle in under color. Cockerels a magnificent class, 1st and 2nd two different types of birds tieing for place but 1st wins, being a bird under weight, not yet filled out in shape, but starting out with a 3-4 point comb with plumage unequalled by any I have seen this season. Second, a compact, broad bird, good shape and color, one of the most excellent shaped breasts ever seen on a Plymouth Rock. But fails in shape of tail. Pullets a large class, the first five averaging very close together, a little out of condition, with proper care even the 5th pullet might be placed 1st.

White Rocks, a good class. Cocks, 1st, large in size, white in plumage, good legs and beak, but weak in comb; 2nd another good one in color, comb, legs and shape, but not so large as winner. Hens 1st fine in shape, size and plumage, a grand hen; 2nd, not far below 1st not so large. Cockerels, 1st a beauty in plumage, good style, legs and beak, comb fair shape, grand excepting tail too high; 2nd a grand bird, a model Plymouth Rock shape, 3-4 comb, but bird slightly out of condition. Pullets, 1st a beautiy in shape, size and plumage. Tie for 2nd could be called twin sisters splendid in plumage.

Buff Plymouth Rock small class. Better in color than shape, 1st cockerel fine color, in fact have never seen better and when matured will be a monster for size, at least will make 11 pounds; 2nd cockerel looks to be a brother to 1st, same shade of color,not matured in shape.

White Wyandotte a good class of excellent color, but not all fully matured, some losing on weight, but would be equal to any class in the show when in full plumage and up to weight.

Leghorns. As usual these classes were well represented. The quality in all classes was superior. Notably fine were the browns. Cocks. 1st an old bird, shown in fine condition, good shape, but has lost color on account of age. Balance of class fairly good. Hens. 1st, nice shape good even color; 2nd good size, good shape, but loses to first on color; 3rd, aged,probably has a long list of winnings to her credit but her day as a winner is over. In back section for color this hen was passed, others should make note of this for they may not see such grand color again for some time. If the owner of this hen will present her to the writer I will give her the best from my table, and if she should outlive me will provide for her in my will.

Cockerels undoubtedly the strongest class ever presented at any one exhibition in the Northwest, a toss up for first among the 5 winners. Typical carriage almost perfect; pullets, remarkable in color, being good in size and shape and scoring high.

Whites, excellent in all four classes. Fine shape good plumage, fairly good legs, but in general weaker in comb than we find in many exhibitions. Breeders should not overlook the head section in Leghorns as it counts 24 counts.

Buff Leghorns, a really fine showing in pullets, the strongest and best it has ever been the privilege of the writer to judg.

Black Minorcas, a good average class, but hardly up to weight at time of show.

As Judge Collier passed upon one-half of the show he will be able to make a report from this standpoint. And I want to say right here to you brother fanciers, right at home, and in your own paper, you have in H. H. Collier one of the most painstaking studious and capable judges to be found, not excepting East, West, North or South.—Elmer Dixon.

The above is a report by Mr. Elmer Dixon, in our estimation one of the best judges that has placed a ribbon in Tacoma. When the breeders of Washington and Oregon learn that we have as good judges here on the coast as can be found farther east they will save a lot of money and get the satisfaction of good conscientious work. California has learned that they have as good judges at home as can be found outside and to their glory they have used them for many years. Cobbledick, Hinds and Berrar are all getting a reputation that is worth having and when our Oregon and Washington boys have to go out of their respective states for judges they should remember them.

As the writer judges a half of the show at Tacoma,it will not come amiss for me to say something about the awards.

The Buff Rocks were a small class but very good. The cockerels were judged by Dixon and they were three very good birds. The hens were good but somewhat faded. The only cock on exhibition was a very good old bird. He did not score enough to bring him a first, but he is a safe bird to tie to. The pullets were a very nice lot of birds. They were not up to weight, but in color they were fine. The first prize bird was a splendid fowl and up to weights would win anywhere.

The Silver Wyandottes were not out in large numbers, but the quality was there. The first prize birds were exceptionally good.

Light Brahmas were a good class, the first and second pulelts as well as the first and second hen being fine.

Buff Cochins were represented by one pen and they were very good ones, excellent in color.

Black Leghorns were there with three representatives. Three hens that could have gotten places in most any kind of show.

Black Minorcas were a hot class. The first cock tieing with the second. The first was a splendid big fellow and the second lost to him on weight. The cockerels were very good. Most of them among the winenrs could have taken first and not stretched the conscience of the judge. The hens were a hot class and some good birds were shown.

Rhode Island Reds were a very small but "sultry" class. The winning cockerel would have taken a place most anywhere. The females were not as good as the males, but they were a fine lot of birds.

Buff Orpingtons were only represented by two breeds but they were right in it when it comes to being "Buff."

There were a lot of Andalusians on exhibition and we must say that they were fine. This is a fowl that lays a lot of eggs and is as pretty as one wants to see.

The Silver Spangled Hamburgs were on hand in goodly numbers and when it comes to good color they were there with the spangles.

White Orpingtons were represented by one pen. A nice lot of birds they were.

White Minorcas were there and they were the best specimens that we ever handled in a show room.

Bantams were a good class and there were "Buffs' on exhibition that would be a good pattern for the rest of the "Buff" men to copy after.

The Golden Sebright Bantams were there in large numbers and they were very good.

Indian Runner and Pekin Ducks were both well represented.

Some birds changed hands at long prices. Fred A. Johnson sold the first prize Barred Rock cockerel for $28. He went to W. H. Arps. Mrs. Durr sold a Buff Rock cockerel for $10. The first prize Buff Rock cockerel was bought by the writer, who refused twenty dolalrs for the bird soon after purchasing.—H. H. Collier.

THE BUTLER, PENNA., SHOW.

The first annual show of the fanciers of Butler, county, Pa., came off February 5-11, and was a credit to the men who organized it. Six hundred and seventy-two birds were on hand, and a good lot they were, too.

Of Barred Rocks there were 88, and of S. C. Brown Leghorns 89, these being the two largest classes, and hotly contested in every section. Birds came to this show from quite a distance, but the local boys were able to hold their own without blushing for their birds. A few lessons in fitting for the show, both in Barred Rocks and white birds, would raise their winnings. We hope to see their full list of awards published in the Fancier. In the meantime we extend congratulations to Messrs. Gibson, Fox, Poole and other officers who were able to pull off so creditable a show at their first attempt. Butler county is a great poultry section and there is no reason why this association may not increase the size and quality of this show year by year, since the people of that enterprising city and of the surrounding country patronize its doors so liberally.

NOTICE.

All communications relating to subscriptions and advertisements, beginning with March 4 issue, must be sent to the business office of The American Fancier, 714 Twelfth St., N. W. Washington, D. C., in the future. All communications and manuscript for publication in The American Fancier must be sent to the editorial office, Johnstown, N. Y. Secretaries of coming poultry shows will oblige by sending in their dates promptly, so they can be classified and listed. They will further oblige by sending notices of meetings held and names of judges selected. Secretaries of specialty clubs are kindly requested to send corrected lists of officers elected for the coming year, and all notices regarding meetings and specials offered at such for the shows to be held next season.

It is the earnest wish and desire of The American Fancier to publish all news regarding the show business of America, not only for the benefit of its readers, but for the specialty clubs as well.

The Pittsburg show this week was a record breaker, the entries exceeding all expectations. A complete report will be found in the March 4 Inaugural Number of The American Fancier.

The above mentioned issue will appear in a brand new dress and contain some new features. The edition will be a large one. Advertisements will close Tuesday noon.

The report of the Herald Square show management, which appears in another column of this issue, conveys a very clear idea of what it costs to run a big poultry show in a large city. It further demonstrates the difficult problem of "making poultry shows pay." That the expenses at this show can be cut down is obvious; no doubt the experience gained at the first exhibition will prove a valuable asset in the future handling of the business end of Herald Square functions.

We are glad to announce that Washington, D. C., will have a great poultry, pigeon and pet stock show, December 11 to 14. A powerful management is behind the enterprise. Further particulars will be given publicity within a few weeks.

Once a man gets the chicken fever, he is slave to it forever, i. e., provided he is a real dyed-in-the-wool fancier and the fever took a strong hold. That is just what happened to George E. Howard of Washington, D. C. Mr. Howard was so busy the past five years building up his magnificent printing plant that he thought he could spare no time for chickens or pigeons. We met him last week and he simply said, "I'm at it again. Just see my Pigmy Pouters?" And sure enough, he had a fine collection right back of his office. But now the Light Brahma, his old love, is in his mind, and we would not be surprised to see the editor of The Feather starting in with a pen of his old favorites.

Another hen crank has returned to the fold, and it is the Hon. Jas. Forsyth of Owego, N. Y. He is making big preparations for his re-entry in the show arena next winter. Mr. F. W. Corey, formerly of Goshen, N. Y., is Mr. Forsyth's poultryman, and Mr. Corey is a good one at the business.

There is a very good opening for shrewd poultry raisers in the south, not far from Washington, to start broiler and squab raising. The demand there exceeds the supply to a very large degree. Thousands of broilers in the Washington markets come from Tennessee.

We are not surprised at the rumors in circulation regarding the hippodroming act performed by a number of Barred Rock exhibitors at recent large shows. So bold have some of the participants in this game become that detection seems inevitable. It all rests with the secretaries and judges of shows to furnish the remedy and the evidence. While the swapping of birds among certain exhibitors is an old story and the practice has been in vogue in the Rock alley for the last twenty years, it has never been exactly considered a crime, and simply existed because of lax laws governing such cases.

But it is wrong, nevertheless, and works injury to everybody concerned in the fancy. When men advertise winnings on borrowed birds and sell eggs from pens supposed to contain these birds, a downright fraud is committed. It seems to us the American Poultry Association has another opportunity to regulate the conduct and business methods of some of its members.

"Uncle Tom" Rackham and "Deacon" Alexander Lalapaloosa Sparks were presented with handsome blue silk sashes, the latter duly embroidered in gold and suitably inscribed in glittering letters, by Messrs. Bamberger of Newark, N. J., as a token of their appreciation of the valuable services rendered in conducting the late Newark show and also as a prize for the two gentlemen having the loveliest underpinning at the show.

Dr. W. H. Humiston, Cleveland, Ohio, sends us a very good photograph of his White Wyandotte hen, first at World's Fair, St. Louis. This hen is of the Premier strain originated and bred by the doctor. She shows true Wyandotte characteristics, being beautifully rounded in breast and body, with a finely arched neck, good back and excellent head.

A special meeting of the American Poultry Association will be held at Pittsburg, Pa., the first week in April. There will be a rise in the temperature about that time.

We regret to learn that Mr. W. E. Samson has been compelled to give up his famous Silver Wyandottes, owing to a change of residence and other circumstances, as will be found in his letter appearing elsewhere in this is sue. We have known Mr. Samson many years, handled his birds at numerous shows and no squarer or more conscientious fancier existed than our old friend Samson. He was a credit to the magnificent variety of fowl he helped bring to the front and all the Silver Wyandotte fanciers who know him well, will bear us out in what we write above.

Mr. T. Farrer Rackham requests us to publish the following:

To the best of my knowledge and belief, all the prizes, specials and regulars, and all obligations of the Fanciers' Poultry Association's show, held at Newark Jan. 30th to Feb. 4th, 1905, have been paid, but I thought it might be well if you could give this fact some publicity, so that if anything has escaped my notice, this will give an opportunity of drawing my attention to the matter.

As prophesied by the "American Fancier," Newark show turned out to be a success, not only as to the quality of the birds and the attendance, but financially as well, and plans are now being laid for a larger and better show next season.

It is estimated that seventy thousand (70,000) persons visited the show during the week, and sales were very large.

PURE BRED BUFF LEGHORNS OR MONGRELS, WHICH?

At this late day we still find people who keep dunghill or scrub fowls, and why? If you should ask them they probably would answer that they could not afford to buy pure bred stock. But we think that these people cannot afford to purchase mongrels, and we shall try to explain why.

One pure-bred Buff Leghorn hen, costing, say $2, properly mated, will in season lay 13 eggs in as many days; these eggs are worth at least $2 per setting for hatching; results: One pure-bred Buff Leghorn hen pays for herself in 13 days!

One mongrel hen, costing, say 75 cents, lays 75 eggs in 150 days (that's being liberal to the mongrel), they can't be sold for hatching, so they go to the market, at one cent apiece; the result is: One mongrel hen pays for herself in 150 days.

P. S.—If she hasn't eaten her head off before that time.

THREE AGAINST TWO.

We often hear the larger breeds designated "the farmers' fowl," but are they? Three Buff Leghorns will live and thrive and lay eggs on the same amount of food that two hens of any of the larger breeds will consume. You might possibly say, "that's true, but where does the Buff Leghorn come in? When shipped to the market it only weighs 4 pounds, and the large breed weigh 8 pounds?"

To that we must reply, That is very true. But let us figure. We will say you own 30 Buff Leghorn hens, and your neighbor 20 of some large breed. again, for the sake of argument, we will say that the large hens are as good layers as your Buff Leghorns. Well, then, at the end of a certain time your Buff Leghorns have produced 150 each, or 4,500 eggs.

Your neighbor's hens being as good layers (?) but could not even when straining themselves lay more than one egg per day, which would give a total of 3,000 eggs.

Now your flocks are ready for the market. As you have 30 Buff Leghorn hens at 4 pounds each, and your neighbor has 20 big fowls at eight pounds each, and furthermore you both sell them at 10 cents per pound, and your eggs at 18 cents per dozen, the figures would look thus:

Mr. Buff Leghorn owner:

4,500 eggs, or 372 dozen, at 18c	$67.50
120 pounds of fowl, at 10c	12.00
Total	$79.50

Mr. Neighbor with the "farmers' fowl":

3,000 eggs, or 250 dozen, at 18c	$45.00
160 pounds of fowl, at 10c	16.00
Total	$61.00

Which is the best? You are the judge.

FUTURE FANCIERS:

We realize that many people are keeping a mixed lot of chickens because they happened to get them. They grow to love them. But pleasure and profit should go hand in hand, and it can be done even with a mongrel flock, as follows: Get a vigorous, healthy Buff Leghorn cockerel and mate him to your females and then note results.

The offspring from such mating will be more uniform in color, and will be superior as egg producers.

The Buff Leghorn Club has issued a 44-page book, which will be sent free to any one asking for it, giving information about those egg machines, the Buff Leghorns.

ANOTHER COUNTRY HEARD FROM

Editor American Fancier:

As you ask for suggestions on show methods to prevent lost birds, it seems to me whatever method is employed there will be lost birds. For there always will be mistakes made, especially at such a large show as Madison Square Garden.

Here is one, and the only one way I can see that can save the show association from blame, and that is to employ enough honest and careful assistants to do the work well. It may cost the management more, but what is that compared to the bad impression lost birds give of the show management. These assistants need not be fanciers to the backbone, but should be honest and careful.

The number system is good enough where it is used, and any ordinarily intelligent person can put them on the coops with a corresponding number on it, and while they are cooping them, keep all exhibitors out of the hall. The exhibitors may kick, but let the shows make that a rule. Also, let no exhibitor handle his birds during the show without a permit from the secretary's office, given in writing, and delivered to one of his assistants and not to the exhibitor, the assistant to hold the permit and the permit to designate as to such and such numbers. No other bird should be handled and the assistant should oversee the matter, and if there is any attempt to violate the permit, report the party's name at the office and place such party's name on a list of debarred exhibitors. Let the association make such a rule and put it in their premium list.

This may seem a lot of red tape, but one person must be treated like the others, and if he is honest he won't care, for it is as much for his own benefit as for others. If all were honest the lost birds would be returned to their own lawful owners, whether it was a mistake or not. This would clear the show manager's conscience, for they could feel as though they had done all that was right, by managing the show themselves, and not having a mob composed of exhibitors, express men and any old body that came in to help. Let all those waiting for their exhibits keep outside of the rail. Let the show break up earlier, if needs be, for a lot of work can be done in one hour if the assistants are level-headed men and are let alone and not molested by a mob. I enclose a system that we use in our county fair in every department, and it is a grand, good one, too. Last year I was superintendent of poultry and this system was used for the first time. It made some trouble, but it worked satisfactorily, and any show using this or any number system with good, honest and careful assistants, ought not to be blamed. What takes place after that, the show management cannot be responsible. The express company should allow no changing of birds under their care, either at the express office or on the train, for I think when I send my birds to a show and don't get them back again, I have a right to suspect any corparation that handles my birds, whether it is the poultry show management or express company's agents. This is my way of looking a it. Let us hear from some others.

THE RURAL DISTRICT HEARD FROM.

Editor American Fancier:

Referring to the article written by H. Nicholson in the February 4th issue of The Fancier, and without waiting for any of the large breeders of Barred Plymouth Rocks to reply to his questions, the writer wishes to take them up. You and your readers will pardon the straightforwardness of the statements here made, but being brought up in the rural districts, where truth stands paramount, the writer cannot do other than speak of things as they appear to him.

Early in the year the writer brushed the hay seeds out of his hair and hied himself off to the barber shop for a semi-annual hair cut; requested the good wife to get out the best black suit, boiled shirt and fine shoes. Donning these, the writer then visited the world-famed "Madison Square Poultry Show." Brought up as the writer has been in the "rural districts," where every farmyard is inhabited by fowls of every degree of quality, it is no more than natural that he should know a "rooster" when he sees one.

Once in the show room, your author stood stupefied at the bewildering display. Where had there ever been anything to compare with such as this? The nearest comparison the writer had ever seen was at the "country fair." Well might he stand stupefied, then, at this gorgeous hall and stupendous exhibit. Shambling up the Barred Plymouth Rock alleys, a variety near to the heart of the writer, what was to be seen—surely, magnificent specimens. While looking at these, the writer, by scratching his somewhat haggled locks, recalled that at his home there was a book entitled "The American Standard of Perfection." In that book it said that Barred Plymouth Rocks MUST have yellow legs. If one could see nothing but the shanks on some of the specimens entered as Barred Plymouth Rocks, he might take them for Minorcas. Green shanks on a Barred Rock? Surely, no breeder of any reputation would show such a specimen. Yet here they were, coop after coop of green shanked, willow shanked and mottled shanked Barred Rocks. By referring to the catalogue (which catalogue, by the way, the writer found on sale the evening before the show opened its doors to the public), he found that these Barred Rocks were exhibited by our most prominent breeders, too. If the writer were judge, there would be no ribbon on the coops of green shanked Barred Rocks. If there were not enough good, clean, yellow shanked Barred Rocks to merit the ribbon, then they would be withheld.

But why confine yourself to the Barred Rock alley; come over to the White Wyandotte alleys. What do we find there? This same standard tells us that for a White Wyandotte to have feathers or stubs on its shanks or toes, disqualifies it. What do we find here? Among the cocks we find the coveted blue ribbon on a coop containing a cock with very visible feathers on his shanks. A disqualified bird winning the blue? Was there not other cocks in the show that a feather legged bird must be given the first place? A report was current in that snow that the judge of the class stated there were twelve cocks any one of which merited first place.

Then why give a disqualified bird first place. In the White Wyandotte cockerels we find the coveted blue again on a coop containing a deformed specimen. His legs were so bowed that he stood with one foot on the top of the other.

Go over in the White Wyandotte pens. Horrors! Here again is the coveted blue on a pen that the cockerel in which had these same disqualifying feathers on his shanks. This same cockerel went to the Boston show, but the judge there evidently had read up the standard requirements before going to the show, as he promptly disqualified him.

What will be the effect of such rank misjudging? Will it not tend to very materially lower the standard which has heretofore stamped the quality on the birds which won the blue at such shows as "Madison Square." Do you, Mr. Editor, or you, Mr. Nicholson, or you, dear readers, for one moment believe that placing the blue on the green shanked Barred Rocks or on the feather legged or bow legged White Wyandottes stamped them as the peers in their respective classes?

Yet the exhibitors who won these questionable honors prate before the whole world as their stock being the peer of all and the innocent poultrymen at large are none the wiser.

To summarize: It would be far better for the poultry shows in particular, and the poultrymen in general, if no catalogue of the show nor any other matter of any description whatever designating the exhibitors be issued until after all awards were made and the ribbons posted.

If the judges would pay more attention to the specimens on which they were to pass and less to the catalogues to ascertain whose birds they were passing on, fewer green, willow and mottled shanked Barred Rocks and fewer feather legged and knock kneed White Wyandottes would be accorded the merit that they received at "Madison Square, 1905," show."

The ground hog saw his shadow; I must go and shovel snow.

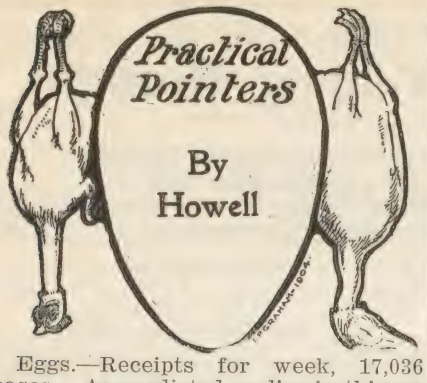
THE INTERNATIONAL BANTAM BREEDERS' CLUB.

The International Bantam Breeders' club met on January 27th at the Coliseum during the Chicago show. At this exhibition the club offered several silver cups and a large number of cash specials to members, both of which drew out a highly meritorious class of Bantams. At the annual meeting of the club, Mr. E. J. W. Dietz, Downers Grove, Ill., was elected president, and Frank W. Radford, Oshkosh, Wis., was elected secretary and treasurer. The next meeting of the club will be held with the Chicago show during th last week in January, 1906.

The International Bantam Breeders' Club is organized for the purpose of encouraging the breeding and exhibiting of all varieties of Bantams. At the Club show a handsome array of special prizes are offered, and in each state where there are ten members a silver cup is offered by the club,at such show as the members in that state may select. An active campaign has been begun by the secretary in securing members for this club, and every one interested in the little birds and their advancement should write him for complete information and application blanks. The initiation fees and first year's dues are $2, payable in advance.



Any breeder who joins this club will not only benefit himself directly, but will make it possible for the club to interest others in the breeding of Bantams. This will of course be an indirect benefit to all. You will be conferring a favor upon the secretary and the club if you send the names of other breeders of Bantams who would like to receive full information when you send in your own application.

Eggs.—Receipts for week, 17,036 cases. As predicted earlier in this report, prices have steadily risen under the influence of the steady cold, which precludes any increase in the supply, equalling those of 1904, and seventeen cents a dozen higher than the year of 1903. The effect of unseasonable prices is to discourage a liberal family use. We quote: Nearby fancy selected white, 39c per dozen; choice grades, not equal to first quotation, 37 to 38c.; fancy mixed, 36 to 37c.; western close graded fancy, 35c.; average shipments, 33 to 34c.; Kentucky, 30 to 35c.; Tennessee and other southern, 29 to 35c.; refrigerator, 27 to 30c.; dirty eggs, 27 to 30c.; cracked, 25 to 26c.

Live poultry.—Receipts, 22 cars. We quote: Fowls, western, 14c per lb.; chickens, western, 11½c.; turkeys, 15c.; ducks, 70 to 80c. per pair; geese, $1.37 to $1.62 per pair.

Dressed Poultry.—Receipts 13,000 pkgs. The days are getting longer and the old hen will claim the attention of the feeder later in the day, an extra hour being added to the program, during which employment must be added to the daily routine. A shorter night will mean a shorter ration of corn, and more "light stuff."

The vicissitudes of animal and bird life during a severe winter like the present, brings to notice many phases of their habits and conditions out of the ordinary.

Down in the forests of Virginia the railroads, with an eye to future traveling business with the sportsman, is scattering grain in sheltered spots, to which points the starving game birds flock by thousands.

Here in Long Island waters, the ice reaches for miles out in the ocean, the wild fowl are flocking to farm yards and living with the fowls as if domesticated.

In one of the valleys of far-off Montana, a herd of thousands of sheep left by death without the guiding and controlling hand of a herder to direct their movements, were unable to find forage and fast falling prey to wolves.

These instances stand out plainly on nature's blackboard, realistic lessons to the thinking man.

They tell him that nature at best provides barely enough to sustain life through the winter, and sometimes ails to do that.

Therefore, if one wishes to produce eggs during the unnatural period, run a winter dairy or fatten a carcass, he must supply the deficiency. In a year like this nature supplies a lot of crisp and invigorating material for the lungs, but very little for the stomach.

An egg can be propogated only after the bodily wants are supplied, if the flock is housed comfortably, but one-half the food will be necessary to supply the bodily wants, hence it is more economical as well as more profitable, to feed well and house well.

Beef scrap is universally recognized as a poultry food, and a good egg producer, but don't allow yourself to feed the kind of scrap that attracts the attention of the board of health by its smell. If you do, a similar odor will be manifest in the eggs produced upon it, causing a lot of trouble to the middleman and making a lot of explanation necessary to convince his customers he hasn't been selling them storage eggs.

Just as I expected, those eggs sent to the young ladies' seminary did not prove to be the hatching kind, and I am blamed for it because the hens proved to be bachelor hens, and the young ladies lost their money and practical lessons on rearing chickens, together with dreams of fried chicken. Oh, well, it's a long time before vacation and something better may be in store for them.

F. Grenier, the veteran capon raiser and bee man of western New York state,gives a very simple and effective remedy for crop bound, in the Tribune Farmer. It is "to fill the crop with warm water by means of a fountain syringe; then after working the mass until the crop becomes pliable, hold the fowl head down and most of it will pass from the mouth with the water. Repeat if the first application is unsuccessful." This is safer than opening the crop and worth a trial.

BARRED ROCK SPECIALS.

The committee chosen by the American Plymouth Rock Club to solicit cash specials for the next meeting of the club to be held at Madison Square Garden, New York, 1906, report that they are well satisfied with the subscription up to date, considering the number they have heard from; but if all interested would send in their subscriptions attheir earliest convenience it would facilitate matters exceedingly. In order to assist the committee in selecting judges, they would like to hear from all probable exhibitors an expression of opinion in regards to the same. Will all interested write to C. H. Latham, sec'y, Lancaster, Mass., their preference for judge?

Brooks and Malden Sts., -- Worcester, Mass.

Pretty cold weather for setting hens. If the nest box is lined with several thicknesses of newspapers, then filled in with six inches of dry saw dust or ashes, and a nest made of soft fine hay, Biddy will do pretty well. If set in a very cold place, fit another box on top, with some inch augur holes for ventilation.

It is best to set several hens at the same time on the seventh day test. Remove infertile eggs. If there are many infertile ones, distribute the fertile ones to the hens so each will have the usual nest number, as far as they will go. There will be a chance, probably, to give one or more of the hens a new start with fresh eggs.

Handle the setting hens gently, so that they will understand you intend no harm to them. The maternal instinct with a setting hen is such that she gets fighting mad when interfered with. She is following nature's laws, and should be encouraged. She gives a marvelous example of patience and perseverance. If you have incubators and don't want the hens to set, it is no excuse for severe or inhuman methods in breaking them up.

It is very important when early settings are made to secure eggs from the best hens, as the early chicks are the ones generally that win the prizes.

Don't imagine anyone can set a hen. The hen has ideas of her own. Gentle treatment will accomplish more than cruelty. Some hens will readily take to a nest in a new location. Others have a fondness for the nest they have been laying in that is difficult to overcome. Remember a hen that is not quite ready to sit will, if persisted in making her sit, do like the Irishman—he "sit standing."

Remember that sunshine for the young chicks is a health promoter. There are many ways that the early broods can be protected from the cold winds, and at the same time get the benefit of all the sunshine. A small low box with glass top; a hot bed sash, arranged the same as for a hot bed, except that the slope at the lower end should come down within 4 inches of the floor, makes a good outside run from a brood coop.

Sheds open only on the south side are ideal places to keeps some early brood coops. Six feet deep is enough for the sheds. Muslin may be arranged on screens to fit in the open end of the shed when the elements make it necessary.

Early broods are considerable trouble, compared with those that come during favorable spring time—but it is always a good investment. The humane poultryman will always be a good "ways and means" committee to make his early birds comfortable.

PRAISE FOR THE DORKING FOWL.

Editor American Fancier:

I note in the American Fancier of date Feb. 4th, Mr. Geo. B. Inches' article on Dorkings and your comment thereon, and can heartily agree with all the praise given this breed. As a breeder of many years' standing I can also speak of the growing demand for Dorkings, especially in the South and West. In a little over a year I have sent over a dozen shipments to the southern states, and many to the extreme West and Northwest, where I hear no complaints of their suffering from the climate. It would have taken a pretty big plant to have supplied the demand as indicated by the inquiries received in the late year. The demand is much larger for birds for home use and for cross breeding for market purposes than for show birds, which goes to prove that people recognize the value of the Dorking for home use or for a market fowl. I find a good market for old culls in my own town with people who have found, in the scarcity and high price of the Thanksgiving turkey, how well a large breasted, big juicy Dorking will take its place. The lack of Dorkings at the shows is due to the fact that they are almost totally ignored by managers in the distribution of special premiums, and most of us are not financially able to risk our birds in midwinter, pay all expenses, with a string attached to the prize money and have them receive bare mention in the reports. I agree with Mr. Inches that their egg producing qualities are quite good enough for the average person. When my egg record shows a pen of 13 White Dorkings giving me through November, December and January from two to seven eggs a day, while in the same house having same care and treatment,a pen of 13 of a much boomed egg laying breed has given me scarcely an egg in that time. This is not to advertise my birds, as I have nothing to sell at present and shall set all my eggs myself until late in the season to try and supply the demand for stock.

HERALD SQUARE SHOW FINANCIAL STATEMENT.

Editor American Fancier:

I herewith send you for the consideration of your readers a statement of our balance sheet of the late Herald Square show. I do this in order to inform the exhibitors of the exact condition of our financial affairs, as follows:

Judges	$ 346.95
Advertising and printing	2,174.67
Wages	682.01
Coop rent	1,273.60
Prize ribbons	241.10
Hall rent	1,500.00
Carpenter, etc.	211.92
Feed	124.50
Sawdust	31.20
Expenses	$6,585.95
Income	6,329.52
Minus	$256.43

We are confident that the Herald Square show will be a continued yearly feature; the show to be held the week before Thanksgiving. Experience has taught the management to curtail expenses and also to increase the income. We are glad to state that the greater majority of exhibitors appreciated our untiring efforts to make the Herald Square show a success from fanciers as well as from the standpoint of the public. It is also pleasing to learn that a vast number of exhibitors were greatly pleased with their representation and have urged us to repeat our show annually. We are confident that our next exhibition will receive the hearty co-operation of the fanciers and the patronage of the public. After due examination of affairs we are compelled to admit some miscalculations; for instance in the matter of entry fees, which should have been $2.00 instead of $1.00, and also the price of admission, which should have been 50c. from the beginning, as it was conceded by all to be a high class,clean and well cooped exhibition. Considering these facts, the management is compelled to ask the indulgence of those exhibitors who were awarded prizes to permit us to defer the payment of those awards until after the next exhibition. We will without doubt then be enabled to pay the awards of both shows at the same time. Thanking the exhibitors for the support of our first show and confident of a continuance of their patronage, we beg to remain,

C. E. GAUSS, Secretary.

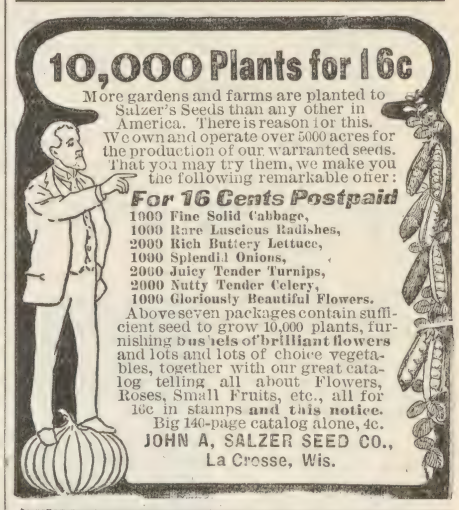
POULTRY SHOW AT GLOVERSVILLE, N. Y.

At a meeting of the Fulton County Poultry and Pet Stock club, held at the Kingsborough hotel, Gloversville, last night, it was decided to hold a show in Odd Fellows' hall on November 20 to 25 next. The judges will be F. B. immer, of Gloversville, J. H. Drevenstedt, of this city, W. J. Stanton, of New York and Joseph A. Spraker, of Sprakers, all of whom are men of much experience and well known in the poultry world. This will be the first poultry show held in Gloversville in a good many years and no doubt the event will be somewhat of a novelty for most of the residents of Gloversville.

A committee was appointed to make plans and perfect arrangements for the show and to recommend the various committees. Nine new members were admitted into the club, which makes the total membership at present over one hundred. It was stated that the club was in a flourishing condition financially. The next meeting will be held at the Kolaneka on March 13.—Johnstown Daily Republican.



THE POLISH CLUB MEETING.

Editor American Fancier:

I notice in American Fancier of January 14, your remarks in relation to Am. Polish Club meeting. I regret as much as any person can that there were not more in attendance, and when this meeting was called to meet at New York it was understood by our secretary and myself that the association would offer special inducements for the Polish breed, but the first thing they did was to lower the prizes and did not offer any specials for this particular class. I am as enthusiastic in the raising of White Crested Black Polish, I think, as Mr. Kirschler. At Pan-American I had four birds in each class, also at Syracuse and New York, 1903; at Boston, 1903; at Rochester, 1904, four birds in each class and at World's Fair, St. Louis, 1904, three birds in each class. At Boston, 1903, we had a club meeting; at Chicago, 1904, we had another, and Mr. Kirschler was not at either of these meetings, and I have never known of his showing only at Newark and New York. The first and third cock at Madison Square last week were birds I raised and sold and I think some of the others. The New York people of late have not shown much interest in Polish. Only three years ago they made young and old compete in one class. I will give the American Fancier credit for speaking a good word for the Polish breed, but quite a few of the poultry papers, especially in the west, give them but little if any notice. I have bred W. C. B. Polish for many years and of late, on account of poor health and other excuses I have only shown once in each year, but at the same time would like to see the breed kept up to a high standard, but at the same time the poultry press should give them as much notice as they do to other old breeds of less notoriety. It was understood between our secretary, vice president and myself that there would be no club meeting at New York.

RHODE ISLAND RED CLUB OF AMERICA.

The seventh annual meeting of the Rhode Island Red Club of America was held at the Boston show, Jan. 19, 1905. There were nearly one hundred members in attendance and as usual a large amount of enthusiasm was manifested.

The secretary's report showed a gain of one hundred and forty-three members since the last meeting—a gain of nearly 100 per cent. The present membership reaches three hundred and twenty-eight. During the past year the club has offered $100 in cash prizes at St. Louis, $60 cash and a $25 trophy at Boston, besides over three hundred special club ribbons, placed among the representative shows from Maine to California.

Of the three thousand copies of the club catalogue, "Red Hen Tales," which were issued, twenty-four hundred copies have been sent out to those requesting them. Requests for copies have come from every state in the union, from various parts of Canada, from South America, Germany, England and Australia.

After accepting the secretary's report, the club expressed in a very hearty way its thanks to Hon C. M. Bryant for his efforts in securing the admission of the Single Comb Reds at Rochester.

The secretary was authorized to offer cups to be competed for by members only, in the various states where there are ten members, the honorary vice president for the state to be consulted about the place where the cup shall be offered.

All the 1904 officers were re-elected by acclamation with the exception of the vice president from Kansas, Dr. J. Martin, whose resignation was received and accepted, and in his place, William Munroe, Florence, Kansas, was elected.

Paragraph two of section eleven of the by-laws was changed to read: Members six months or more in arrears shall be dropped from the membership roll, after having been duly notified by the secretary.

The advisability of holding the annual meeting of the club at some place other than Boston was discussed, and the general feeling was that if it could be made possible to have a meeting in the west, which would be representative, it would be advisable. About 75 per cent. of membership is now in New England, but the west is giving us a great many new members. The prominent breeders have heretofore been in the east, but we now have good Reds in nearly every state in the Union.

It was thought best to encourage local sections of the club to hold meetings in each state where cups are offered.

The executive committee was instructed to issue a new catalogue and the sense of the meeting was that every member should make every possible effort to swell the membership roll, as well as the advertising pages. The 1904 catalogue has proved a very valuable advertising medium, since it reaches the most desirable class. The co-operation of every earnest breeder of Reds is solicited.

W. J. DRISKO,
Secretary and Treasurer.

ROSE COMB BUFF LEGHORNS AS WINTER LAYERS.

This question has been ask me so many times during the past few years that I have concluded to give my practical experience I have had the last thirteen years in the poultry periodicals with the Rose Comb Buff Leghorns and Single Comb Buff Leghorns. Practical experience teaches us that the Mediterranean class are considered as good, if not better layers than any other fowl which we have to-day. The Rose Comb Buffs and Single Comb varieties have greater vitality than the sister varieties and hence can be raised easier and will mature quicker. This fact is probably due to the fresh blood in the new strain. Hence the Rose Comb Buff Leghorns are classed one of the greatest layers of the day, not only in the summer, but in the coldest winter these wonderful egg machines are busy producing eggs when the temperature is far below zero. These everlasting Leghorns are working wonders. The Rose Comb Buff Leghorns have some good qualities that the Single Combs do not possess, with their beautiful rose combs, which are frost-proof against the severest winter weather. You will not find any frozen combs in the morning upon entering your poultry house, and have Jack Frost mar the beauty of your best birds, and perhaps stop them from laying just at the time when eggs are at a premium and hard to get, and perhaps it will take months before they will again be in condition. Not so with the Rose Comb Buffs. In them we have an ideal fowl for our coldest climate and one of the most profitable fowls to breed. Being a rapid grower and a beautiful fowl for dressing, either for the table or market, with their golden flesh, they are considered by many of my customers one of the youngest fowls to begin laying, having received eggs from pullets where they have free range, at the age of 4½ months old and six months. They begin in earnest and keep at it; even during the moult I have had them lay a few eggs. Where can you find a grander fowl, with the brilliant rose comb and delicate buff plumage, which harmonizes with any surroundings, either for the farmer or the city plot. I am fully satisfied, after breeding the Rose Comb Buffs for years, that they are the most profitable fowl under any circumstances. The cost of keeping the Buff Leghorns is a great deal less than any other breed, for, while the others moult and mope and set, the Rose Combs are doing business. They are a non-setting variety and lose no time in the nest. There will be a great demand for these beauties when they are more extensively known. F. B. ZWICK.

THAT POLISH CLUB MEETING.

Editor American Fancier: My attention has just been called to an article appearing in a recent issue of your paper, in which you attack the Polish club for the poor showing it made at New York. Now, in view of the remarks you have made in regard to our club, and in justice to our members, and all others concerned, I believe the true facts in the matter should be made known. It was with extreme regret that I was unable to attend the meeting, but owing to a business transaction, it was simply impossible for me to attend the same, and our president, owing to advanced age and poor health, wrote me that he would be unable to make the trip to New York. As soon as I found it would be impossible for me to be present at the meeting, I immediately sent my report to Mr. R. Oke, of London, Canada, whom my friend, William McNeil, informed me, would be present at the New York show, and asked him to kindly act as secretary in my absence. Mr. Oke received my letter, while busy judging at New York, and glanced over the same in haste. He concluded that it was just the minutes of the last meeting, which I was placing in the hands of the members, and by purely an oversight did not notice my personal request for him to act as secretary in my absence, which he would gladly have done had he known of it at the time. He failed to notice same until on his way home. Now, we believe it is due to the members and all others concerned that they should know the chief reason why the Polish club meeting and Polish exhibit was a failure at New York, and why the majority of the breeders stayed away. The main reason for this is as follows: Page 14 of the New York Premium List reads, $3 1st and $1.50 2d, with a $2 entry fee. There you have it in a nutshell. This had the effect of keeping a number of prominent Polish breeders from exhibiting their stock at this show, and the breeders that did show ought to be congratulated, for it takes nerve to pay a $2 entry fee when only a $3 1st and a $1.50 2d are offered in return, when all other varieties have a $5 1st and a $2 2d in return for their $2 entry fee. Whether this was an error or not, we are unable to say, but be that as it may, it was there just the same, and attention should have been called to the matter. Now I have endeavored to give you the true facts in the case, and the public may judge for themselves.

A VETERAN SILVER WYANDOTTE FANCIER'S FAREWELL.

Editor American Fancier:

It is with a sad heart, a tear dimmed eye and a trembling hand, we state to you we are compelled to give up our idols, the Silver Wyandotte, for a while at least, on account of the illness of Mrs. Samson. We are to leave our home and seek a lower altitude. For the past twenty years we have studied and labored both night and day to make our strain second to none in the world, and how well we have succeeded is shown by our show record, both by ourselves and patrons. Our birds have captured the blue ribbons in the leading shows from ocean to ocean. In establishing our strain, the price of a bird was not considered if the required size, shape and lacing was there, and at this date we could have taken long prices for what birds we had, but simply gave them to parties that we believe and know will breed them to a high ideal. We did not look to the commercial side, but out of pure love for the breed, labored hard to bring them up to what our idea of a silver Wyandotte is.

After working all day in the store, many were the nights that we were out with our lantern until after midnight, looking after their comfort and supplying their needs. We do not want anyone to think this an ad., as we have not a chick to sell, nor will we have any eggs, nor have we mentioned to whom we gave the birds, (but if in the future we can shape ourselves so as to keep what we consider the "best on earth," the Silvers, we shall do so, and place an ad. in the best poultry paper on earth, The American Fancier, which does the business that shows no favors to friends, but cuts a clean swath and is not afraid to expose the deeds that are dark. As we look over the empty coops a sadness comes into our heart that is known only by one whose birds seem to be a part of his own being. We shall read the A. F. with deeper interest than ever, as we shall want to keep in touch with the boys. And as the reports of the shows appear, we shall want to know who gets the blue in the Silver aisles. With best wishes for all and malice to none, we are, fraternally yours, W. E. SAMSON,
Pleasant Mt., Pa., Feb. 10, '05.

We shall sell a limited number of eggs for $3.00 per 13 eggs.

Bustleton, Phila. Pa Jan. 30, 1905.

I am pleased to report the hatching of entire setting of eggs and the growth to maturity of entire lot of chickens, one cockerel I value at $50.00 (have refused an offer of $30.00 for him) and two of the pullets are superior birds, all of them are goods ones. will want more eggs in the spring. Yours truly, JOHN F. EISENHOWER.

So. Bethlehem, Pa. Feb. 3, 1905.

From the eggs purchased from you last spring I raised the first prize cockerel and first and second prize pullets at the Hagerstown Fair. Judge Drevenstedt pronounced the cockerel the best wing and tail he ever saw, he is the best colored bird I ever. Yours truly, WILLIAM EDGAR.

Smithtown Branch, N Y. Jan, 28, 1905.

From the setting of eggs purchased from you last spring I hatched 10 chickens, now have three fine cockerels and three nice pullets, good enough for any company, color of all is good, clear buff including tail and wings, expect to send for more eggs in the spring Yours truly, H. W. HALLOCK (Town Clerk.)

New Milford, Ohio, Feb. 3, 1905.

From the one setting of eggs hatched 6 chickens raised them all, Theo Hughes scored one of the cockerels 94½, one of the pullets 93 not bad for late June hatched chicks Yours truly, D. L. JONES.

Lawrence, Mass Feb. 7, 1905.

Eggs received from you last spring arrived in good condition, tested out two infertile the remaining all hatched and raised every one of them, they are all good color and am well pleased with them, they are the best I ever raised. Very truly yours, F. J. BORNEMAN.

Syracuse, N. Y. Jan. 27, 1905

Am pleased to report from the two settings of eggs purchased last season I hatched 24 chickens, among the lot is one pullet, had I had time would have sent to New York, she is the best pullet I have ever seen, will want more eggs in the spring. Very truly J. R. CLANEY.

Catlin, Ill. Jan. 28, 1905.

The eggs received from you were most satisfactory, raised four very nice birds, book my order for two settings if you will have them to spare in the spring. Very truly, JNO. E. ANDERSON.
